A false alarm of fire just after ten o'clock Tuesday night brought out crowds of people, and cost the city something for horse hire and wear and tear of fire department paraphernalia.

Sagamore S. F. E. Co., No. 2, has chosen Willard Sears as a trustee of the Firemen's Relief Association.

The best indication that Spring is really here, that has yet been brought to our notice, is the numerosity of arrivals of coal-vessels, five of which were coming up the river at one time on Tuesday.

Mr. Alfred J. Leavett of Hampton and Capt. E. J. Hobbs of the same place have been appointed light-keeper and assistant, at Boon Island.

Messrs. Howard, Kent and Young visited Manchester, Tuesday, to confer with Gov. Straw, Col. Arthur M. Eastman, and others, in reference to a celebration of the landing of the ocean cable the coming summer. Col. Eastman goes immediately to England and will notify Collector Howard of the probable time of arrival.

On Saturday the Portsmouth Sportsmen's Club had their annual shooting-match, and Mr. Charles W. Norton bringing down the whole number (five) of birds became the Champion of the Club for the ensuing year.

A Borrowed Umbrella.

[Boston Advertiser.]

A gentleman stepped into a drug-store at the corner of Clarendon street and Warren avenue on Saturday evening, leaving his umbrella in the doorway. Another "gentleman," whose place in society was evidently not of the ultra-refined stamp, was passing. The rain was pouring heavily, and the wind was blowing fiercely. The sight of the umbrella captivated the second gentleman. He would appropriate it. It was an old affair, not worth more than a dollar. He would borrow it; he did borrow it. He was in a hurry, and did not stop to ask any questions. He passed on, and crossed the street. He stepped briskly. The party who put the umbrella down came out, holding in one hand a vial and a piece of paper, which he was trying to read; with the other hand he reached out, without looking, to take his umbrella. He looked at the empty place; and opened the door and looked inside. Then he looked up the street. Then he put his vial in his pocket, buttoned up his coat, and started after that umbrella. He ran on tiptoe, with his fingers working nervously. The man with the umbrella was walking rapidly, but complacently, just at the outer edge of the sidewalk. Some cold fingers slipped down his neck just inside the coat collar, and he sat down. He sat down wrong, for his feet stayed on the sidewalk, and the rest of his person sat down outside of the sidewalk, where the water was about three inches deep. There were no compliments passed between the gentlemen about the state of the weather. The only thing the second gentleman said, was to look at that umbrella going off the other way.

Planting Fruit Trees.

[Cor. Country Gentleman.]

Just as soon as the frost is out of the ground, so that a man can dig the hole deep enough to receive the roots, and large enough to permit covering them well, is the time to set out trees. I generally put a pail of water on the earth, as I pack it about the roots, and I am not afraid that I will get it packed too hard. When I finish up on the top, I pack it down, and do not raise a high mound about the tree to run off all the water from the tree, that falls during the course of the summer. In five or six days after the trees are set, I take a look at them, and see if it is not necessary to pack the earth closer about the tree. I get the best varieties—the thriftiest and nicest trees—even if it does cost a little more. If there is a good nursery near by, I prefer getting my trees there, in order to see that proper care is taken not to cut off too many roots, even if it takes longer to dig them up. They must be set out as soon as possible, before the roots are dried. A little care in taking up and setting out would save thousands of trees and a large amount of money, that are now wasted every year.

Exeter on Railroad Aid.

The inhabitants of Exeter held a town meeting Monday to see what action the town would take in relation to aiding the construction of the Exeter and Salisbury Railroad. A motion was made to indefinitely postpone the article relating to the aid of the railroad, and on this motion speeches were made by N. G. Gilman, Colonel Eben F. Stone of Newburyport and John J. Bell, in favor of the proposed road, and by Hon. W. W. Stickney in opposition. A poll of the house on indefinite postponement showed 108 in the affirmative and 158 in the negative. Mr. J. Bell then offered a vote that the town exchange their bonds for a like amount of the bonds of the road, properly secured by mortgages, etc., and then moved that the whole subject be referred to a committee of five, to report at an adjournment. After debate the vote was passed and the committee was appointed, and the meeting, after voting $75 for the decoration of the soldiers' graves on Decoration Day, was adjourned to Tuesday week.

—A young lady bearing the name of Trotter is a candidate for office in Illinois. She ought to run ahead of her ticket.

—The Tichborne jurymen are indignant. They expected two guineas a day for services, but the treasury gave them only a guinea and a-half.

LAWS

OF THE

UNITED STATES

PASSED AT THE

FIRST SESSION OF THE FORTY-THIRD CONGRESS.

[RESOLUTION OF GENERAL NATURE—No. 2.]

JOINT RESOLUTION explanatory of resolution approved January 31, 1868, entitled "A resolution limiting contracts for stationery and other supplies in the executive departments to one year."

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the resolution approved January 31st, eighteen hundred and sixty-eight, entitled "A resolution limiting contracts for stationery and other supplies in the Executive Departments to one year," shall not be held, or construed, to apply to, or include, mail-bags, mail locks and keys, postal cards, postage stamps, newspaper wrappers, or stamped envelopes.

Approved, March 24, 1874.

[GENERAL NATURE—No. 12.]

AN ACT changing the times for holding certain district courts of the United States, for the State of Iowa.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That instead of the times now fixed by law, the terms of the district courts of the United States for the district of Iowa, to be held in the city of Keokuk and the city of Council Bluffs, shall commence at Keokuk on the third Tuesday of January and the third Tuesday of June, and at Council Bluffs on the fourth Monday of March and the fourth Monday of September, in each year.

SEC. 2. That all causes, processes, suits, and proceedings now pending or commenced for said terms of court, or hereafter to be commenced, shall be continued or returned in and to said courts at the several times herein specified.

Approved, February 9, 1874.

[GENERAL NATURE—No. 13.]

AN ACT to establish certain post-routes in the State of Arkansas.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following are hereby established as post-routes. From Little Rock, via Argenta, Reed's Landing, Eagle Landing, Wampoo, Plumbayou, Adamsburg, and Pastoria to Pine Bluff. From Pine Bluff, via Carson, Rob Roy, New Gascony, Green Back, Cooper's Landing, Williamette and Sarassa to Arkansas Post. From Watson Station on the Texas, Mississippi River and Northwestern Rail Road, to Red Fork on the Arkansas River. From Bath Station, on the Texas, Mississippi River and Northwestern Railroad, to South Bend on the Arkansas River.

Approved, February 27, 1874.

[GENERAL NATURE—No 14.]

AN ACT creating an additional land district in the Territory of New Mexico.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That all that portion of the Territory of New Mexico lying south of the principal base line of said Territory shall constitute a separate land district, to be called the La Messilla land district, the office of which shall be located at such place in said district as the President of the United States may direct, which may be changed from time to time as the public interest may require.

SEC. 2. That the President shall appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, a register and receiver of public moneys for said district, and said officers shall reside in the place where said land-office is located, and they shall have the same powers, perform the same duties, and receive the same emoluments as are or may be prescribed by law in relation to land offices of the United States in other Territories.

Approved, March 3, 1874.

[GENERAL NATURE—No. 15.]

AN ACT to amend the fifteenth section of an act approved June eighth, eighteen hundred and seventy-two, entitled "An act to revise, consolidate and amend the statutes relating to the Post Office Department."

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That section fifteen of the act "to revise, consolidate and amend the statutes relating to the Post Office Department," approved June eighth, eighteen hundred and seventy-two, be amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 15. That before entering upon the duties, and before they shall receive any salary, the Postmaster General, and all persons employed in the postal service, shall respectively take and subscribe before some magistrate or other competent officer authorized to administer oaths by the laws of the United States or of any State or Territory, the following oath or affirmation:

"'I, A. B. do solemnly swear (or affirm, as the case may be,) that I will faithfully perform all the duties required of me and abstain from everything forbidden by the laws in relation to the establishment of post-offices and post-roads within the United States; and that I will honestly and truly account for and pay over any money belonging to the said United States which may come into my possession or control; and I also further swear (or affirm) that I will support the Constitution of the United States, so help me God.'

And this oath or affirmation may be taken before any officer, civil or military holding a commission under the United States, and such officer is hereby authorized to administer and certify such oath or affirmation."

Approved March 5, 1874.

[GENERAL NATURE—No. 17.]

AN ACT to amend the act entitled "An act to prevent the extermination of fur-bearing animals in Alaska, approved July first, eighteen hundred and seventy.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the act entitled "An act to prevent the extermination of fur-bearing animals in Alaska," approved July first, eighteen hundred and seventy, is hereby amended so as to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury, and he is hereby authorized, to designate the months in which fur-seals may be taken for their skins on the islands of Saint Paul and Saint George, in Alaska, and in the waters adjacent thereto, and the number to be taken on or about each island respectively.

Approved, March 24, 1874.

[GENERAL NATURE—No. 18.]

AN ACT to establish bonded warehouses for the storing and cleansing of rice intended for exportation.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That from and after the passage of this act importers' bonded warehouses, to be used for the storage and cleansing of imported rice intended for exportation to foreign countries, may be established at any port of entry in the United States, under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

Approved, March 24, 1874.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

This compound of the vegetable alteratives, Sarsaparilla, Dock, Stillingia and Mandrake with the Iodides of Potassium and Iron makes a most effectual cure of a series of complaints which are very prevalent and afflicting. It purifies the blood, purges out the lurking humors in the system that undermine health and settle into troublesome disorders. Eruptions of the skin are the appearance on the surface of humors that should be expelled from the blood. Internal derangements are the determination of these same humors to some internal organ, or organs, whose action they derange, and whose substance they disease and destroy. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA expels these humors from the blood. When they are gone, the disorders they produce disappear, such as Ulcerations of the Liver, Stomach, Kidney, Lungs, Eruptions and Eruptive Diseases of the Skin, St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Ulcers and Sores, Rheumatism and Neuralgia, Pain in the Bones, Side and Head, Female Weakness, Sterility, Leuchorrhœa arising from internal ulceration and uterine disease, Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Emaciation and General Debility. With their departure, health returns.

'73 REUNION.

THE "HISTORY OF THE RETURN OF THE SONS & DAUGHTERS OF PORTSMOUTH, JULY, 1873," is just published. It contains 96 pages, octavo, and is a thorough detail of everything relating to the three Festal Days,

The Reunion, July 4th,
High School Reunion, 5th,
The Praise Meeting, 6th;

and containing a

Verbatim Report

of every speech that was uttered at the Tent on the 4th and 5th, besides giving a full report of all the Reunion preliminary movements in Portsmouth, Boston and New York. Much of the matter of this work has never yet appeared in any form, and we think it will prove interesting to all who participated in the Three Days' Jubilee.

The work is for sale at the Chronicle Office, J. H. Foster's Book Store, and Wm. E. Preston's.

WISTAR'S BALSAM

OF

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,
For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs
No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,
After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.
No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.
All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.
TESTIMONIALS.
"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."
"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."
"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

What Happened to the Dewberrys.

Mrs. Lewberry, wife of James Dewberry, is an exceedingly absent-minded woman, so absent-minded that she sometimes forgets to sew on her husband's buttons and mend his socks, though, as Mr. Dewberry savagely remarks (brute that he is!) she never seems to forget when she ought to have a new bonnet or gown, or thinks she ought when he don't, for Mr. D. is a man who does not approve of too much dress for women.

They would get along splendidly, however, were it not for Mrs. Dewberry's little habit of forgetfulness, and the additional fact that she is somewhat deaf.

But just let me tell you what happened at the residence of the Dewberrys the other night, and I feel sure you will sympathize not only with Mr. Dewberry but the unfortunate Mrs. Dewberry herself.

Like all partially deaf people, Mrs. Dewberry is forever laboring under the delusion that she hears all descriptions of noises, and happening to wake up last Thursday night about twelve o'clock, became convinced, from sundry imaginary sounds, that some one was breaking into the house. She sat up in bed and listened with both her ears, one of which was a little more deaf than the other, and was sure that some one was forcing an entrance through the basement window. She was dreadfully frightened; visions of masked robbers passed through her head. So, seizing her sleeping husband by the arm, she shook him violently, screaming:

"James! James! Wake up, I say. There's robbers breaking in!"

"What's that?" exclaimed Mr. Dewberry starting up and rubbing his astonished eyes.

"There's a band of masked robbers getting in at the basement window!" answered Mrs. Dewberry in great excitement.

"Masked robbers!" shouted her husband; "thunder and lightning!" and with that he sprang out of bed and, snatching the night lamp, dashed down stairs, clad only in his robe de nuit.

Whereupon Mrs. D., instead of hanging over the balustrades to look after her husband, as any other woman would have done, locked the door, and, jumping into bed, covered herself, head and all, in the blankets; and, as her husband did not come back as soon as she expected, forgot all about him and fell asleep. Meanwhile Mr. Dewberry, in search of the robbers, having armed himself with his cane, crept softly down the basement stairs and peeped cautiously through the key-hole of the dining-room door, fully expecting to find the room filled with masked men making off with the silver. But no, the apartment was empty; and though he searched every room and listened at every window and door he could find no trace of robbers. They might be down-stairs feasting on the contents of the larder; he had heard of such things, and acting on this suggestion he explored the cellar also, notwithstanding the cold bricks nearly froze his bare feet. But there was no one in the cellar either, unless they were secreted in the coal-bin, and Mr. Dewberry, who, when he did a thing always did it well, mounted up on the edge of the bin, and, lamp in hand, peered down into its grimy depths. Just as he had decided that there was naught but coal in the, bin, a gust of wind from the cellar window blew out his light, and at the same instant Mr. Dewberry lest his balance and fell, head-first, into the coal-bin. It is unnecessary to state what he said when he found himself in that boastly coal-bin—he called it—but he certainly did look rather peculiar when, after procuring another light from the kitchen, he gained his bedroom door with his night-shirt, face, and hands blackened with coal-dust.

To his surprise he found the door locked. He rapped on it with his knuckles, and pounded on it with his feet, but Mrs. Dewberry had gone to sleep with her deafest ear uppermost, and not a sound disturbed her peaceful rest.

"Confound the woman! what am I to do?" thought the victimized Dewberry, shivering with the cold. He'd not stay there all night—that he was determined. So he shouted and banged and shook the door until Mrs. Dewberry was aroused at last, and called out in a sleepy voice, "who's there?"

"Who's there, indeed!" shouted the irate Mr. D.; "why, your husband, woman! And why, in the name of goodness, don't you unlock this door?"

"I haven't locked the door; no such thing," vociferated Mrs. Dewberry, who had of course entirely forgotten the circumstance; "and you ain't my husband either," she continued; "I don't believe a word of it."

"Not your husband?" cried Mr. Dewberry; "what next, I wonder? I am your husband. Didn't you send me to look for robbers that were not there, confound it all?"

"Oh! yes," answered Mrs. D.; suddenly remembering all about it. "Wait a moment, Jim, and I'll let you in;" and Mrs. Dewberry got out of bed and began groping her way across the floor. There being no light in the room she hadn't gone half a yard before she put her foot into a small bath-tub that Mr. D. had very carelessly left full of water before retiring.

"Bless me!" cried Mrs. Dewberry, "what is that?" and she turned suddenly round, only to catch her foot in the drugget and come splashing down, with both hands in the water.

"What in thunder are you at?" demanded Mr. Dewberry, outside the door. "Do you mean to let me in to-night?"

"Do be patient," gasped Mrs. D.; "I'm coming as soon as I get out of this sea of water, whatever it is."

"Sea of water," repeated Mr. D.; "why, the woman must be dreaming yet! Will you wake up?" and he began pounding and knocking again, with redoubled vigor.

"I'm coming, I tell you," screamed Mrs. D.; and feeling around the wall she soon put her hand on the handle of the closet door, which supposing it to be the room door, she unlocked and opened wide. But as Mr. Dewberry was not in the closet he did not come out, and Mrs. D. perceived nothing but inky blackness. Whereupon she slammed the door to, and, uttering a fearful scream, immediately crawled under the bed and went into hysterics.

By this time Mr. Dewberry had come to the conclusion that the robbers were in his wife's room; so, rushing down stairs, he tore open the front door, and ran out on the pavement, screaming murder! fire! thieves! and everything else he could think of, at the top of his voice. A policeman happening along, Mr. D. collared him at once, and, telling him an incoherent story of robbers killing his wife, frantically led the way to his bedroom door, where the hysterical sobs of Mrs. D. were pitiful to hear.

A few well directed blows from the policeman's club soon broke open the door and Mr. Dewberry rushed in.

"Where are you, Susan?" he demanded, staring round the room.

"Here, James," answered Mrs. D. poking her nightcapped head from under the bed, and diving back with a scream as soon as she caught sight of the policeman and sootbegrimmed Dewberry.

"Well," said the policeman, in disgust, "I don't see your robber. You'd better come down and lock your door, sir," and once more the shivering Dewberry descended the stairs.

By this time the cries of "Fire," had brought two engines to the spot, and when Mr. Dewberry appeared at his door with his light the foreman, mistaking it for the flames, instantly turned full force of his hose directly at the person of poor Mr. D., and before the policeman could explain, Mr. D. was swept off his feet and doused from head to foot.

In pity I will draw the curtain over the rest of that wretched night; but the last I heard of Mr. James Dewberry he was sick abed with an awful cold, and I don't wonder at it.

During a hurricane, Monday, off the southwest coast of Ireland, the 1866 cable ceased working. The fault is reported to be about twenty-five miles from Valencia, and consequently in shallow water. There are still two cables in good working order.

In the United States senate, Tuesday, Ex-Senator Sumner's civil rights bill was reported back favorably from the judiciary committee. In the house of representatives the currency bill was taken up, and the motion to substitute the senate bill having been withdrawn, Mr. E. R. Hoar of Massachusetts offered an amendment to the house bill, proposing a resumption of specie payments, and it was rejected. The house bill was then passed, and a motion carried to go to the Speaker's table and take up the senate bill, which was also passed, 140 to 102.

George Crow, popularly supposed to be a son of "Old Jim Crow," and Matt. Morgan, both colored men, got into a fight in Cincinnati and Crow stabbed Morgan fatally. Both were cripples, Matt. Morgan having lost both legs in the war of the rebellion.

The Massachusetts legislature didn't choose a Senator, Wednesday. Dawes had 92 votes, Curtis 71, Hoar 59, Adams 28, Banks 7, Washburn 5, Sanford 4, and Whittier 1.

An explosion occurred on the 15th in a coal mine at Durkinfield, Lancashire, England. A large number of miners were killed and injured, many of the latter being terribly burned.

The Cheshire Railroad bridge over Cold River, in Walpole, was burned Tuesday afternoon. It was a covered bridge, 148 feet long, and recently built.

How Belles Dress in Texas.

[Baltimore American.]

Texas ladies are fully up to the average of their sex. In the item of dress, both as to quality, material, trimmings, laces, and all the little et ceteras that go to make up a lady's toilet, they are evidently as expensive to husbands and fathers as their sisters at the North, and are equally as profuse in the display of fine jewelry, diamonds, chains, bracelets, etc. The dress of a young lady who rode with a gossiping editor through the Texas wilds was a black silk, closely fitting, with sprays of flowers, worked with black beads across the breast and slightly over the shoulders. Her dress was close up to the throat, and a stiff white standing-collar, turned down at the point, was enriched by a blue silk scarf worn precisely as a gentleman wears a cravat, tied in a bow in front. This gave to her fine form an exquisite finish, while her clear complexion and the healthy bloom on her cheeks were sufficient to soften the heart of an anchorite.

Cincinnati Times-Currants.

There's a two-years' married man in Missouri boasting about three of a kind. A little more enterprise would have given him a full hand.

"A new bustle, highly approved, is made of cork."—Jennie June. Conceive the unfortunate situation of that bustled woman if she should fall into the water!

An engineer on the Midland Railroad stopped his train just in time to prevent running over a rag baby. This was on the 1st of April, and some of his remarks on the subject still linger round the spot, they were so numerous and so forcible.

The Cleveland Leader says that the infatuation of the democrats there over their victory is so complete that any attempt to draw a line between it and insanity would result in failure. As Adam would remark under like circumstances, "the woman did it."

It is a touching story of the minister who returned from an Eastern visit and found his wife singing in a saloon. With tears streaming down his furrowed cheeks, he begged her to promise him then and there, by the memory of their marriage vows, and in the sight of heaven, that she never would touch another drop of the hellish liquor. And now the poor man wears a wig and two false teeth.

Ladies' Logic.

[Chambers' Journal.]

In the talk of some ladies who move in a tolerably good position, but who have been imperfectly educated, I have heard droll specimens of illogical reasoning. The following are two instances:

A married lady with a family, who lived in a villa in the exterior environs of London, was asked why she was at the expense of keeping a cow, seeing that it would be surely much cheaper to buy milk for the household.

"Well," said she in reply, "we keep a cow because we have a field quite at hand, which answers very nicely."

"But," was the rejoinder, "why do you rent the field?"

The answer was, "Because you know, we have got the cow!"

The other instance occurred in my young days at Peebles. A lady in reduced circumstances mentioned to a friend that she had just arranged to rent a house belonging to a baker in the town. The friend was somewhat surprised at the announcement, considering the lady's circumstances, and asked if the expense would not be too much for her.

"Oh, not at all," was the answer; "we'll take bread for the rent!"

A Civilized Sheep.

The British emigrant ship "Surat" was recently wrecked on the coast of New Zealand, and the French steam sloop-of-war "Vire," which happened to be in a New Zealand port at the time, on receipt of the news at once preceeded to the wreck to render assistance. A correspondent of the Otago Guardian went around in the steamer, and gives that paper the following account of a highly educated sheep he saw there:

On board the "Vire" there is a sheep of the male faculty who drinks brandy and chews tobacco. This cultivated animal, who rejoices in the name of "Robert le Diable," was originally brought on board to serve as cooked mutton for the ship's company; but developing talents of a high order, and a taste for human society, did not meet his anticipated fate. On the contrary he was made a pet of by the sailors, and now is rather a more important personage than the captain, it being his rule to go exactly where he likes, and to get out of the way for no one. The word was "passed forward" for Robert, and he came into the wardroom in a condescending kind of way. There he preceeded to take in "a confusion of mixed drinks" that would have knocked over a human toper in no time. First, he had various liquors, from vermouth to absinthe, on lumps of sugar, which he quite winked over with enjoyment. Then he was given brandy in a soup-plate, as when wineglasses were invented it was not thought that sheep would drink, and he lapped this up greedily and asked for more. But there being no more for him, he took a quid of tobacco and went away chewing—the cud perhaps. On another occasion, he came to the wardroom without an invitation whilst I was writing there alone. Putting his head in the door, and seeing no one in uniform, he looked me carefully over, and deciding, I suppose, that, as a civilian, I had no right to interfere with his movements, he proceeded in a leisurely manner to open the sideboard, and make a dejeuner not a la fourchette. He had some loaf-sugar and some cheese, some butter and a radish, a little Wstershire sauce, and a few pieces of bread, when, suddenly remembering that he was thirsty, he put his fore-trotters on the top of the sideboard, and started fair to uncork the brandy. Fearing a suspicion of complicity in his depredations, at this point I yelled for the steward, who ran in, and Robert retired under a protest, evidently not thinking that the rules of the French service permitted of his being kicked out by anyone under the rank of a lieutenant.

An Illicit Still in Sing Sing.

John Short, the prisoner who ran a whiskey still in Sing Sing prison, says he earned fifty dollars per day with the original still, which he worked with some small lamps for a whole year, until blown on by another convict to whom he refused credit. Of course an officer of the prison was a partner. At the same time they made large profits on smuggled groceries, tobacco and cigars, estimated at one thousand per cent. The keeper who was in with him was able to build a four-story house with his share. Subsequently a small copper still and some worms were smuggled into the prison and set up in an out-house where gun powder and nitro-glycerine for blasting rocks are stored, and though well watched and once locked up in a dark cell on suspicion, Short had $6,443 when he left the prison, all made out of the whiskey trade, for his stock of groceries was found and seized and eventually netted a loss. The keeper and other confederates received a still larger sum. Short says he could have escaped any time, but didn't want to leave while making $100 a week. He had no difficulty in getting all the barley he wanted, as large quantities were used in soup, and the steamboat brings up numerous bags full every week. It was easy to rip a hole in the bags and fill his pails. He used two large washtubs belonging to the prison to make the mash in. Before he was discharged he sold the business to another convict who is now making whiskey, and who ought to make $20,000 before his time is up.

—The very name of the ladies is of wonderful effect sometimes. A liquor seller in Norwalk, Conn., recently cleared his saloon of an unprofitable lot of bummers by going to the front door and breaking out, "Ah! good afternoon, ladies. Good afternoon, Miss —, ah! Good afternoon, Mrs. —. Come in, ah!"

—A business firm in Springfield to which a bill had been owing for some time, finally sent a sharp dunning note to the debtor, and received in reply a postal card containing the following:—"Matthew 18:26." To this they responded: "St. Luke 12:58." The result was the prompt return of a check in payment of the amount.

Our Changing Bodies.

Our bodies are constantly changing. The dead matter passes off by the bowels and the pores, and digestion and assimilation supply fresh material. This material cannot be pure, and consequently the body cannot be healthy unless the stomach and the secretive organs perform their allotted tasks thoroughly and regularly. That they may do so, keep them in good working order with that most efficient of all invigorating, regulating and purifying prepations, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. If you wish your blood to be really the "stream of life," to have your bones clothed with sound flesh, to be exempt from nervousness and debility, to be clear-headed and cheerful; in short, to possess that choicest of Heaven's blessings, a sound mind in a sound body, resort to the great vegetable restorative whenever you feel languid, or suffer from indigestion, or are bilious or low spirited, or suffering from any derangement of the animal functions. The relief is immediate, and full restoration certain.

No Other Medicine ever attained such an unprecedented sale as HELMBOLD'S BUCHU. Its name and fame are known everywhere; and it deserves its great reputation, for it has undoubted merit. It is warranted to cure all diseases of the kidneys and the urinary organs. Beware of counterfeits. Genuine has private propriety stamp of H. T. Helmbold on each bottle. For sale by all druggists.

Something Certain at Last.—PILES is not only one of the most painful of human diseases, but professional men had almost despaired of finding a remedy, until the introduction of ANAKESIS by DR. SILSBEE, and after an experience of 20,000 cases in five years, doctors agree that an infallible remedy has been found. Sufferers will appreciate ANAKESIS after trying everything else in vain and then experiencing the bliss of instant relief and ultimate cure. Price $1. Sold by druggists everywhere. SUFFERERS from Scrofula and Scrofulous affections, clean up! Why wear your Pimples, Blotches, Ulcers, Sores? Why have your life twisted out of you by Dyspepsia, Rheumatism and Gout? Why suffer syphilitic and Mercurial diseases to rot the bones in your body, or the flesh off your bones? Why let your sluggish blood drag, and scatter its distempers through your veins? AYER'S COMP. EXT OF SARSAPARILLA cures these complaints, and cleanses them out of the system. Use it faithfully, and you bring to society a healthier, cleaner, and far more acceptable member.—[Democrat, Baltimore, Md.]

—Women who "blow up" their husbands are called inflationists in western New York.

—A tall Yankee, standing six feet three inches in his stockings, was suddenly seized with symptoms of a fever. Having a violent pain in his head, his wife to afford him relief, was about to apply draughts to his feet, when he asked, "What are you putting them on my feet for?" "Why," says she, "to try and draw the pain out of your head." "The deuse?" says he; "I would rather it would stay where it is than be drawn the whole length of me."

FOR SALE.

TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1616 to '20; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore; Smith's antiquated ink at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Gerrish's Island, &c.

The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in its palmy days, the Light-House at its original height, and a lively sea view, at about 1830—a true picture of days when the white-sail ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the embalmed canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a devoted son of old "Strawberry Bank," so called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.

Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-office.

Prof. Gunning's Lecture.

The illustrated lecture on geology, on the evening of the 14th, treated of "the World under the Reign of Ice," and was as interesting as any lecture of the course, which is saying a great deal.

The speaker began by describing the surface appearance in States south of the national capital. The most striking fact to a New England observer is the absence of boulders, or travelled rocks. In latitudes north of Washington we find boulders and beds of unsorted gravel. The boulders are not at home where we see them. The speaker described a mountain of peculiar granite in Vermont. The mountain is a truncated pyramid. Southward, here and there all over New England, we find boulders and pebbles of that foliated granite and on the top of the Hoosac Mountain is a block twenty-five feet high and seventy-five feet around the base.

The lecturer drew and described the oldest rock in New England. It breaks up through newer rocks and appears at the surface on the base of Mt. LaFayette. It is a peculiar kind of granite, called porphyritic. Boulders of this granite he had found about Concord and Laconia.

The general fact is that the loose rocks strewn over the face of the earth have been carried down from the north.

Pebbles are only little boulders. Gravel, clay and sand have been crushed and ground from the massive rock. Nature at the outset never formed a pebble or a sand-grain. The "top dressing" in the north represents the crushing of underlying rocks; in the south it represents the rot of such rocks.

The speaker passed to another group of facts, — the planed and grooved ledges. They are found only where travelled boulders abound, and the inference is that whatever force crushed the boulders from the ledges did this planing and grooving. Our facts carry us to the level of this generalization. Some force has acted on our earth from the frozen zone to the latitude of Washington, from sea to sea, and from the sea-level up to the Lake of the Clouds. What was it? Facts were gathered from Siberia to prove that it was ice, and from Switzerland and Greenland to prove that it was glacial ice,—and that America was once buried under a sheet of ice which, in New Hampshire, reached a thickness of one mile. The highest ice-mark is found by the Lake of the Clouds.

In a clay-bed which underlies the frozen gravel of Brandon, Vermont, we find fossil palm and sappadilla, tropical plants. In a group of strata which underlies the ice-sheet of Greenland we find the fossil oaks, magnolias, tulip trees, and the great Pequoias of California. In a group of strata which crops out in southern England we find fossil shells and corals, akin to species which now live in tropical seas. All these strata belong to the same geologic age and they testify that long ago New England was as warm as Florida now is, and Greenland was as warm as Virginia, and England was as warm as Spain. Overlying groups of English strata register a gradual change of climate which culminated in arctic cold. Then was the Glacial Epoch. It culminated 250,000 years ago. It came on slowly and slowly went off. It endured (if we can trust to astronomical data) about 50,000 years.

World-making is the subject of the lecture for Tuesday evening next. The lecture will be illustrated by brilliant experiments in heat, light and spectra, and by Plateau's great experiment on oil globes.

Laconics.

The NEW HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE for this week contains seven columns of local matter, including the full report of the dedication ceremonies at St. Mary's church on Fast Day, list of city officers, etc.

The Boston Advertiser says: The Eastern Railroad having declined to sell package tickets to Portsmouth passengers, a number of merchants in that city are moving to have a steamer run between Portsmouth and Boston, carrying freight for Portsmouth and Dover at low rates, and passengers for fifty cents between Portsmouth and Boston.

Work is suspended at the Navy Yard today, it being Fast Day in Maine.

A boy in Kittery, nine years of age, was so poisoned on Saturday last by eating some cocoanut, that he died from the effects on Monday afternoon. The father of the child and a boy of another family, who also ate of the nut, are seriously ill but will probably recover.

Six wards and a municipal election in September,—that is announced as the democratic programme, now.

The retrenchment demanded in the expenses of the Eastern Railroad is being made in various places and various ways. The last order in the retrenchment line went forth dismissing the station agents at nearly all of the smaller offices, where there are telegraph officers, and appointing the telegraph operators as station agents.

Workmen are employed upon the schooner Chas. Upton, which was wrecked upon the Eastern Sister last Fall, and afterwards towed to this port. The masts have been taken out and she will be beached to ascertain the extent of her injuries. If found expedient, she will then be taken upon the ways at Kittery and repaired.

It may be a paying operation for persons in want of cottons to read Henderson's advertisement in another column.

C. N. Shaw & Co., opened their new stock of milliinery and summer styles of bonnets, Wednesday, and their store was crowded with purchasers and visitors all day long, the taste displayed in arranging the tempting array of goods being noticeable. Mr. Tibbets also had his opening the same day, and the variety afforded at both places delighted the fair sex, few of whom departed without leaving orders for the adornment of pretty faces.

J. E. Ham & Co. have removed to No. 25 Congress street, the store formerly occupied by C. H. Shedd & Co., and their new stock of goods for spring and summer wear fills the shelves and tables to overflowing.

Mr. Abram Drake of North Hampton was knocked down and trampled by a team of oxen, a sled passing over his body, Saturday, injuring the spinal column. His lower extremities were totally paralyzed and he died Tuesday night.

A young man undertook to run away with the horse and carriage of Dr. Parsons, Wednesday, but was pursued by the doctor and captured, and locked up. He was pretty drunk at the time, and said he was bound for Boston. His name is Thomas Nugent, and he had only left the House of Correction the evening previous.

The warm weather of Tuesday and Wednesday started the grass in this vicinity so much that the green shows plainly through the winter coat of brown.

Schooner Daniel Marcy, which was recently launched at Essex, Mass., arrived at Doane's wharf, Newcastle, Monday afternoon, in tow of the steam tug Mattie Sargent of Newburyport. The Daniel Marcy is a well-built vessel of handsome model, and is to be fitted out as a fishing schooner.

The Eastern Railroad was indicted by the grand jury at Exeter, Wednesday, for causing the death of the late Joseph D. Pillow of this city.

The Portsmouth jurors—or most of them—wanted to get excused from duty at the present session of the court at Exeter, but Judge Sargent wouldn't let one of 'em off. The judges all say that Portsmouth men are famous for trying to shirk jury duty.

The Queen Coming Out.

[Late London Letter.]

It is understood that the Queen is greatly charmed with her new daughter-in-law, and she is also delighted with the reception of Thursday. It has, in fact, operated upon her as quite a revival of interest in life, and it is expected that she will now come out much more into public than she has done since the Prince Consort's death. I met her driving in the Kensington Gardens this morning, and talking as brightly and merrily to her daughter Beatrice as in the old days when she used to ride there with her nurse on a donkey. The Queen has intimated that she will accompany the Duke and Duchess to a great civic entertainment to be given by the Lord Mayor and corporation about the second week after Easter.

Kites.

[St. Nicholas.]

It is a great art to make a good kite. It should be shaped evenly so as to balance well. The sticks should be just strong enough for the size of the kite without being too heavy. The paper should be of proper strength and lightness. The four cords that start from the four corners should be gathered into one and attached at just the right point to the holding cord, so as to ensure its proper angle against the wind. And, above all (or rather, below all), the tail should be long enough and heavy enough to balance the teetery kite in the air and make it sail like a thing of life. A tail too heavy or too light for its length, or too short for its weight, whichever you please, is sure to make trouble in kite-flying. Now, boys, whenever your kite flops and "don't go," you may be sure that she is wrong in one or more of the above mentioned points.

—Motto of the whisky crusaders—"The horn of the ungodly shall be put down."

—A three-year-old child down East recently said, "There's two things I 'spise—Sundays and dyin'."

—It is a rule of etiquette in Arkansas that no true gentleman will eat with his leg thrown over the back of his neighbor's chair, if he can help it.

—The demon of dullness which is often allowed to reign at home, has more to do with driving young men into vicious company than the attractions of vice itself.

—A Chicago pork packer, whose pew rent was raised to twenty-five dollars, exclaimed: "Great Cæsar! here's a nice state of affairs—the Gospel going up and pork going down. What's to become of us?"

J. Otis as a Back-Log.

[Springfield Republican.]

Boston's cherished sense of having rather a peculiar property in the colonial and revolutionary glories of the land is something the rest of New England has really been a trifle too indulgently disposed to encourage. She has turned the old State-house into a place of merchandise, torn down the old Hancock house, cut down the Paddock elms, and is going to abandon the "Old South;" and still we keep our sentimental reverence for the old lady of Trimountain. How much farther she will go before we utterly abominate the common, dispute the beauty of the State-house dome, and definitely drop the Brahmin theory, is a serious question. If she had any conscience besides a commercial one, however, it would make her writhe to turn to the biography of old Samuel J. May, and read how once his father came in from his morning walk, and said:—

I have seen something wonderfully interesting, this morning. As I passed the Old Granary burial ground I saw that the tomb was open in which I knew were the remains of James Otis; and, with the help of the sexton, I opened the lid of Otis' coffin and behold! the coffin was full of the fibrous roots of the elm, especially thick and matted about the skull; and, going out, I looked up at the noble, verdant Paddock elm, and there, in transfigured glory, was all that was material of James Otis.

—"Did you execute this instrument without fear or compulsion from your husband?" blandly asked the Judge. "Fear! Compulsion! He compel me! You don't know me, Judge."

—A stern parent in Detroit, Mich., undertook to prevent his daughter from marrying the man of her choice. The clergyman and the guests had already arrived, but the cruel father remained inexorable. The friends of the pair sent for a policeman, who, with the assistance of the crowd, ran the patriarch out of his own house. He then went across the street, and sitting upon the curbstone, cried, while the happy two were made a happier one.

VALUABLE INFORMATION.

BOSTON, Dec. 12, 1869.

Gentlemen—My only object in giving you this testimonial is to spread valuable information. Having been badly afflicted with Salt Rheum, and the whole surface of my skin being covered with pimples and eruptions, many of which caused me great pain and annoyance, and knowing it to be a blood disease, I took many of the advertised blood preparations, among which was any quantity of Sarsaparilla, without obtaining any benefit, until I commenced taking the VEGETINE; and before I had completed the first bottle, I saw that I had got the right medicine. Consequently I followed on with it until I had taken seven bottles, when I was pronounced a well man, and my skin is smooth and entirely free from pimples and eruptions. I have never enjoyed so good health before, and I attribute it all to the use of VEGETINE. To benefit those afflicted with Rheumatism, I will make mention also of the VEGETINE'S wonderful power of curing me of this acute complaint, of which I have suffered so intensely.

C. H. TUCKER, Pas. Agt. Mich. C. R. R.,
29 Tyler Street, Boston.

HAS ENTIRELY CURED ME.

BOSTON, October, 1870.

Mr. H. R. STEVENS:

Dear Sir—My Daughter after having a severe attack of Whooping Cough, was left in a feeble state of health; being advised by a friend, she tried the VEGETINE, and after using a few bottles was fully restored to health.

I have been a great sufferer from Rheumatism. I have taken several bottles of the VEGETINE for this complaint, and am happy to say it has entirely cured me. I have recommended the VEGETINE to others, with the same good results. It is a great cleanser and purifier of the blood; it is pleasant to take; and I can cheerfully recommend it.

JAMES HOUSE, 384 Athens Street.

NO TROUBLE SINCE USING

VEGETINE.

CHARLESTOWN, October, 1870.

This certifies that my daughter has always been troubled with a humor, which has caused frequent swelling on her face and about her eyes. Physicians called it the Erysipelas; but after having taken two bottles of the VEGETINE, she has not been troubled with it since. SIMON ALDRICH, Charlestown, Mass.

DR. TUTTLE says: "It is unnecessary for me to enumerate the diseases for which the VEGETINE should be used. I know of no disease which will not admit of its use with good results. Almost innumerable complaints are caused by poisonous secretions in the blood, which can be entirely expelled from the system by the use of the VEGETINE. When the blood is perfectly cleansed, the disease rapidly yields; all pains cease, healthy action is promptly restored, and the patient is cured.

The remarkable cures effected by VEGETINE, have induced many physicians and apothecaries, whom we know, to prescribe and use it in their own families.

In fact VEGETINE is the best remedy yet discovered, and is the only reliable BLOOD-PURIFIER yet placed before the public. Sold by all Druggists and dealers everywhere. ad 6ow2p nrt tw

DR. FLINT'S QUAKER BITTERS.

These celebrated Bitters are composed of choice Roots, Herbs and Barks, among which are Gentian, Sarsaparilla, Wild Cherry, Dandelion, Juniper and other Berries, and are so prepared as to retain all their medicinal qualities. They invariably cure or greatly relieve the following complaints: Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Liver Complaint, Loss of Appetite, Headache, Bilious Attacks, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Ague, Cold Chills, Rheumatism, Summer Complaints, Piles, Kidney Diseases, Female Difficulties, Lassitude, Low Spirits, General Debility, and, in fact, everything caused by an impure state of the Blood or deranged condition of Stomach, Liver, or Kidneys. The aged find in the Quaker Bitters a gentle, soothing stimulant, so desirable in their declining years. No one can remain long unwell (unless afflicted with an incurable disease) after taking a few bottles of the Quaker Bitters.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

This compound of the vegetable alteratives, Sarsaparilla, Dock, Stillingia and Mandrake with the Iodides of Potassium and Iron makes a most effectual cure of a series of complaints which are very prevalent and afflicting. It purifies the blood, purges out the lurking humors in the system that undermine health and settle into troublesome disorders. Eruptions of the skin are the appearance on the surface of humors that should be expelled from the blood. Internal derangements are the manifestation of these same humors to some internal organ, or organs, whose action they derange, and whose substance they disease and destroy. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA expels these humors from the blood. When they are gone, the disorders they produce disappear, such as Ulcerations of the Liver, Stomach, Kidney, Lungs, Eruptions and Eruptive Diseases of the Skin, St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Ulcers and Sores, Rheumatism and Neuralgia, Pain in the Bones, Side and Head, Female Weakness, Sterility, Leuchorrhoea arising from internal ulceration and uterine disease, Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Emaciation and General Debility. With their departure, health returns.

OF

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,
For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs
No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.
After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.
No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.
All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.
TESTIMONIALS.
"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."
"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."
"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

Another Balloon Expedition.

The failure of all the North Pole Expeditions to discover the secret of the Arctic regions has stimulated the Aeronautic Society of Paris, to attempt an Arctic balloon voyage. Extravagant as the notion may appear, it is not more extravagant than Professor Wise's project of crossing the Atlantic Ocean in a balloon. One advantage of an aerial North Pole voyage is the temperature of the Arctic regions, which prevents the escape of gas from the balloon to such a degree that it is supposed to be quite feasible to construct a balloon which will last a three months' voyage. Another advantage is the absence of darkness in the Northern regions. If the balloon leaves in the summer time the sun will illuminate the heavens during the whole trip. Then, again, the permanency in the direction of the winds around the regions of the North Pole would be another point in favor of the trip to the North Pole over that across the Atlantic. The size of the proposed balloon is fixed at at about 18,000 cubic metres. It is calculated to carry ten men, three months' provisions, apart from the ballast, a number of instruments, an anchor and a dragging rope, which will touch the ground should the balloon sink too near to the earth. An ingenious arrangement has also been made to prevent the balloon from rising higher than 800 metres, or about 2,500 feet. The boat of the balloon is to be lined with sheepskins and heated with lamps, so that even if the temperature should fall to 32 degrees below zero, outside, it will be five degrees above zero inside. A vessel is to carry the men, the balloon, and the ingredients for the manufacture of the necessary amount of gas to about the seventieth degree of latitude. This will leave a trip of about 300 miles to the North Pole for the balloon to accomplish; and the voyage there and back could be made within twenty days. Everything, however, is to be prepared for a full three months' trip. The enterprise is exciting unusual interest among the scientific men of Europe, and is, indeed, one of the most wonderful, not to say chimerical, schemes ever conceived by the human mind.

Gen. Butler as He Is.

[Merrimack Journal.]

We count out the democracy in this State, and find two factions of one party—Butler, the life, body and soul of the one, who, in the strength of popular demands, strides the stage like a very god; and the other with Harvard college as its head, and money, and the representatives of purse-proud monopolies, as its surroundings. B. F. Butler is the only man in both creeds, for he is the only person who does and dares. The Hoars and their followers are cowards. They are afraid of losing their dignity and standing, and would prefer defeat to stepping outside the shadow of Harvard's walls to gather strength. Where is the man among them that dares scale his cap into the ring, and leaping the ropes say—"Ben Butler, I am here! Let the fight begin."

Butler is a great man. Why! he can stand at the corners of the streets, and make up faces at these fellows—perhaps we ought to call them gentlemen, instead of fellows, and we would if we could conquer our contempt for cowardice—and he will get a bigger following than they with all of their science and bonds—their respectability and banks—their railroads and money in all its forms, at their back. After Dana and Hoar and Loring and all that gang have poured forth their eloquence from the rostrum in torrents by the hour, and men have admired their well rounded sentences, and the school girls have simpered—"how pretty," Butler trundles his burly form upon the same platform, wipes the sweat from his bald head, and standing up spits at them, and the loud huzzahs of the unwashed multitude that throng the aisles and hang about the doors of the hall, cover the fact that his opponents are acting with entire forgetfulness.

Gen. Butler is a giant, we repeat, because he claims to be a man, living in and of himself, uttering the thoughts and defending the opinions that permeate the masses of humanity. More than half the time we neither agree with what he does or says, but we do confess our admiration of an actor who can raise the curtain himself, without putting on gloves; who can perform his part without a prompter, or without mumbling or mouthing his words; and who, when the play should end, can draw his own sword, cut the cord, let fall the screen, and with his hand shut out the world, whether they hiss or cheer. We were not one of those who invited him into this district; we thought it a shame and disgrace that we should go elsewhere for a representative, and so we said; but even in being captured ourselves we were satisfied with the result, when we saw the craven spirit of those who from their political positions might or did aspire to the seat in Congress. They fled before him like rabbits from a bulldog. They hid themselves in the corners, and crept on their bellies through the underbrush, to escape his very gaze. Then he stood up and proclaimed—"volunteers rewarded, deserters shot," and out they came to join his standard. Men who claimed before his advent to be major-generals marched in the ranks and footed it through the mud to do his bidding, just as the weak always do for the strong. This was the beginning of his conquests. He went to Washington after Richard H. Dana—nobody says Dick, as they do Ben, for he is a Harvard graduate, you know—had proclaimed on the stump that if he was elected, he could not control the patronage of a village post office; but he had not been there six weeks before he punished every enemy in official position, and rewarded every friend, as far as the loaves and fishes would feed them. From that hour Gen. Butler has virtually been the administration in all that pertained to this State. If he has a use for the Charlestown Navy Yard, he don't seem to remember that Massachusetts is divided into congressional districts, and Charlestown is not in Essex; and if he has a purpose in the Boston Custom House, he don't remember that that is not in Essex. For any thing to be done in this State or at Washington, of a political character, he has more force than the entire State delegation. The people recognize this fact. Other members of Congress go and come and create no more commotion than the first swallow in spring; but wherever Butler is the whole party follows him. His visitors and correspondents are more numerous than those of the Treasury department, because persons having to do with the department go to him first. He is obliged to keep half a dozen clerks in Boston and Washington, and his rooms in each place are thronged by these on every political business from every part of the country. Do these Danas and Hoars, Washburns and Lorings propose to defeat such a man by the resolutions of the undergraduates of Harvard College, and ponderous writings in national reviews, that the people never hear of? We tell you—nay! unless they show more pluck than they have given any signs of, and a more hearty appreciation of the public wants, they will remain as they are now—sucklings and children before him. You might raise a whole army of men who hold their pens in gloved fingers and write upon gilt edged paper, and with his slouched hat tied to a stick, Ben Butler would mop them up and wring them out till they were deader and dryer than a mummy's bones. The opponent that whips Gen. Butler will be the one that pulls off his coat and works in shirt sleeves and has never seen Harvard College.

FRIDAY, APRIL 17, 1874.

Letter from London.

The Oxford and Cambridge boat race and holiday for London took place March 28, in due form and with what, I presume, was the usual display of popular enthusiasm on the occasion. It is estimated that not less than 200,000 spectators were out to witness the race. For the distance of four miles, one continuous crowd lined both the banks of the Thames and packed its bridges, barges, small boats and adjacent house tops. From twenty-five cents to several dollars were given by single individuals for standing room on boats, houses and other places where a good sight of the river could be obtained.

Four steamers, but little smaller than the Appledore, were assigned as a sort of escort to the contending boats—one steamer for the Royal family, one for the Press and one to the friends of each boat club. Besides these the river was almost covered with boats of every size crowded with spectators. The pull was four miles long, over which they rowed in 22 minutes and 35 seconds—the Cambridge boys coming in two boat lengths ahead. Great was the excitement from first to last; and great the jubilation, when the result of the contest was announced. Multitudes of carrier pigeons were despatched "to carry the tidings home"—and the roar of the cannon seemed an appropriate voice to the general feeling.

A review of the Ashantee troops was held by the Queen, March 30th, at Windsor Castle. The day was cold and blustering, and all in all the review which would have been a very interesting occasion in the United States, was a stupid affair here. In short it took from 9 o'clock A. M. to 3 o'clock P. M. for the Queen to ride two miles and look at about 5000 troops. There were but 1500 of the Ashantee army. Not a cannon was fired and but two bands of music appeared upon the field and they played only when coming to and when leaving the parade. Hundreds of the London police came out twenty-two miles to help the soldiers keep the peace.

It seemed more like the troops reviewing the Queen than she reviewing them. They were drawn up on the sides of an oblong square and stood for her to ride around before them instead of marching before her as they would have done in the United States to President Grant. It took less time for the President of the United States to review the entire United States army at Washington at the close of our war than was consumed at Windsor Castle in reviewing 1500 Ashantee troops. Quant. Suf. The English are a happy, thrifty, genial people as I see them, but deliver me from their army reviews. N. B. C.

Two children in a tenement house at Birmingham, Conn., were recently smothered. The wood in a wood-box took fire in the afternoon from some unexplained cause, during the absence of the mother. The children were heard to scream, and soon a large quantity of smoke was seen to issue from that part of the house. The neighbors burst open the door and put out the fire, but not until the two oldest children were smothered to death. They were girls of from six to eight years old. A baby was also very nearly dead, and small hopes are entertained of its recovery.

Woman Burned to Death.

A fire occurred in Marblehead on Tuesday evening, the 14th, causing the partial destruction of a building on Reed's Hill, owned by Mr. J. Stuart, and occupied by owner and the family of Mr. William Martin Chamberlain of the Marblehead Messenger. On the arrival of the neighbors it was found that three children were asleep in the second story of the building. After several ineffectual attempts to break open the front door, over which was their bedroom, Mr. D. B. H. Powers climed into the window and rescued one of the children and passed it to those outside. Then with the assistance of Messrs. John S. Hunt and Samuel H. Russell, the two other children were rescued, all of them being nearly suffocated by the smoke. The saddest part of the unfortunate affair was the death of Miss Amy Stuart, daughter of the owner of the building. When the alarm was given her mother called her, and remembers hearing her answer. It is supposed she arose from her bed and went for clothing to the clothes press, near which her body was found, and was suffocated by the smoke. When found the body was much disfigured by fire and smoke. Miss Stuart was about seventeen years old, a member of the Sewall grammar school and of the Universalist Sunday school, and her death is universally lamented in the town.

Railway Issues Coming to a Head.

The Chicago Tribune of the 7th says: The first real collision between the people on the one side and the railroads on the other, promises to take place in Wisconsin soon after the first of May, when the railroad laws passed by the State Legislature take effect. These laws establish specific rates on each class of merchandise on each class of railroads. The rates of transportation by the car-load are arranged by stretches of twenty-five miles—that is, there is one rate for hauling a car-load twenty-five miles, another rate for the next twenty-five miles, and so on—a different rate for each twenty-five miles up to two hundred miles. The law provides for the summary punishment of any railroad agent or officer refusing to sell tickets or to receive and deliver freight at the rates prescribed by the act. We understand that the Chicago and Northwestern and the Milwaukee and St. Paul Companies have been taking legal advice in New York, and after a full conference of the directors, a determination has been reached. This is to the effect that it requires 70 per cent. of the receipts of those roads to operate them in Wisconsin; that the recent legislation will have the effect of reducing the receipts 30 per cent,—that is to the cost of operating the roads; that if the value of the property is to be destroyed, it might as well be destroyed by defying the law as by obeying it; and, therefore, that the officers of the roads shall be directed to disregard the law. This will produce a conflict at once. If a ticket-agent, refusing to accept the fare fixed by law, is arrested and punished, they propose to close the ticket-office; and if a freight-agent is punished, to close the freight-office. The trains will run by the offending stations without stopping.

—The Secretary of the Treasury decides that where a woman is owner of a yacht she may be named in the papers as the master of the same.

—The Chicago Tribune prints a poem in which the writer wishes that she had "a heart full of sweet yearlings." The authoress says the printer who set it up is a calf.

—Second wives often come into possession of their predecessors' duds and things. One such, up in Saratoga, has succeeded to a first wife's false teeth. There is no report yet as to how the old things w rk.

—"Professor," said a student in pursuit of knowledge concerning animals, "why does a cat, while eating, turn her head first one way and then another?" "For the reason," replied the professor, "that she cannot turn it both ways at once."

Our Changing Bodies.

Our bodies are constantly changing. The dead matter passes off by the bowels and the pores, and digestion and assimilation supply fresh material. This material cannot be pure, and consequently the body cannot be healthy unless the stomach and the secretive organs perform their allotted tasks thoroughly and regularly. That they may do so, keep them in good working order with that most efficient of all invigorating, regulating and purifying preparations, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. If you wish your blood to be really the "stream of life," to have your bones clothed with sound flesh, to be exempt from nervousness and debility, to be clear-headed and cheerful; in short, to possess that choicest of Heaven's blessings, a sound mind in a sound body, resort to the great vegetable restorative whenever you feel languid, or suffer from indigestion, or are bilious or low spirited, or suffering from any derangement of the animal functions. The relief is immediate, and full restoration certain.

No Other Medicine ever attained such an unprecedented sale as HELMBOLD'S BUCHU. Its name and fame are known everywhere; and it deserves its great reputation, for it has undoubted merit. It is warranted to cure all diseases of the kidneys and the urinary organs. Beware of counterfeits. Genuine has private propriety stamp of H. T. Helmbold on each bottle. For sale by all druggists.

Something Certain at Last.—PILES is not only one of the most painful of human diseases, but professional men had almost despaired of finding a remedy, until the introduction of ANAKESIS by DR. SILSBEE, and after an experience of 20,000 cases in five years, doctors agree that an infallible remedy has been found. Sufferers will appreciate ANAKESIS after trying everything else in vain and then experiencing the bliss of instant relief and ultimate cure. Price $1. Sold by druggists everywhere. Principal Depot, 46 Walker st., New York.

For Moth Patches, Freckles and Tan

Ask your Druggist for Perry's Moth and Freckle Lotion, which is harmless and in every case infallible. Or for his IMPROVED COMEDONE AND PIMPLE REMEDY, the great SKIN MEDICINE for Pimples, Black Heads or Flesh Worms. Or consult B. C. PERRY, the noted Skin Doctor, 49 Bond St., New York. a 10 D 6m

SUFFERERS from Scrofula and Scrofulous affections, clean up! Why wear your Pimples, Blotches, Ulcers, Sores? Why have your life twisted out of you by Dyspepsia, Rheumatism and Gout? Why suffer Syphilitic and Mercurial diseases to rot the bones in your body, or the flesh off your bones? Why let your sluggish blood drag, and scatter its distempers through your veins? AYER'S COMP. EXT OF SARSAPARILLA cures these complaints, and cleanses them out of the system. Use it faithfully, and you bring to society a healthier, cleaner, and far more acceptable member.—[Democrat, Baltimore, Md.]

PROPOSALS FOR MATERIALS TO BE SUPPLIED TO THE NAVY YARDS UNDER THE COGNIZANCE OF THE BUREAU OF CONSTRUCTION AND REPAIR.

NAVY DEPARTMENT,
BUREAU OF CONSTRUCTION AND REPAIR,
Washington, D. C., April 6, 1874.

SEALED PROPOSALS to furnish Timber and other materials for the Navy for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1875, will be received at this Bureau until 12 o'clock M. of Thursday, May 7, 1874, at which time the bids will be opened.

The proposals must be addressed to the "Chief of the Bureau of Construction and Repair, Navy Department, Washington," and must be indorsed "Proposals for Timber &c., for the Navy," that they may be distinguished from ordinary business letters.

To prevent confusion, and facilitate the opening of the bids, parties bidding for supplies at several yards will enclose their bids in separate envelopes for each yard, endorsed with the name of the yard for which the bid is made.

Printed schedules for such classes as parties deal in and intend to bid for, together with instructions to bidders, giving the forms of proposal, of guarantee, and of certificate of guarantors, with printed forms of offer, will be furnished to such persons as desire to bid, on application to the Commandants of the respective Navy Yards, and those of all the yards on application to the Bureau.

The Commandant of each Navy Yard and the purchasing Paymaster for each Station will have a copy of the schedules of the other yards, for examination only, in order that persons who intend to bid may judge whether it is desirable to make application for any of the classes of those yards.

The proposals must be for the whole of a class, but the Department reserves the right to reject the whole class, should the interest of the Government require it, before the execution of the contract. All applications for information, or for the examination of sample, must be made to the Commandants of the respective yards.

Bids or offers will be received only from parties who are bona fide dealers in, or manufacturers of, the articles they offer to furnish. This provision is strictly enforced by the Collectors of Internal Revenue for the district in which they reside.

The contract will be awarded to the person who makes the lowest bid and gives the guarantee required by law, the Navy Department, however, reserving the right to reject the lowest bid, or any which it may deem exhorbitant.

Under the provisions of the second section of the act approved March 3, 1863, the offer of any person who, as principal or surety, has been a defaulter in any previous contract with the Navy Department will not be received.

Sureties in the full amount will be required to sign the contract, and their responsibility must be certified to the satisfaction of the Navy Department.

An additional security twenty per centum will be withheld from the payment of the bills until the contracts shall have been completed, and eighty per centum of the amount of each bill, approved, is tendered by the Commandants of the respective yards, will be paid by the Paymaster of the station designated in the contract, or, if none is specified, by the Paymaster nearest the yard where the goods are delivered, within ten days after the warrant for the same shall have been passed by the Secretary of the Treasury.

The classes of this Bureau are numbered and designated as follows:

No. 1, White Oak Logs; No. 13, White Pine Plank, Boards; No. 15, White Ash, Elm, Beech; No. 18, White Ash Oars; No. 19, Black Walnut, Mahogany, Maple, Cherry; No. 22, Cypress, Cedar; No. 23, Black Spruce; No. 24, White Oak Staves and Headings; No. 25, Lignumvitæ; No. 32, Wrought Iron, round and square; No. 33, Wrought Iron, flat; No. 34, Iron, plate; No. 35, Steel; No. 37, Iron spikes; No. 38, Iron Wrought Nails; No. 39, Iron Cut Nails; No. 42, Lead, pipe, sheet; No. 43, Zinc; No. 44, Tin; No. 46, Locks, Hinges, Bolts, of brass and iron; No. 49, Screws of brass and iron; No. 50, files; No. 51, Augers; No. 52, Tools for ship stores; No. 53, Tools for use in yard and shops; No. 54, Hardware; No. 56, White Lead; No. 57, Zinc Paints; No. 58, Colored Paints, Dryers; No. 59, Linseed Oil; No. 60, Varnish, Spirits Turpentine; No. 63, Sperm and Lard Oil; No. 64, Tallow, Soap; No. 65, Fish Oil; No. 66, Glass; No. 69, Brushes; No. 70, Dry Goods for upholstering; No. 71, Stationery; No. 72, Crucibles; No. 73, Ship Chandlery; No. 74, Acids; No. 75, Rosin, Pitch, Crude Turpentine; No. 77, Belting, Packing; No. 78, Leather, pump, rigging, incing; No. 85, Anthracite Coal; No. 86, Semi-bituminous Coal; No. 87, Bituminous Coal; No. 88, Charcoal; No. 89, Wood.

TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1616 to '20; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore; Smith's antiquated bark at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Gerrish's island, &c.

The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in its palmy days, the Light-House at its original height, and a lively sea view, at about 1830—a true picture of days when the white sail ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the embalmed canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a devoted son of old "Strawberry Bank," so called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.

Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-office.

Harry Bloodgood's "Comique Alliance"

Had one of the largest audiences of the season, Wednesday evening, and with the exception of one or two tedious pieces too old for repetition, was a very funny entertainment. Harry seemed to wake up from his lethargy, and became sprightly, while Hale, the tamborinist, was equally as entertaining. The first-half of the evening's performance was the most enjoyable, the singing of the quartet being especially fine. The two lady singers were ill and their absence was noticeable. Pat Rooney gave the best Irish "set-out" seen here for many years and Bloodgood's "Funny Old Gal" was a rich conception. The Director needlessly made fun of a youngster who was distributing programmes while Harry was engaged on one of his long yarns. Josie Granger sang serio-comic songs with grace, and pleased the audience.

Terpsichorean.

Mr. Lamprey's juvenile dancing school opened at Congress Hall on Wednesday afternoon, the number of pupils and the class of families represented by them showing that the veteran teacher's reputation is not at all on the wane. We do not wonder that Mr. Lamprey has so many of the rising generation to teach or that he is so successful in making them accomplished and graceful dancers, for not a few of their fathers and mothers took their first steps under his instructions and were duly blown up by him for carelessness and inattention, or commended and encouraged if deserving of such treatment.

The Athlete Base Ball Club, of Kittery, gave a grand Ball, the last of the season, n Trefethen's Hall in that town, on Wednesday evening. Turner's Quadrille Band of seven pieces furnished the music, (and good music—good enough for anybody with music in his or her soul to dance to,) and a good time was enjoyed by all present. Though there was not a crowd in the hall, there were dancers enough to fill the floor, and the Ball was a complete success in its conception and carrying out. The evening was warm, but the open windows kept the air pure and quite as cool as the air in halls during winter dances usually is. By the way, we cannot exactly understand why balls and assemblies should be confined to the winter months, in cities and towns. At every watering place, all through the hottest months of the year, dances are largely patronized and hugely enjoyed, thin dresses and the unlimited circulation of fresh air rendering the participants quite as cool and comfortable as thicker clothing, colder halls and vitiated atmospheres make the patrons of winter assemblies. We know of Terpsichorean devotees who would almost faint at the suggestion of a dance in Congress Hall in July or August, who will go to the Shoals or Rye Beach during the same months and dance till the music gives out, and afterward tell what a splendid time they had. We don't understand it.

A Terrified Horse.

On Thursday, as we are informed, a horse attached to a job wagon either fell down or laid down in the middle of the drive-way at the lower end of Court street. Of course a crowd of people soon collected, offering advice and assistance, and for an hour or more all sorts of plans were tried to get that horse on his feet, without avail, —he could neither be pried up with boards, blown up with anathemas or nitro-glycerine, or got up in any other way so that he would stay up. At length City Marshal Johnson (who like most other plucky, determined men is too humane to calmly witness the needless suffering of a brute,) announced his determination to put the animal out of misery and life, both at once, and started on an axe-borrowing tour among the houses in the neighborhood; but he was unsuccessful, and had to raturn empty handed. Just as the Marshal got back to where the horse was lying, some one in the crowd called out, "Here comes Dr. Norton! He's the agent of the cat-and-dog society, and he'll fix him in short metre!" The horse had winked his ears benevolently when he bumped on the ground after being pried up about three feet, and had listened calmly to anathemas and threats; even the Marshal's ominous words had failed to move him; but no sooner was the approach of the "cat-and-dog society's" agent announced than he hastily got upon his feet and struck out up street at a 2:40 gait,—another illustration of the vast influence exercised by the P. S. P. C. A. It is barely possible there may be something not strictly true in this story; but we give it as 'twas told to us.

Barbarous.

The barbers of this city have issued a manifesto setting forth their intention to have one day in the week, (Sunday,) and one evening (Tuesday) in addition, to themselves. Right they are. There is no more necessity for barbers working on Sunday than for men of any other trade or occupation. Many people have a confirmed habit of getting shaved on Sunday; but when they find they cannot get shaved on that day they will soon contract a habit of having their barberizing done on Saturday, letting it go till Monday, or of shaving themselves. People in some parts of the country think it would be impossible to get along without the Sunday running of railroad trains and steamboats; but in New England no serious inconvenience results from the deprivation, as the travellers' arrangements are easily made to conform to the railroads' rules. And so it has been with barbers' patronage in this city, in years past,—for this is not the first barbers' strike for freedom, by any means; when the shops were first closed on Sundays there was much growling, but the new order of things was soon acquiesced in; then an occasional shave or hair-butchering was given to some careless chap who had neglected to have it done on Saturday; then others, finding the rules were not as the laws of the Medes and Persians, would also let things go till Sunday; and finally the barbers' Sunday-closing movement became a delusion and a snare. Now they propose a reform, and if they only stick to it they will have little trouble in carrying their point.

The associated and individual barbers have made another rule also—that on and after May 3d the price of a shave shall be fifteen cents, instead of ten as heretofore. Thus does barbarism crowd civilization! Hasten the new issue of paper money, oh! Congress! so that fifteen cents won't be worth more than a ten-cent scrip is now.

Col. J. W. Peirce.

The funeral of the late Col. Joshua W. Peirce took place at St. John's church on Thursday afternoon, the church being filled. The beautiful burial service of the Episcopal church was impressively read by Rev. Dr. Davies, formerly pastor of St. John's. A profusion of exquisite flowers decked the casket and altar, many of them being tributes of respect from friends outside the family circle. A man of ample means, strong convictions and great decision of character, and an ardent worker to forward the views he entertained, Col. Peirce for many years exercised large influence in business circles in this city, and though hardly known in politics by the present generation, was years ago a decided power in State affairs, His interest in the church of which he was so long an active member never abated, and up to the date of his death his influence in church matters was very great. Men who were young men with him and have known him intimately all their lives, proclaim that even his most earnest opponents never thought of questioning his integrity nor the honesty with which he believed in any doctrine or measure he advocated.

Presence of Mind.

On the arrival of a train of cars over the Eastern Railroad, Thursday afternoon, a man jumped off and demanded of another standing there that he "pay that forty dollars" he owed, enforcing his demand with an oath. "I don't owe you any forty dollars," was the reply; "I never saw you before." "Well, you pay it d—d quick, or I'll make you," said the first man, brandishing a revolver, every chamber of which was loaded with powder and ball. The gentleman threatened, seeing at once that his assailant was insane or "in the horrors," instead of trying to run away or knock the maniac down, either of which operations might have resulted fatally, replied; "Well, I haven't got the money about me, but I know where I can get it, and if you like to go with me we'll make it all right." The pleased debt-collector thereupon quietly followed his guide to the police station, and was locked up by the officers. He refused to give his name, nor did we hear that of the cool customer who displayed such commendable presence of mind.

LAWS

UNITED STATES

PASSED AT THE

FIRST SESSION OF THE FORTY-THIRD CONGRESS.

THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND THE REPUBLIC OF SALVADOR.

EXTRADITION.

Concluded May 23, 1870.
Ratification advised by Senate December 9, 1870.
Ratified by President December 16, 1870.
Ratified by President of Salvador October 28, 1873.
Time for exchange of ratifications extended May 12, 1873.
Ratifications exchanged at Washington March 2, 1874.
Proclaimed March 4, 1874.

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas a convention for the surrender of criminals, fugitives from justice, between the United States of America and the Republic of Salvador, was concluded and signed by their respective Plenipotentiaries at San Salvador on the 23d day of May, 1870, the original of which convention being in the English and Spanish languages, is word for word as follows:

Convention for the surrender of criminals between the United States of America and the Republic of Salvador.

The United States of America and the Republic of Salvador, having judged it expedient, with a view to the better administration of justice, and to the prevention of crimes within their respective territories and jurisdiction, that persons convicted of or charged with the crimes hereinafter specified, and being fugitives from justice, should, under certain circumstances, be reciprocally delivered up, have resolved to conclude a convention for that purpose, and have appointed as their Plenipotentiaries, the President of the United States, Alfred T. A. Torbert, Minister Resident to Salvador; the President of the Republic of Salvador, Senor Doctor Don Gregorio Arbizu, Minister of Foreign Affairs; who, after reciprocal communication of their full powers, found in good and due form, have agreed upon the following articles, to wit:

ARTICLE 1ST.

The Government of the United States and the Government of Salvador mutually agree to deliver up persons who, having been convicted of or charged with the crimes specified in the following article, committed within the jurisdiction of one of the contracting parties, shall seek an asylum or be found within the territories of the other: Provided, That this shall only be done upon such evidence of criminality as, according to the laws of the place where the fugitive or person so charged shall be found, would justify his or her apprehension and commitment for trial if the crime had been there committed.

ARTICLE 2ND.

Persons shall be delivered up who shall have been convicted of, or be charged, according to the provisions of this convention, with any of the following crimes:

1. Murder, comprehending the crimes designated in the penal codes of the contracting parties by the terms homicide, parricide, assassination, poisoning, and infanticide.

2. The attempt to commit murder.

3. The crimes of rape, arson, piracy, and mutiny on board a ship, whenever the crew, or part thereof by fraud or violence against the commander, have taken possession of the vessel.

4. The crime of burglary, defined to be the action of breaking and entering by night into the house of another with the intent to commit felony; and the crime of robbery, defined to be the action of feloniously and forcibly taking from the person of another goods or money by violence, or putting him in fear.

5. The crime of forgery, by which is understood the utterance of forged papers, the counterfeiting of public, sovereign, or government acts.

6. The fabrication or circulation of counterfeit money, either coin or paper, of public bonds, bank-notes, and obligations, and in general of all things being titles or instruments of credit, the counterfeiting of seals, dies, stamps, and marks of state and public administration, and the utterance thereof.

7. The embezzlement of public moneys, committed within the jurisdiction of either party, by public officers or depositors.

8. Embezzlement, by any person or persons, hired or salaried, to the detriment of their employers, when these crimes are subject to infamous punishment.

ARTICLE 3RD.

The provisions of this treaty shall not apply to any crime or offence of a political character; and the person or persons delivered up for the crimes enumerated in the preceding article shall in no case be tried for any ordinary crime committed previously to that for which his or their surrender is asked.

ARTICLE 4TH.

If the person whose surrender may be claimed, pursuant to the stipulations of the present treaty, shall have been arrested for the commission of offences in the country where he has sought an asylum, shall have been convicted therefor, his extradition may be deferred until he shall have been acquitted or have served the term of imprisonment to which he may have been sentenced.

ARTICLE 5TH.

In no case and for no motive shall the high contracting parties be obliged to deliver up their own subjects. If, in conformity with the laws in force in the state to which the accused belongs, he ought to be submitted to criminal procedure for crimes committed in the other state, the latter must communicate the information and documents, send the implements or tools which were employed to perpetrate the crime, and procure every other explanation or evidence necessary to prosecute the case.

ARTICLE 6TH.

Requisitions for the surrender of fugitives from justice shall be made by the respective diplomatic agents of the contracting parties, or in the event of the absence of these from the country, or its seat of government, they may be made by superior consular officers. If the person whose extradition may be asked for shall have been convicted of a crime, a copy of the sentence of the court in which he may have been convicted, authenticated under its seal, and an attestation of the official character of the judge by the proper executive authority, and of the latter by the minister or consul of the United States or of Salvador, respectively, shall accompany the requisition. When, however, the fugitive shall have been merely charged with crime, a duly-authenticated copy of the warrant for his arrest in the country where the crime may have been committed, or the depositions upon which such warrant may have been issued, must accompany the requisition aforesaid. The President of the United States or the President of Salvador may then issue a warrant for the apprehension of the fugitive, in order that he may be brought before the proper judicial authority for examination. If it should then be decided that, according to law and the evidence, the extradition is due, pursuant to the treaty, the fugitive may be given up according to the forms prescribed in such cases.

ARTICLE 7TH.

The expenses of the arrest, detention, and transportation of the persons claimed shall be paid by the government in whose name the requisition shall have been made.

ARTICLE 8TH.

This convention shall continue in force during ten (10) years from the day of exchange of ratifications; but if neither party shall have given to the other six (6) months' previous notice of its intention to terminate the same, the convention shall remain in force ten years longer, and so on.

The present convention shall be ratified and the ratifications exchanged at the city of Washington within twelve (12) months, and sooner if possible.

In witness whereof, the respective Plenipotentiaries have signed the present convention in duplicate, and have thereunto affixed their seals.

Done at the city of San Salvador the twenty-third day of May, A. D., one thousand eight hundred and seventy, and of the Independence of the United States the ninety-fourth.

[SEAL.] ALFRED T. A. TORBERT.
[SEAL.] GREGO. ARBIZU.

And whereas the said convention has been duly ratified on both parts, and the respective ratifications were exchanged in this city on the second day of March, 1874:

Now, therefore, be it known that I, ULYSSES S. GRANT, President of the United States of America, have caused the said convention to be made public, to the end that the same, and every clause and article thereof, may be observed and fulfilled with good faith by the United States and the citizens thereof.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington this fourth day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand [SEAL.] eight hundred and seventy-four, and of the Independence of the United States of America the ninety-eighth.

U. S. GRANT.

By the President:
HAMILTON FISH,
Secretary of State.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

This compound of the vegetable alteratives, Sarsaparilla, Dock, Stillingia and Mandrake with the Iodides of Potassium and Iron makes a most effectual cure of a series of complaints which are very prevalent and afflicting. It purifies the blood, purges out the lurking humors in the system that undermine health and settle into troublesome disorders. Eruptions of the skin are the appearance on the surface of humors that should be expelled from the blood. Internal derangements are the determination of these same humors to some internal organ, or organs, whose action they derange, and whose substance they disease and destroy. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA expels these humors from the blood. When they are gone, the disorders they produce disappear, such as Ulcerations of the Liver, Stomach, Kidney, Lungs, Eruptions and Eruptive Diseases of the Skin, St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Ulcers and Sores, Rheumatism and Neuralgia, Pain in the Bones, Side and Head, Female Weakness, Sterility, Leuchorrhœa arising from internal ulceration and uterine disease, Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Emaciation and General Debility. With their departure, health returns.

'73 REUNION.

THE "HISTORY OF THE RETURN OF THE SONS & DAUGHTERS OF PORTSMOUTH, JULY, 1873," is just published. It contains 96 pages, octavo, and is a thorough detail of everything relating to the three Festal Days,

The Reunion, July 4th, High School Reunion, 5th, The Praise Meeting, 6th;

and containing a

Verbatim Report

of every speech that was uttered at the Tent on the 4th and 5th, besides giving a full report of all the Reunion preliminary movements in Portsmouth, Boston and New York. Much of the matter of this work has never yet appeared in any form, and we think it will prove interesting to all who participated in the Three Days' Jubilee.

The work is for sale at the Chronicle Office, J. H Foster's Book Store, and at Wm. E. Preston's.

OF

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.
R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,
For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs
No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.
After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.
No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.
All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent, and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.
TESTIMONIALS.
"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."
"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."
"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

What Mothers Should Tell Their Girls.

In Mrs. Brackett's lately published volume on "The Education of American Girls," in the division of her subject upon the culture of the body and sexual education, the author says: "Here I have to speak of a branch of the subject which is not often considered. I mean the duty of the mother, who is in this department the proper educator, to speak earnestly, fully, and plainly to the girl of the mysterious process of reproduction. Let me call attention to the infinite importance, in this part of education, of perfect confidence and freedom between mother and daughter, and to the equally important fact that this confidence which does exist at the beginning of life, if once lost, can never be fully restored. If there is a shade of reserve on the part of the girl, it will manifest itself just here and now. Instead of seeking the information which she really desires, at its only proper source, at that source whence she would receive it pure, and invested with a feeling of reverence and sanctity, of which she could never divest herself, she seeks it elsewhere. She picks it up piece-meal in surreptitious and clandestine ways, as if it were some horrible mystery which must, from its very nature, be covered up from the light of day. She talks it over with her young companions in secrecy, and the charm of the mystery keeps her thoughts unduly brooding upon the subject.

In old times, and even now, in some countries, the danger was not, is not, so great. Foreign girls have a much closer supervision exercised over them, and their life in the nursery is far less nerve-stimulating than that of American children. They do not ask questions so early as the American girl, and when they do, they have at hand not nearly so many sources of information. If this all-necessary love and confidence is unbroken, and if the mother has been so educated herself, that she recognizes the importance of the moment, and has the requisite knowledge, there is no danger at all. The occasion is seized, and her womanly, "clear and dignified statement destroyes all the false halo with which the youthful fancy is so prone to surround the process of reproduction, and at this time the fancy is very active with relation to whatever pertains to it." I do not for one moment forget that I am speaking of physical education. The physical consequence of mistakes on this point are decided. By the continual dwelling of the imagination on this subject—of the imagination, I say, for there can be no thought where there is no clearness—the blood is diverted to those organs, and hence "the brain and spinal cord, which develop rapidly at this period, are not led to a proper strength.

The easily molded material is perverted to the newly aroused reproductive organs, and the preternatural activity thus produced is physical disease. But more than this: I should be fairly accused of quitting the physical for the moral side of education here, if it were not that I am now upon ground, where, more than any other, body and soul, matter and spirit, touch each other, and it is difficult, if not impossible, to draw the dividing line. The inter-action of the two upon each other here becomes so rapid and intense that one scarcely knows the relation of cause and effect. I repeat—more than this. The patched and medley knowledge of the young girl to whom her mother does not speak, comes to her garbled and confused, the sacred seal of modesty torn off, spoiled with the touch of vulgar hands, defaced by the coarse jests of polite society, its sanctity forever missed. The temple has been invaded, its white floors trodden by feet from muddy alleys, the gods thrown down. Is not the temple as much ruined, when this profanation has been accomplished as if the walls had fallen? I will not be misunderstood as doubting for one moment the purity of soul of the American girls as a whole; but I assert that the result of which I have spoken is terribly common in our large cities, and that it is much more likely to be common in America than in any other country from the effect of our climate, our free institutions, and the almost universal diffusion of printed matter.

The remedy lies alone in the hands of the mother, and where a girl is away from her mother, in the hands of her woman guardian, whoever she may be. When our women are better educated, there will be less prudery and more real modesty. I quote again from Rosenkranz, because I cannot improve upon his words: "Modesty is the feeling of the primitive harmony of nature and spirit, and it is very decidedly active in children, however unconstrained they are with regard to nature. True modesty is as far removed from coarseness as it is from prudery. Coarseness takes a delight in making the relation of the sexes the subject of ambiguous, witty, shameless talking and jesting, and it is just as blamable as prudery, which externally affects an innocence no longer existing therein. Here is, consequently, the point in which physical education must pass over into moral education, and where the purity of the heart must hallow the body."

A New Currency.

[Portland Advertiser.]

A large amount of drafts, similar to bank-bills, and drawn in amounts of one dollar and upward, are being put in circulation in this section of New England, the Aroostook section of the State, we understand, being Eterally flooded with them. They are drawn by parties resident in the Dominion of Canada on bankers in Boston and intended for general circulation. The probability seems to be that these drafts are re-issued by the Boston bankers, and not endorsed once, or stamped. The proceeding appears like an evasion of the banking laws of both this country and Canada, and works against the legitimate and taxable notes of our circulation. The drafts are all made payable in current funds of the United States.

Upon representation of the above facts to the Treasury Department at Washington the Commissioner has written to the collector of Internal Revenue in this city, Mr. F. J. Rollins, informing him that there is a penalty of $200, for paying, negotiating, offering in payment, receiving, or taking in payment any such draft or order purporting to be drawn in a foreign country but payable in the United States, without its first being duly stamped with a two cent stamp, like an inland draft or order drawn at sight, on a bank, banker or trust company. The collector is also referred to the acts of Congress in reference to the tax of ten per cent. upon the amount of such drafts, or notes, paid out by any State bank, etc., and as to the tax on amount of circulation.

As we understand, these notes are paid out in large quantities to country traders who have been accepting them and sending them into banks here, as if they were United States legal tenders.

Arkansas.

Despatches received from the chief justice of Arkansas express the opinion that a conflict will probably be avoided. The President has indicated his purpose to sustain the courts in whatever judgment they may give. After consultation over the situation, as set forth in despatches received from official sources, the Secretary of War has instructed the commanding officer of the United States forces at Little Rock to take no part in the political contest now pending, except it may become necessary to prevent bloodshed by actual collision between the armed forces. The Attorney General has sent an order to the United States marshal at Little Rock, directing him to exercise the utmost possible vigilence to promptly inform the military authorities at Little Rock, of all the signs of outbreaks. The republican members of the house and senators from Arkansas seem to be generally satisfied with the decision of the court in favor of Brooks and with his subsequent taking possession of the governor's office. There is great dissatisfaction among the republicans from that section with Baxter, and all agree that since his election he has been attempting to put the offices of the State into the hands of many of the most objectionable democrats, in some cases even appointing notorious ku-klux to office. It is expected that the Supreme Court of the State, to which the case has been carried, will sustain the judgment of the court below and that Brooks will be maintained in office. Whatever trouble occurs, the belief of the Arkansas delegation is that it cannot become general in the State, and that it will be very short-lived in any quarter.

The Sad Accident at North Hampton.

The fatal accident at North Hampton on Saturday, the 11 inst. occurred as follows: Deacon Abraham Drake, an estimable and useful citizen, was engaged with a yoke of steers in putting away for the summer a large two-horse sled. He had fastened the steers to the pole of the sled with a rope, and had taken it back of his buildings to the place he intended to leave it. On going between them to untie the rope, the steers took fright, and ran at full speed. He clung to the pole as long as possible, but at length losing his hold, he fell before the sled, was dragged for a considerable distance, and finally run over and left. He received several gashes and bruises about the head and neck, and such injury to the spinal cord as to paralyze completely the whole lower portion of the body and limbs. He called for assistance, but no one being within hearing, he remained in this condition for some twenty minutes. At length his wife seeing the steers with the sled in the yard, and wondering at his absence, made search for him, and found him back of the barn in the state already described. She procured assistance at once and conveyed him to the house. Although perfectly conscious and free to converse, he sunk gradually till Tuesday night, three days from the accident, when he quietly breathed his last. Deceased was fifty-eight years of age, and leaves a wife, but no children. His loss is much to be deplored by his family and friends, by the Congregational church, of which for many years he was Deacon, and by the society, whose interests he was always ready to promote.

Schooner Minnie, of Halifax, N. S., with six men, is supposed lost with all on board. Schooner J. F. Huntress, of Gloucester, Mass., was run down by an unknown vessel in the same gale which is supposed to have sunk the Minnie, and but one man (the cook) was saved.

The Massachusetts Senatorship.

On the first ballot, Friday, Mr. Hoar for the first time led the voting, the result of which was as follows: Hoar 93, Dawes 92, Curtis 67, Banks 7, Adams 4, Washburn 1, Whittier 1. On the second ballot Dawes had 72, Hoar 75, Curtis 69, Banks 12, Adams 19, Washburn 10, Loring 3, Whittier 1, Pitman 1, Sanford 1, Hale 1, Phillips 1. On the third ballot Sanford had 1, Gifford 1, Stearns 1, Morrisey 1, Hoar 4, Banks 14, Loring 21, Curtis 60, Washburn 110; thirty or forty members then changed their votes, and William B. Washburn was elected U. S. Senator.

State News.

John Callaghan Moore of the Concord People insulted the wife of Ashbel F. (not Howard F.) Hill of the Patriot, as Hill alleges, and he being a much smaller man and enraged at the thought, smote John C. across the upper lip with a cane, while walking on Main street, Thursday. A surgeon sewed up the painful wound, and Ashbel, feeling satisfied with the punishment inflicted, cast the dust of Concord streets from his feet, and without danger of arrest, returned to the interior of the State, where democracy doth thrive and ladies are free from street abuse.

Pilgrims to New London are not so very numerous as before election, and it is just as well after all, for the mail stage between that place and Potter Place had to be shovelled out repeatedly on the morning of the 15th, so deep were the snow drifts.

Frank M. Rollins of Lake Village managed, while throwing wood into a shed from a pile out-of-doors, to fall down with a big stick across his neck. Being unable to extricate himself, Frank remained in that condition until an individual sauntered that way, when he was black in the face from strangulation, and entirely unconscious.

Stratham is to have a new town house, and $4200 will build it.

Says the News-Letter: Recently the owners of the steam saw mill in Stratham erected a three-tenement dwelling house and the same was occupied by three families. Thirty-nine hours before, the lumber from which the building was constructed was nodding and bending submissively to the gentle breezes of spring. Who dares say we are on the hemlock side of creation?

Joseph Pickard of Canterbury has too much ill-temper for his own profit. While tying up cattle recently, a steer attempted to enter the door-way before Joseph wanted to see him, whereupon Joe remonstrated with a blow on the head with a club, and Mr. Steer got so mad about it that he died instantly, thereby entailing considerable loss on the Canterbury farmer, involving funeral expenses.

The vote for Mayor of Keene was as follows: Henry Colony, democrat, 735; Thos. M. Edwards, republican, 642; Colony's majority 93. Three of the five aldermen and nine of the fifteen councilmen are democrats. At the March election, McCutchins had 806 votes, Weston 640, all others 12. And now first thing you know, Keene will have an available candidate for the democratic nomination for Governor—a la Manchester.

Business Notices.

Dr. Hebbard in Concord.

It comes to us that this great Health-Orator is lecturing in Concord, to delighted audiences. This news will doubtless please many of our readers, for many of his warm admirers here have heard that this "live man" was dead.

Our Changing Bodies.

Our bodies are constantly changing. The dead matter passes off by the bowels and the pores, and digestion and assimilation supply fresh material. This material cannot be pure, and consequently the body cannot be healthy unless the stomach and the secretive organs perform their allotted tasks thoroughly and regularity. That they may do so, keep them in good working order with that most efficient of all invigorating, regulating and purifying preparations, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. If you wish your blood to be really the "stream of life," to have your bones clothed with sound flesh, to be exempt from nervousness and debility, to be clear-headed and cheerful; in short, to possess that choicest of Heaven's blessings, a sound mind in a sound body, resort to the great vegetable restorative whenever you feel languid, or suffer from indigestion, or are bilious or low spirited, or suffering from any derangement of the animal functions. The relief is immediate, and full restoration certain.

No Other Medicine ever attained such an unprecedented sale as HELMBOLD'S BUCHU. Its name and fame are known everywhere; and it deserves its great reputation, for it has undoubted merit. It is warranted to cure all diseases of the kidneys and the urinary organs. Beware of counterfeits. Genuine has private propriety stamp of H. T. Helmbold on each bottle. For sale by all druggists.

Something Certain at Last.—PILES is not only one of the most painful of human diseases, but proverbial men had almost despaired of finding a remedy, until the introduction of ANAKESIS by DR. SILSBEE, and after an experience of 20,000 cases in five years, doctors agree that an infallible remedy has been found. Sufferers will appreciate ANAKESIS after trying everything else in vain and then experiencing the bliss of instant relief and ultimate cure. Price $1. Sold by druggists everywhere. Principal Depot, 46 Walker st., New York.

For Moth Patches, Freckles and Tan

Ask your Druggist for Perry's Moth and Freckle Lotion, which is harmless and in every case infallible. Or for his Improved COMEDONE and PIMPLE REMEDY, the great SKIN MEDICINE for Pimples, Black Heads or Flesh Worms. Or consult B. C. PERRY, the noted Skin Doctor, 49 Bond St., New York. a 19 D 6m

SUFFERERS from Scrofula and Scrofulous affections, clean up! Why wear your Pimples, Blotches, Ulcers, Sores? Why have your life twisted out of you by Dyspepsia, Rheumatism and Gout? Why suffer Syphilitic and Mercurial diseases to rot the bones in your body, or the flesh off your bones? Why let your sluggish blood drag, and scatter its distempers through your veins? AYER'S COMP. EXT OF SARSAPARILLA cures these complaints, and cleanses them out of the system. Use it faithfully, and you bring to society a healthier, cleaner, and far more acceptable member.—[Democrat, Baltimore, Md.]

HERE THEY ARE COMPLETED AND

FOR SALE.

TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1616 to '20; the aborigines, Indians, in canoes and on shore; Smith's antiquated bark at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Gerrish's island, &c.

The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in its palmy days, the Light-House at its original height, and a lively sea view, at about 1820—a fine picture of days when the whole hill ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the embalmed canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a devoted son of old "Strawberry Bank," so called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.

Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—as the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-office.

City Affairs.

In Board of Mayor and Alderman, Thursday evening, Petition of C. H. Mendum for repairs on Wibird street; petition of the school committee of wards two and three, for repairs of school houses; and petition of John Kelly for sidewalks, were referred to the appropriate committees.

The Bonds of the police officers were accepted and approved.

The City Marshal's quarterly report (ending March 31st,) was referred to the Committee on Police. Number of arrests 158; lodgers 340; total 498. Received for fines and costs, $215.99; amount disbursed, $50.75; amount due city, $165,24.

The committee on claims reported on the following bills. W. H. Hackett, City Solicitor, without recommendation; said bill was laid on the table. C. H. Sides & Co., bill for damages to hack by Fire Engine No. 1; ordered, that the bill, $30, be paid. Eliza E. Lolley, bill for nursing; leave to withdraw. B. F. Mugridge, bill for damage to fence; referred to Board of Engineers.

Committee on Fire Department reported that they had employed Charles W. Roberts to ring the Depot bell for fire alarms for seven dollars per year. The action of the Committee was approved.

Voted, That the City Solicitor be requested to appear before the Board at its next meeting and define his duties.

The financial report of the School Committee for the year 1873 was presented and accepted. Paid for Teachers, $18,800; wood and coal, $2284.84; contingent, $1371.64; total, $22,455.98.

Voted, That the Committee on Printing be directed to have the Mayor's address and the financial report of the School Committee printed immediately.

The Mayor and Aldermen Sise and Lefavour were appointed a Supervisory Committee on Records, Journals and Accounts.

Committee on Printing recommended that the bill ($304) of L. W. Brewster, for printing the Revised Ordinances, be paid; and it was so ordered.

Petition of the Assistant Marshals that the Revised Ordinance may be so amended as to fix the salaries of said officers at $730 per annum was accepted. The Board refused to refer said petition to the Committee on Police.

The following preamble and resolution was accepted:

Whereas, It has come to the knowledge of the City Government that a new Ocean Telegraph Cable will soon be landed in our vicinity; and

Whereas, An event of that character is such as will redound to the fame as well as to the material interest of the City; therefore

Be it Resolved by the Board of Mayor and Aldermen of the City of Portsmouth, N. H., that a committee be appointed by this Board, consisting of the Mayor and two Aldermen, whose duty it shall be to communicate with the gentlemen at the head of this great international enterprise, tender them the courtesies of the City, and offer them such facilities toward forwarding their enterprise as come within the province of the city government.

The Mayor and Aldermen Sise and Lefavour were appointed said committee.

Voted, That the Mayor and City Clerk be directed to report the action of this Board to the Telegraph Corporation (the American Atlantic Cable Company).

Several special Police Officers were appointed without pay, also seven supernumerary police.

Voted, That a Committee of Three be appointed from this Board to make a correct appraisal of the stock and property at the City Farm.

The Mayor and Aldermen Hayes, Trefethen and Sise were appointed.

S. J. Court.

The suit of Olynthus A. Simpson vs. Absalom Hazelton to recover $110 said to be due on the sale of chestnut posts was decided for defendant, who acknowledged the amount of $40 to be due, and paid it.

On Thursday, the case of the Atlantic Mutual Fire Insurance Co. vs. J. D. Akerman was heard by the Court, and will be argued in writing. The company's suit was for two assessments, amounting to $7.50. The defence was irregularity of proceedings.

Hampton Falls voted at the recent election to instruct its representative to use his influence for the passage of an act obliging parties bringing suits before the county court for settlement, to pay the expenses of the court while so employed.

David Marshall, charged with entering a store and stealing $18 worth of groceries in this city, was on Friday found guilty and sentenced to eight months' imprisonment in the county jail and to pay a fine of $50.

Charles and George F. Snow, for swindling people in this city by selling plated rings which they said were gold, have each been sentenced to sixty days in jail and to pay costs, and George to a fine of twenty dollars in addition.

Henry Beckman of Seabrook, for stealing a cheap chain from George A. Weare, received a sentence of imprisonment for five months and to pay costs.

Laconics.

As a Mr. Staples, of Eliot, was driving across the bridge at Noble's Island on Friday forenoon, his horse (a blind one) took fright at the noise of a train of cars, and jumped over the railing of the bridge into the water. The wagon and man fortunately remained on the bridge, the wagon not greatly harmed and Mr. Staples not at all. The horse, though blind and frightened, knew enough to make for a landing, which he effected at Christian Shore, where he was captured; but he immediately broke away again, took to the water and swam back to Noble's Island, where he finally landed apparently none the worse for his dive and swim. Lucky for him that he did not hit one of the sunken piles alongside the bridge, when he jumped over.

Foster's Democrat says: "The Portsmouth & Dover Railroad seems to be doing a pretty fair business in freight as well as passengers. We have noticed the freight trains gradually growing in length every week since the road was opened. Five or six car loads of freight are now carried over the road two or three times daily, while it is becoming a common sight to see two or three passenger cars loaded with passengers every trip."

A greater amount of coal is to be brought to this city this year than for any year previous. Fifteen colliers arrived on one day this week.

The Newcastle and Rye bridge and road case was heard by the County Commissioners, Friday. Decision reserved. J. W. F. Hobbs, Esq., of North Hampton, served as a substitute for Hon. Frank W. Miller, who being a resident of Portsmouth is a party in interest. The party was handsomely entertained by Chas. E. Campbell, Esq., on his island.

Our cheerful contemporary, the Keene Sentinel, playfully remarks that "it appears that the democratic victory in Connecticut lacks the element of completeness!" Can it say as much of the democratic victory in Keene? Oh! "why should the spirit of mortal be proud?"

Colonel Joshua Winslow Peirce.

["H." in Boston Advertiser.]

In the death of this venerable and well-known citizen of Portsmouth, the community in which he lived, and a large circle of relatives and friends, mourn the loss of no ordinary man; and it is fitting that at least a brief notice of his life and virtues should be placed on record.

Colonel Peirce was of an old and highly respectable family, long settled in Portsmouth, where it has for many generations held an influential position in society, and where several of its members have been eminent merchants, while others have occupied important offices and administered important public trusts.

The fullest account of the family that has been published (Brewster's Rambles) states that in 1666 Daniel Peirce of Newbury, Mass., with his son Joshua, became interested in lands in New Jersey, and both resided there for some time, the former, probably, in Perth Amboy, while the latter, and perhaps both, resided in Woodbridge, where also a considerable number of people from Newbury and other parts of eastern Massachusetts, and from the Piscataqua, were settled. Joshua died in Woodbridge in 1670. The latter had a son Joshua, born probably in Newbury, who lived for some time, it is said, in Elizabeth Town, N. J., and removed to Portsmouth about the year 1700, and married Elizabeth Hale of Greenland. He entered largely into business, carried on a fishery at Canso, owned several ships and was otherwise concerned in navigation. He brought up a large family and left a good estate. In the course of his very active life he held various public offices, such as town clerk, parish clerk, clerk of the Proprietors of Portsmouth Commons, selectman, representative in the provincial assembly, and for many years before his death was a member of "His Majesty's council," and recorder of deeds for the province. Most of these records are extant, and, together with many private records, especially those of the births, marriages and deaths in Portsmouth, which he kept for his own use, are valuable memorials of the time. After a life of strict integrity and of varied usefulness, he died in 1743, leaving four sons and five daughters.

His son Daniel (H. U., 1728) was born in 1709, and married Anna, daughter of John Rindge, then one of the principal merchants of Portsmouth, and one of the most eminent in New England of that time. He succeeded his father as recorder of deeds for the province, was a member of the King's council for some years, and for a long time was the chief magistrate in Portsmouth. It is said that he had considerable learning, being well versed in history, theology, law, geography and the mechanic arts. He died in 1773, leaving three children.

John, the eldest of these, was born in 1746, and was educated in the counting-house of Daniel Rindge, also of Portsmouth. He was early charged with the management of the estate of his maternal uncle, Mark Hunking Wentworth, son of Lieutenant-Governor John Wentworth (the father of Governor John Wentworth), and brother of Governor Benning Wentworth. Afterward he was intrusted with the care of the important interests of the Masonian Proprietors. In 1791 and afterward he was a member of the legislature. The Piscataqua bridge and the turnpike from Portsmouth to Concord were constructed chiefly under his agency. He was United States loan-officer during the administration of John Adams, and had the respect and confidence of his fellow-citizens. He died in 1814. By his wife, Mary, daughter of Peter Pearse, he had six children, viz.: Mark Wentworth, who married Margaret Sparhawk; Samuel, who died young; Joshua Winslow; Ann Rindge, who married the late Rev. Charles Burroughs, D. D., (H. U. 1806); Mary O., who died young; and Daniel Hall (H. U. 1820); of whom Mrs. Burroughs and Daniel H. Peirce, M. D., survive.

Joshua Winslow Peirce, the subject of this sketch, was born in Portsmouth, May 14, 1791. On the 4th of May, 1843, he was married to Emily, daughter of Wm. Sheafe, a leading citizen and merchant of Portsmouth. They had several children, of whom five sons and two daughters survive. Mrs. Peirce died March 9, 1871, and her husband died on the 10th of April instant.

Colonel Peirce was educated at Phillips Academy, Exeter, under the celebrated Dr. Abbott. From 1807 to 1815 he was in the counting-room of Hon. James Sheafe, (H. U. 1744) a representative and a senator in the federal Congress.

He visited Europe in 1816, and remained abroad about two years. On his return, and until 1823, he was employed in mercantile pursuits in Portsmouth. In 1823 he was a manufacturer, and continued in the management of the woolen mills in Salmon Falls, Somersworth (now Rollinsford), N. H., until the mills were burned in 1836. In 1836-7 he resided in Portsmouth, and in 1838 he became a farmer, and removed to his large landed estates in the neighboring town of Greenland. There he remained till 1866, when he removed to Portsmouth, where he has lived up to the time of his death.

This outline of his long and active life conveys but a faint idea of the manifold interests that engaged his mind, and much of his time and sympathies. To those who ever saw his large estate in Greenland and Newington, lying along the southerly part of the Great Bay, with its broad acres of inexhaustible soil, its meadows, upland and orchards; its quaint houses, spacious barns and store-houses; its fruit and shade trees; its strong fences of wood and faced stone; its herds of pure blood stock; its constant aspect of skilful husbandry and tillage, need not be told that Colonel Peirce was a model farmer. This estate, inherited in part, and in part acquired by purchase, was a source of great pleasure to its owner. Moreover it had historic associations, as having once belonged to Captain Francis Champernowne, (the "trusty and well-beloved" nephew of Sir Ferdinando Gorges), who lived upon it at one time.

Here Colonel Peirce was able to gratify his taste, and indulge his passion for independent country life. Here he brought his family, and dispensed those liberal and elegant hospitalities which made his house a coveted resort for a large circle of attached friends. To see him at the head of his table, or in his drawing-room, always the chief object of interest and attraction, was to realize what is seldom experienced in this country now, and never was, to any great extent, except in Virginia, in the colonial days, and is more generally witnessed among the landed gentry of England.

His influence and example in that community was always high-toned. He was interested in maintaining good schools, and the highways of that region, so justly celebrated and so inviting to the traveller, are chiefly due to his liberality and active interest.

Colonel Peirce was brought up in the Episcopal church, and was always a stanch friend of its institutions. During the greater portion of his life he was a communicant in St. John's church, Portsmouth, and was seldom absent from his place at the public services. He held the offices of senior warden and treasurer of that church for many years, and was a liberal supporter of its interests.

Having large estate in Portsmouth, also, he was always deeply interested in all its affairs,—its schools, roads, supply of good water and its local charities. To these objects he was neither an unwilling nor ungenerous contributor.

He was a member of several historical societies, and during the latter years of his life, especially, he was greatly interested in their work. He was also a generous patron of the periodical and newspaper press, his subscription list being larger than that of any man with whom we were acquainted. His papers and periodicals were carefully preserved, and his collection at this time must be both very large and valuable.

He eschewed political life, and though often urged would not accept public office, unless his colonelcy of the "Gilman Blues," a somewhat famous corps years ago, may be an exception to the rule he adopted. His constant refusal of office was not due to any want of interest in public affairs, for he seldom, if ever, stayed away from the polls. By education, close study and sound judgment he was eminently qualified for public trusts, but his modesty and love of independence dictated his choice of private life and station.

As a man of business he was a model of precision, industry and integrity. His town office was crowded with the proofs of his methodical and scrupulous care over all the interests committed to him. It was his custom, before retiring at night, not only to enter in his account-books all the pecuniary transactions of the day, but to enter in his journal very full memoranda of whatever had occurred within his cognizance. This habit he kept up until about eighteen months ago, when his last sickness overtook him.

Colonel Pierce was a man of strong and ardent feelings and decided convictions. His intimacies were few; his social friendships were based on a thorough knowledge of the men and women who were admitted to them. Such friendships were enduring, and the tongue of slander or misrepresentation was never able to alienate him from one whom he had once admitted to his confidence.

Under a martial and somewhat stern outward demeanor, there beat in him a warm and true heart. He was all he seemed, and more. A faithful husband, an indulgent and exemplary parent, a good citizen, a strong friend and a consistent Christian passed away when he died.

Peace to his ashes!

LAWS
UNITED STATES
PASSED AT THE
FIRST SESSION OF THE FORTY-THIRD CONGRESS.

[GENERAL NATURE—No. 16.]

AN ACT to amend the act entitled "An act to encourage the growth of timber on western prairies."

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, That the act entitled "An act to encourage the growth of timber on western prairies," approved March third, eighteen hundred and seventy-three, be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows: That any person who is the head of a family or who has arrived at the age of twenty-one years, and is a citizen of the United States, or who shall have filed his declaration of intention to become such, as required by the naturalization laws of the United States, who shall plant, protect, and keep in a healthy, growing condition for eight years, forty acres of timber, the trees thereon not being more than twelve feet apart each way, on any quarter-section of any of the public lands of the United States, or twenty acres on any legal subdivision of eighty acres, or ten acres on any legal subdivision of forty acres, or one fourth part of any fractional subdivision of land less than forty acres, shall be entitled to a patent for the whole of said quarter-section, or of such legal subdivision of eighty or forty acres, or fractional subdivision of less than forty acres, as the case may be, at the expiration of said eight years, on making proof of such fact by not less than two credible witnesses: Provided, That not more than one quarter of any section shall be thus granted, and that no person shall make more than one entry under the provisions of this act, unless fractional subdivisions of less than forty acres are entered which, in the aggregate, shall not exceed one quarter-section.

SEC. 2. That the person applying for the benefit of this act shall, upon application to the register of the land-district in which he or she is about so make such entry, make affidavit before the register, or the receiver, or some officer authorized to administer oaths in the district where the land is situated, who is required by law to use an official seal, that said entry is made for the cultivation of timber, and upon filing said affidavit with said register and said receiver, and on payment of ten dollars, he or she shall thereupon be permitted to enter the quantity of land specified; and the party making an entry of a quarter-section under the provisions of this act shall be required to break ten acres of the land covered thereby the first year, ten acres the second year, and twenty acres the third year after date of entry, and to plant ten acres of timber the second year, ten acres the third year, and twenty acres the fourth year after date of entry. A party making an entry of eighty acres shall break and plant at the times hereinbefore prescribed, one-half of the quantity required of a party who enters a quarter-section, and a party entering forty acres shall break and plant, at the times hereinbefore prescribed, one-quarter of the quantity required of a party who enters a quarter-section, or a proportionate quantity for any smaller fractional subdivision: Provided, however, That no final certificate shall be given or patent issued for the land so entered until the expiration of eight years from the date of such entry; and, if at the expiration of such time, or at any time within five years thereafter, the person making such entry, or if he or she be dead, his or her heirs or legal representatives shall prove, by two credible witnesses, that he, or she, or they have planted, and, for not less than eight years, have cultivated and protected such quantity and character of timber as aforesaid, they shall receive a patent for such quarter-section or legal subdivision of eighty or forty acres of land, or for any fractional quantity of less than forty acres, as herein provided. And in case of the death of a person who has complied with the provisions of this act for the period of three years, his heirs or legal representatives shall have the option to comply with the provisions of this act, and receive, at the expiration of eight years, a patent for one hundred and sixty acres, or receive without delay a patent for forty acres, relinquishing all claim to the remainder.

SEC. 3. That if at any time after the filing of said affidavit, and prior to the issuing of the patent for said land, the claimant shall abandon the land, or fail to do the breaking and planting required by this act, or any part thereof, or shall fail to cultivate, protect, and keep in good condition such timber, then, and in that event, such land shall be subject to entry under the homestead laws, or by some other person under the provisions of this act: Provided, That the party making claim to said land, either as a homestead settler or under this act, shall give, at the time of filing his application, such notice to the original claimant as shall be prescribed by the rules established by the Commissioner of the General Land-Office, and the rights of the parties shall be determined in the same contested cases.

SEC. 4. That each and every person who, under the provisions of the act entitled "An act to secure homesteads to actual settlers on the public domain," approved May twentieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, or any amendment thereto, having a homestead on said public domain, who, at any time after the end of the third year of his or her residence thereon shall, in addition to the settlement and improvements now required by law, have had under cultivation, for two years, one acre of timber, the trees thereon not being more than twelve feet apart each way, and in a good thrifty condition, for each and every sixteen acres of said homestead, shall, upon due proof of such fact by two credible witnesses receive his or her patent for said homestead.

SEC. 5. That no land acquired under the provisions of this act shall in any event become liable to the satisfaction of any debt or debts contracted prior to the issuing of certificate therefor.

SEC. 6. That the Commissioner of the General Land-Office is hereby required to prepare and issue such rules and regulations, consistent with this act, as shall be necessary and proper to carry its provisions into effect; and that the registers and the receivers of the several land-offices shall each be entitled to receive two dollars at the time of entry, and the same sum when the claim is finally established and the final certificate issued.

SEC. 7. That the fifth section of the act entitled "An act in addition to an act to punish crimes against the United States, and for other purposes," approved March third, eighteen hundred and fifty-seven, shall extend to all oaths, affirmations and affidavits required or authorized by this act.

SEC. 8. That parties who have already made entries under the act approved March third, eighteen hundred and seventy-three, of which this is amendatory, shall be permitted to complete the same upon full compliance with the provisions of this act.

Approved, March 13, 1874.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS,
For all the Purposes of a Family Physic

CURING

Costiveness, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Dysentery, Foul Stomach and Breath, Erysipelas, Headache, Piles, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Tetter, Tumors and Salt Rheum, Worms, Gout, Neuralgia, as a Dinner Pill, and purifying the Blood,

are the most congenial purgative yet perfected. Their effects abundantly show how mild, they excel all other Pills. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. They purge out the foul humors of the blood; they stimulate the sluggish or disordered organ into action, and they impart health and tone to the whole being. They cure not only the every-day complaints of everybody, but formidable and dangerous diseases. Most skillful physicians, most eminent clergymen, and our best citizens send certificates of cures performed, and of great benefits they have derived from these Pills. They are the safest and best physic for children, because mild as well as effectual. Being sugar-coated, they are easy to take; and being purely vegetable, they are entirely harmless.

'73 REUNION.

THE "HISTORY OF THE RETURN OF THE SONS & DAUGHTERS OF PORTSMOUTH, JULY, 1873," is just published. It contains 36 pages, octavo, and is a thorough detail of everything relating to the three Festal Days,

The Reunion, July 4th,
High School Reunion, 5th,
The Praise Meeting, 6th;

and containing a

Verbatim Report

of every speech that was uttered at the Tent on the 4th and 5th, besides giving a full report of all the Reunion preliminary movements in Portsmouth, Boston and New York. Much of the matter of this work has never yet appeared in any form, and we think it will prove interesting to all who participated in the

Three Days' Jubilee.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA DEBILITY. DROPSY AND RUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

SOLICITOR OF PATENTS.
For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs
NO. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.
After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.
No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.
All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.
TESTIMONIALS.
"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."
"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."
"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Clawed by a Lioness.

The Baltimore American says: "In the procession made through the streets recently by Forepaugh's circus and menagerie was a large open cage containing a lion and lioness and two tigers, Mr. Forepaugh thus giving the spectators an opportunity of viewing the beasts through the iron bars gratis. After the tour of the city had been made and the caravan had returned to the Belair lot, this cage was halted near the corner of Forrest and Orleans streets, and became the centre of attraction for a crowd of youths. Several boys had thought to show their courage by approaching very near the bars, and one went so far as to strike the lioness in the face, whilst another annoyed the animal by hitting her with a stick. She became vexed at this unusual familiarity, and when a boy named John Rock pushed another boy named Henry Herming directly against the bars of the cage the lioness considered her turn to get satisfaction had arrived, and she promptly went for Herming's scalp. She thrust out her front paws, and, grasping him at the forehead and back of the head, lifted him from his feet in the attempt to get him in the direction of her mouth. A cry of horror went up from the bystanders, who rushed to the rescue of the boy; but the weight of the body, when the lioness lifted him from the ground, caused the skin to give way, and the claws of the beast thus loosing their hold the boy fell to the ground. He was picked up and carried to a drug store near by, and thence taken to the office of Dr. Thos. J. L. Yates, who dressed his injuries. The skin was torn from the forehead, and a piece of the scalp was removed from the back of the head. The boy suffered no permanent injury by the mishap, but says he has no further desire to test the good nature of 4-pawed beasts. Mr. Forepaugh paid the bill for medical attendance."

Adam's Rib.

[Chicago Tribune.]

The prevailing characteristic of the present era is the mania for riding hobbies, and the curvettings and caracollings of some of these variegated animals are peculiarly distressing to the staid old orthodox steeds which never wander out of their pastures or kick up behind. The most remarkable hobby which has come prancing into the public view has just been mounted by a Pennsylvania philosopher. He sets forth his views upon the woman question in the Lancaster Herald; and, if there are any spirited women in his vicinity, it is more than likely that they have made it quite lively for the old gentleman before this. The ancient Stoics held that man is a detached fragment of the universal Spirit, or Creator, to be reunited therewith after death, but losing his identity. Our Pennsylvania philosopher puts woman one remove farther from the universal Spirit. He argues that, as woman is part of man, having originally been taken from him while asleep, in the form of a rib, so she becomes a part of man again and loses her separate existence after death. He says:

"Woman is the offspring of man in his pristine state of celibacy while sound asleep. Therefore she is not a separate entity or an original creation, but the counterpart of man, coming back to him in death, as clinging to him in life, and vanishing in eternity as dreams by daylight. Hence it is that the Scriptures speak of man as having dominion, command women to keep silence, and never represent angels in the capacity of females."

This is not the worst! In elucidating his theory he becomes very ungallant, and speaks of woman as the somnambulistic rib of man, "though often apparently a terrible reality." If the philosopher's experience had been as varied as that of some men, the "apparently terrible reality" would have been to him an actual reality. There are not wanting numbers of women who are anything but somnambulistic ribs. For instance, Susan B. Anthony as a somnambulistic rib is an idea which it is impossible to contemplate, or even conceive; but as a terrible reality it is possible to form a very vivid idea of her; and when Miss Anthony gets hold of the Pennsylvania philosopher and his theory that she will be eventually swallowed up in some masculine identity, she will probably convince him, not only of her reality, but also of the terror of her reality. The part of the philosopher's theory, however, which will give him the most trouble is the cool manner in which he obliterates the female element from the next world. The philosopher evidently fears this, as he says, by way of compensation:

"She may be consoled with the thought that, as she is not made of the dust of the earth, but was eliminated from a living body by the hand divine, the same great power will preserve the soul with which he endowed her in the same miraculous manner with which it was given to that fairer form it ennobles here below."

This is very handsome on the part of the philosopher, but it suggests a possibility that will not be consoling to the average man. A Heaven filled with male angels, male cherubs, and male seraphs, is not a very pleasing prospect. As there is a fearful scarcity of male angels, cherubs, and seraphs on earth, where is the material to come from? There is another possibility which the philosopher has not contemplated. There are numerous women who are not better halves. In what men are these unfortunates to be merged, and are they to have any choice of the men they are to be merged into hereafter, or are they swallowed up haphazard? In the latter case, it is distressing to contemplate the incongruous mixtures which may happen, as, for instance, some gentle, unoffending woman dwelling hereafter and through all eternity in some old bruiser or shoulder-hitter, or some mild, innocuous man carrying about with him forever a termagant, a sour old maid, or a designing widow. The philosopher's theory is a bitter pill to swallow, and we presume very few will take the dose. He will be left to canter about alone on his hobby, which is at least harmless, even if it is a little ridiculous.

MONDAY, APRIL 20, 1874.

The Temperance Movement.

Quite a number of the representative temperance men and women, being committees from various temperance organizations in Concord, held a private conference, and made the necessary preliminary arrangements for carrying on a temperance campaign during the spring months. Two committees were appointed, one to make arrangements for a rousing meeting, on the last Sabbath evening of the month, and the other to draft forms of pledges to be presented to liquor dealers, druggists and physicians, and other classes. A free interchange of views was had, most of the clergymen of the city and some prominent ladies being present, and it was found that all agreed that some organized and resolute effort was called for; while none advocated a strict adherence to the plans of the western women, all expressed an earnest desire that the temperance men and women should unite in a determined effort to free the city from rum. Judging from present indications a lively campaign may be expected.

Readables.

The Portland Advertiser thinks the decision of Judge Virgin in the Biddeford election case will "relieve Mayor Warren of a good deal of responsibility with which he ought not to be unnecessarily burdened."

Senator Cragin's bill amendatory of act of February 17, 1862, for the better government of the navy, provides that petty officers and seamen shall be sent home to some port on the Atlantic or Pacific coast, on which ever they enlisted, on expiration of their terms of enlistment, unless detained by requirements of public service, in which case they shall be subject to all laws and regulations of the navy, but be allowed one fourth additional pay.

The news from Arkansas shows no material change of the situation except additional indications of a determination on the part of both of the rival governors to maintain their claims at all hazards, being actively engaged in strengthening their respective positions. Public feelings seems strongly in favor of Baxter and an address signed by the better part of the citizens of Little Rock has been issued in his interest. A military order calling on the people to enlist in support of Baxter has been followed by a general obedience.

Pullman cars direct from Boston to Chicago, by way of Montreal, is a realization of a dream which may soon be expected.

The anti-inflation committee from New York called on the President, Friday, and urged upon him the veto of the senate finance bill. The President in his reply did not commit himself to any course, though expressing himself unequivocally against expansion without provision for the redemption of specie payments.

The defeat of Henry L. Dawes for Senator by the Massachusetts legislature is one of the most agreeable features of the late contest. Dawes is a truckling demagogue, who twice deserted his friends to help their enemies, by delivering speeches in Congress which were based on false premises or if true were afterward apologized for and explained away. If Dawes' coalition with Gen. Butler was the means of his defeat, New Hampshire republicans are under especial obligations to the General for his friendship being cast that way. Political hypocrisy generally brings its author low in the long run.

Lieut.-Gov. Thomas Talbot will succeed Hon. Wm. B. Washburn as Governor of Massachusetts. Governor Talbot, it is said, will sign a license law should the legislature pass one, while Governor Washburn we have vetoed it.

The steamer Amerique, before reported lost off Ushant, foundered in a violent gale and heavy sea. Like the Ville de Havre and Europe, belonging to the same line, she had been lengthened,—as if her material (iron) did not make her a poor enough vessel in the first place.

Schooner Wind, Warwick, master, owned by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, and loaded with coal, was run down and sunk off Beaver Tail on Friday morning. Vessel total loss; crew saved. The steamer A. C. Barstow, which sunk her, was not much injured.

Steamship Nederlands, from Antwerp for Philadelphia, is ashore on Brigantine Shoals and will probably be a total loss. Most of her cargo has been thrown overboard.

There is no reason now why Spring should not come along; the Massachusetts legislature has chosen a U. S. Senator.

The residents in the inundated portions of Louisiana are said to be starving. Breaks in the levees are the cause of the trouble.

Fifty-three lives were lost by the recent colliery explosion at Lancashire, England.

The story published by a Nevada paper and telegraphed all over the Union, about a man killing his wife and two children, and his wife's seducer, with a knife, and being himself shot to death by the gay Lothario, turns out to be an "April fool" hoax. Master funny-fellow, that Nevada editor.

At the first meeting of the new democratic city council of Cincinnati an ordinance was passed repealing the Sunday and temperance ordinances by a vote of 38 to 5.

The thirty-third and last vote for Senator in the Massachusetts legislature gave Washburn 151, Curtis 64, Dawes 26, Adams 15, Banks 4, Lovering 4, Phillips 1, Whittier 1.

Another Mammoth Cave.

A correspondent of the St. Louis Democrat, who has explored a cave at Hannibal, writes the following description to that journal:

In all the works on physical geography which have fallen under our notice, not one makes the least mention of the wonderful formation near Hannibal, Missouri, although thousands upon thousands have visited it, and it has been known for at least fifty years, and every visitor has gone away wondering and questioning why the world has not heard more about it. It is a cave only second in depth, (and perhaps first, for it has never been fully explored,) to any in the world. A day spent not long since in traversing its endless galleries was filled with astonishment and wonder.

The entrance to this cavern is about two miles below Hannibal and one-half mile west of the Mississippi river. The opening, which is fifteen or twenty feet high and about ten feet broad, is probably about fifty feet above the level of the river, and faces toward the north. In company with a small party, members of the press, and a guide, we entered this opening into the bowels of the earth, carrying our torches high above our heads. This main gallery, near the entrance, varies from ten to twenty feet in height, and comes together over the top in an acute arch. The walls all through the covering are a soft white sand stone.

In some places the gallery was so narrow that we had to turn sideways to pass. The guide rushed on at a fearful rate of speed, and the first word we heard from him was, "Look out for 'wells'. You don't want to fall into them." Sure enough, right in front of us were two round holes, very like a well, indeed, but they had no water in them.

After going at a rapid pace for some time, the hall sometimes wider and sometimes narrower, we came upon the "devil's backbone," so the guide said. He must have had a huge one, if this ever belonged to him. It is petrified now into solid limestone, is about forty feet long, and lies in the middle of the hall, with a pathway on each side, and has, indeed, aside from its size, a close resemblance to a spinal column.

After making an examination of his majesty's lost vertebræ, we started on. The next thing that attracted our attention was a corridor running at right angles with the one we were following. Here we held a consultation, which course to choose, and finally decided to take the right hand, deeply regretting that we could not spend a month in this wonder of the world, so as to see it all. The guide said we would have to take a much longer time than that, if we wanted to see it all, for a party once spent a month in the cave and did not find the end of half the galleries. He pointed to some arrows on the corners of the galleries under which was written "out," and said that it was that party which had put those signs all through the cave as far as it had been explored.

Starting down this gallery toward the west (that was the last we knew about the points of the compass) we soon came to a grand room fully fifty feet high and two hundred feet long. Overhead, fastened to the ceiling, were ten thousand glistening diamonds which sparkled in the light of our torches like stars in a midnight sky.

Turning to one side we saw a low opening, perhaps two feet high, and the "Missionary" of the Chicago Times on his knees trying to crawl through. He came back complaining that the cuticle had disappeared from his knees (perhaps he was unaccustomed to the position.) The next feat he tried was to climb up the side of the cavern and knock down some of the crystals which were sparkling above on the walls and dome. When he was almost lost to sight among the ledges above, we heard a fearful cry of "bats! bats!" And, looking above, sure enough, there they were by the thousand. Expressing great surprise to the guide at the number, he said "that there were none here in comparison with 'Bat Alley,' where they were so thick that one could hardly wade through them." We did not go to "Bat Alley."

Passing along the gallery for some distance, where it became somewhat narrower we saw a finger of limestone fully fifty feet long, fastened at one end to the roof, and stretching out unsupported. The stone all around it was very soft sandstone, so soft, that we could write on it with the large end of our pencils.

As we passed along huge bowlders blocked up the way, and galleries shot out in every direction. Several of these had names written on them, and their length given in figures, as for example: Low passage, 125 yards; Fleming avenue (named after one of the exploring party mentioned above) 4,900 yards. Travelling on and on we came at last to a large room, around the sides of which there was a regular of series shelves. There was no name on it. We called it the dry goods store.

The next place that attracted our attention was Mystic Fountain, a beautiful side grotto, in the back part of which the water was constantly and silently dripping down; in most places the walls and ceilings are perfectly dry.

Leaving Mystic Fountain, we wandered off into Rogue's Gallery, which had many dark-looking side passages, and mysterious hiding places, and ends in a long, narrow fissure in the rock, fifty feet high and fourteen inches wide. Near the end of this gallery the guide picked up an indelible pencil which some one had dropped.

Striking into some of the side passages, we soon found ourselves in a very large opening, with a smooth, clean bottom, which is known as No. 10.

Everywhere in the cavern, the walls and every accessible place on the ceiling were covered with names.

There are thousands upon thousands of these autographs. Among them are A. Lincoln, 1834, and Mark Twain. By-the-way, Mr. Clemens used to reside in Hannibal. Robbers' Den, a room 500 feet long, and fifty feet wide, is a cosy place, and in early days was a nice retreat for criminals. Horrible stories are told about it. We passed the mouth of a gallery labeled Lost Gallery. The guide informed us that several attempts had been made to explore it, but as yet no one had succeeded in finding a terminus to it. As we traveled along we noticed several passages on which was an arrow, and marked beneath "To the Parlor." At last we wandered into what is called Big Gallery, which was a huge affair, and after following it for some time turned off at a narrow passage and in a few moments stepped into the "parlor." Here we took our seat upon the "sofa," and it is indeed very much like a sofa, except in its proportions, (every thing in here is on the giant order) and attacked our lunch. A few miles of travel under ground had sharpened our appetites, until we were prepared to dispatch any amount of sandwiches.

To the right of us as we sat on the sofa was the sand piano, a huge piece of sand stone fifty feet long, exactly in the shape of that instrument. We tried it, but it was out of tune. Behind was a narrow fissure in the rock about eighteen inches wide, going down to unknown depths.

Leaving the parlor, we took up the line of march again, and soon came out into a tremendous room, twenty-five feet high and thirty feet wide, and—well, there was no telling how long. As we advanced it rose in height to perhaps over one hundred feet. All at once it closed down to a common gallery again, the bottom of which was very uneven. The bottom of these galleries is yellowish clay. The decents were very easily made. The Times man introduced a style which the boys would have called "coasting," only he was minus a sled. The ascents were more difficult. After trying a few of them we called out to the guide to furnish us with better walking. We soon came to where two halls crossed each other. Following one a short distance we came upon a place where the floor suddenly descended down, down craggy crevices to depths unknown, while far above was an overhanging area, on which the torches gleamed fitfully, throwing dark shadows into the deep clefts in the side of the sandstone wall. Turning about, we started off in another direction, finding many strange formations. In some places arches were thrown across, touching at no place except upon the two points where they rested. Huge galleries shot off in every direction. We would sometimes pass a dozen in as many minutes. Some were almost closed with fallen rocks. At last the guide informed us that he could lead us no farther; that from there on we would know just as much as he did. We left him at the crossing of the two galleries and started out on exploring expeditions of our own, being careful not to get of hailing distance.

At last we started out by a different way from the one by which we came in, and visited the Grotto of the Nymphs, Fairies' Retreat, etc., etc. In one place we saw some beautiful stalactites and stalagmites; in another a beautiful spring, which the guide said they could never get a string long enough to reach the bottom of; we at last, perfectly exhausted, reached daylight once more.

A thousand weird tales are told about the cave. It is strange that some enterprising story-teller has not seized upon it as the locality of some blood and thunder novel. Unknown as it seems at present to be, it is nevertheless, and always will be, one of the wonders of the world.

How the Inflation Bill Contracts.

[Springfield Republican.]

The practical effect of the inflation bill passed by Congress is indeed a surprise to all parties. Nominally, it adds forty-four millions to the greenbacks and forty-six millions to the banking currency. All but eighteen millions of the first are already out, and the last can only be gotten out as the Government runs behind in receipts and needs it for expenses. The other can only be utilized as new banks can be organized in the Western and Southern States, and that is not likely to be done very rapidly. But, waiting for nothing, one of the incidental provisions of the bill, put on in the Senate at the instance of Mr. Scott, of Pennsylvania, will operate at once to take out of the surplus of funds in New York and drive home to the various bank vaults of the country some twenty millions of currency. This is how it is done: The old law allowed the national banks to keep three-fifths of their reserves in the city banks and draw interest on them, while they retained but two-fifths in their own vaults. By the present provision they can keep only one-quarter in the city banks and have it no object for them to do this even by forbidding the payment of interest on it, and must keep the balance, or three-quarters idle, and so unused in their own vaults. The effect of this change will be to take out of the available loanable currency of the banks, and remand to idleness, at least twenty millions—and as these twenty millions are all gathered ultimately at New York, it reduces by so much the speculating basis and material of that city. Mr. Scott knew his amendment was of a conservative tendency; it is right in principle and practice, if the banks are to be obliged to keep reserves at all; but neither he nor anybody else realized, until the bill was practically through both branches, the real extent of its conservatism and contraction. The inflationists are naturally chagrined, if not disgusted, at being thus hoist with their own petard.

Our Changing Bodies.

Our bodies are constantly changing. The dead matter passes off by the bowels and the pores, and digestion and assimilation supply fresh material. This material cannot be pure, and consequently the body cannot be healthy unless the stomach and the secretive organs perform their allotted tasks thoroughly and regularly. That they may do so, keep them in good working order with that most efficient of all invigorating, regulating and purifying preparations, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. If you wish your blood to be really the "stream of life," to have your tissues clothed with sound flesh, to be exempt from nervousness and debility, to be clear-headed and cheerful; in short, to possess that choicest of Heaven's blessings, a sound mind in a sound body, resort to the great vegetable restorative whenever you feel languid, or suffer from indigestion, or are bilious or low spirited, or suffering from any derangement of the animal functions. The relief is immediate, and full restoration certain.

No Other Medicine ever attained such an unprecedented sale as HELMBOLD'S BUCHU. Its name and fame are known everywhere; and it deserves its great reputation, for it has undoubted merit. It is warranted to cure all diseases of the kidneys and the urinary organs. Beware of counterfeits. Genuine has private propriety stamp of H. T. Helmbold on each bottle. For sale by all druggists.

Something Certain at Last.—PILES is not only one of the most painful of human diseases, but professes all men had almost despaired of finding a remedy, until the introduction of ANAKESIS by DR. SELSBEE, and after an experience of 20,000 cases in five years, doctors agree that an infallible remedy has been found. Sufferers will appreciate ANAKESIS after trying everything else in vain and then experiencing the bliss of instant relief and ultimate cure. Price $1. Sold by druggists everywhere. SUFFERERS from Scrofula and Scrofulous affections, clean up! Why wear your Pimples, Blotches, Ulcers, Sores? Why have your life twisted out of you by Dyspepsia, Rheumatism and Gout? Why suffer Syphilitic and Mercurial diseases to rot the bones in your body, or the flesh off your bones? Why let your sluggish blood drag, and scatter its distempers through your veins? AYER'S COMP. EXT OF SARSAPARILLA cures these complaints, and cleanses them out of the system. Use it faithfully, and you bring to society a healthier, cleaner, and far more acceptable member.—[Democrat, Baltimore, Md.]

SIX BLACKBOARD LECTURES

ON GEOLOGY,

TUESDAY EVENINGS,

—IN—

MECHANICS HALL,

By Prof. W. D. Gunning.

HERE THEY ARE COMPLETED AND

FOR SALE.

TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1616 to '20; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore; Smith's antiquated bark at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Gerrish's island, &c.

The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in its palmy days, the Light-House at its original height, and a lively sea view, at about 1830—a true picture of days when the white sail ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the embalmed canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of the romantic locality. They are the works of a devoted son of old "Strawberry Bank," so called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.

Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-office.

Remarkable Passage.

The ship North American, of Boston, commanded by Capt. George W. Tucker of this city, left San Francisco on the 2d of December last and arrived off Point Lynas, England, where she took a pilot, on the 5th of March, having made the passage in the remarkably short time of 95 days, 1 hour and 30 minutes, which we believe is the shortest passage on record between those two points, made under canvas alone. The best day's work made by the North American was 283 nautical miles, a little less than twelve knots an hour, made Jan. 17, six days after doubling Cape Horn; the poorest day's run was 38 miles, on the 26th of December, in the Pacific. She was very fortunate in getting "slants" for crossing the line in both oceans; in the Pacific she crossed on the 15th of January, having made 209 miles that day and 210 the day previous; and on the 16th, 17th and 18th she ran respectively 163, 258 and 268 miles. She crossed the equator in the Atlantic on the 12th of February, making 171 miles that day, 63 the day previous and 179 the day following, and 215 on the 14th. Her daily record of distances made (which of course does not give the full distances actually sailed) shows that her route was 16,793 miles long, which makes her average for the whole distance very nearly 177 nautical miles per day. She is 1684 tons register, and had a cargo of 2300 tons of wheat.

"Remonster" Remonstrates.

Messrs. Editors: Not long ago the city of Portsmouth voted (in the interest of the Eastern Railroad) the sum of $300,000 in aid of the Portsmouth & Dover Railroad, one of the branches of the Eastern; this branch is now completed and in successful operation,—and behold the result! After getting all they (the Eastern managers) wanted from the City, the first thing to be done is to lay an additional assessment on its citizens and the public, in the shape of increased fares between Portsmouth and Boston,—for it is currently reported that such an increase is to be made, and soon. If this corporation cares only to promote its own interests, I should think it would pay for it to speak well of the bridge that has carried it over. If the affairs of the road are in so bad a condition that it cannot support itself without further aid from our city, the sooner the bondholders take possession of it the better it will be for both stockholders and the public. Any other road wishing assistance had better apply soon, before the patience and good will of our citizens are exhausted. REMONSTER.

Scraps From the "Independent."

Several U. S. Steamships are expected at this port shortly.

We hear that considerable building is talked of in Portsmouth and vicinity this spring and summer.

A new block will be erected this spring, on the site of the "burned district," corner Congress and Chestnut Streets.

We learn a large sized seal was captured last week in the North Mill Pond, by some boys in that neighborhood. It is said to weigh nearly one hundred pounds.

The young men of this city who are in the habit of going to Dover, and then "going on a spree," had better remain at home, and if they want to disgrace themselves, do it here.

Laconics.

By special request, Rev. James DeNormandie on Sunday evening repeated the sermon he delivered on Fast Day, in reference to national affairs. The discourse was able, and of course marked by plain speaking; and certain recent proceedings in Congress came in for a severe overhauling.

Uriah Blaisdell is out in our issue of today with a seasonable advertisement of plows and other farm and garden tools, seeds, etc., for sale at 55 and 57 Market street. Mr. Blaisdell also advertises kitchen and builders' iron-ware, house furnishing goods, stoves, bar iron and steel, and other articles usually found in a hardware store.

Chief Engineer Thom Williamson, U. S. N., is detached from this naval station and ordered to the U. S. S. Lancaster, now with the Brazil squadron.

Arbor Day in Nebraska.

It is a fact that tree planting on a large scale is needed on the Nebraska prairie, and the people of the State are fully aware of the importance of the subject. On the bluffs, and on the banks of the rivers and streams, there is abundance of wood, and a large variety of native trees; but there is not sufficient for the country. The manner in which lumber is being cut, without the forests being replaced in the East, also points to the time when, if trees are planted, the lumber crop of the prairie States will be a matter of much moment to the country at large.

In Nebraska timber grows with astonishing rapidity; and, if the farmers of the country are equal to their opportunities, not many years will elapse before the treeless prairie is adorned with waving woods, the lumber of which will add largely to the revenue of the owners of the soil.

Trees are now being planted in Nebraska by the millions. Hon. J. Sterling Morton, of Nebraska City, Otoe County, has been one of the pioneers in the tree-planting movement. He originated the idea of setting apart one day in each spring to the special work of tree-planting. The first "arbor-day" was in 1871, and on that day two million trees were planted. In 1872 and 1873, "arbor-day" was dropped, but it was recommended to the farmers to choose for themselves a day in April, and set it apart for tree-planting. This year, however, the State Board of Agriculture has determined to go back to the original plan. It has been resolved that "arbor-day" shall be the second Wednesday in April; and the State Legislature is to be asked to make the day a legal holiday. Each owner of land is recommended to plant at least one tree; and the State Board will award a premium to the person who plants the largest number. It is now the custom of the Board to give a premium to the land-owner who has planted the most trees on any given day in April; and, at a recent meeting of the Board, the prize was awarded to a farmer who set out 27,800 trees on the 28th of April, 1873.

Dykes of the River Po.

Those unfamiliar with Italy may believe these frequent inundations to be the result of negligence or bad engineering, while probably not one in a thousand of those who have traveled over so wonderfully rich a country have comprehended the almost superhuman force and skill necessary to wrest it from the destroyer. It is a constant warfare, as costly in treasure, if not in blood, as those where man stands against man instead of against water. In the times of the Romans the entire plains of North Italy were marshes, and gigantic works of dyking and drainage built to redeem them are marvelous even at the present day. The immense basin drained by the Po covers a superficial extent of twenty-two thousand six hundred and fifty-six square geographical miles, and throughout a great part of its long and tortuous course the bed of the river lies from ten to thirty yards above the surrounding plains. At the antique ducal city of Ferrara, the river runs higher than the roofs of the houses. Indeed, casting an eye over the plains of Ferrarese, one might imagine it rather some vast and solitary aqueduct than the tameless river that it is. Undoubtedly the bed of the stream has been much raised by the alluvial deposits with which its waters are heavily charged; but the geological conformation of the surrounding plains, as well as the lacustrian remains, and in later times the ruins of Roman works, prove that it is land reclaimed by stern toil (probably that of slaves.) And it has to be kept in the same way. The modern dykes are pronounced "masterpieces of human skill."

A Rare Predicament.

[Courier-Journal.]

Yesterday afternoon, as the train from New Albany to Louisville was leaving New Albany, a thin, spare man, carrying a Spanish hen, with a preposterously large comb, entered a car and took a seat, laying the hen across his kness, and holding her so that any unseemly conduct on her part might be instantly suppressed. She had a sulky look, but she kept quiet, and the thin, spare man was soon gazing abstractedly from the car window, forgetting apparently all about her. Now was the time for the spiteful creature to vent her ill-will. With a silent effort she put forth her powers, and a clean fresh egg dropped upon the soft cushion of the seat, giving back no sound, but quite in view of a number of fun-loving passengers. Considerable giggling ensued, which was all the more difficult to suppress because the man had not observed what had happened. A lady at length called his attention to the egg. He looked a little astonished, but, without losing his self command, he picked up the deposit and good humoredly held it so that every one in the car could see it. The hen, as if conscious of her misbehavior and bad temper, refrained entirely from "cut-cut-ca-da-ing" over the achievement.

LAWS

OF THE

UNITED STATES

PASSED AT THE

FIRST SESSION OF THE FORTY-THIRD CONGRESS.

SALVADOR—EXTENDING TIME FOR EXCHANGE. (AMITY, ETC.)

THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND THE REPUBLIC OF SALVADOR.

EXTENDING THE PERIOD FOR EXCHANGING THE RATIFICATIONS OF THE TREATY OF DECEMBER 6, 1870.

Concluded May 12, 1873.
Ratification advised by Senate March 2, 1874.
Ratified by President March 10, 1874.
Ratified by President of Salvador October 28, 1873.
Ratifications exchanged at Washington March 11, 1874.
Proclaimed March 13, 1874.

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas a convention between the United States of America and the Republic of Salvador, stipulating for an extension of the period for exchanging the ratifications of the general treaty of amity, commerce, and consular privileges between the two countries, signed on the sixth day of December, 1870, was concluded and signed by their respective Plenipotentiaries at San Salvador, on the twelfth day of May last, the original of which convention, being in the English and Spanish languages, is word for word as follows:

The United States of America and the Republic of Salvador, desiring to extend the time fixed for the exchange of the ratifications of the treaty between the United States and that Republic of amity, commerce, and consular privileges, signed at San Salvador on the sixth day of December, A. D. 1870, have resolved to conclude a convention for that purpose, and have invested with full powers, the President of the United States, Thomas Biddle, Minister Resident of the United States to Salvador, the President of the Republic of Salvador, Senor Doctor Don Dario Gonzalez, the Minister of the Interior and Public Instruction, who, after reciprocal communication of their said full powers, found in good and due form, have agreed upon the following articles, to wit:

ARTICLE I.

The time fixed for the exchange of the ratifications of the aforesaid treaty between the United States and the Republic of Salvador, of amity, commerce, and consular privileges, signed at San Salvador on the sixth day of December, A. D. one thousand eight hundred and seventy, (1870,) is hereby extended to a period not exceeding twelve (12) months from the date of this convention, or sooner if possible.

ARTICLE II.

The present convention to receive the ratification of the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate thereof, and by the President of the Republic of Salvador, with the approval of the Congress of the same, and the ratifications to be exchanged within convenient time to facilitate the aforesaid extension.

In witness whereof the respective plenipotentiaries have signed the present convention in duplicate, and have thereunto affixed their seals.

Done at San Salvador the 12th day of May, A. D. one thousand eight hundred and seventy-three, and of the Independence of the United States the ninety-seventh.

THOS. BIDDLE. [SEAL.]
D. GONZALEZ. [SEAL.]

And whereas the said convention has been duly ratified on both parts, and the respective ratifications were exchanged in this city on the eleventh instant:

Now, therefore, be it known that I, ULYSSES S. GRANT, President of the United States of America, have caused the said convention to be made public, to the end that the same, and every clause and article thereof, may be observed and fulfilled with good faith by the United States and the citizens thereof.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington this thirteenth day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four, and of the Independence of the United States of America the ninety-eighth.

[SEAL.] U. S. GRANT.

By the President:
J. C. BANCROFT DAVIS,
Acting Secretary of State.

JAMES C. BROWN,
DEPUTY SHERIFF.

DR. FLINT'S

QUAKER BITTERS.

These celebrated Bitters are composed of choice Roots, Herbs and Barks, among which are Gentian, Sarsaparilla, Wild Cherry, Dandelion, Juniper and other Berries, and are so prepared as to retain all their medicinal qualities. They invariably cure or greatly relieve the following complaints: Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Liver Complaint, Loss of Appetite, Headache, Bilious Attacks, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Ague, Cold Chills, Rheumatism, Summer Complaints, Piles, Kidney Diseases, Female Difficulties, Lassitude, Low Spirits, General Debility, and, in fact, everything caused by an impure state of the Blood or deranged condition of Stomach, Liver, or Kidneys. The aged find in the Quaker Bitters a gentle, soothing stimulant, so desirable in their declining years. No one can remain long unwell (unless afflicted with an incurable disease) after taking a few bottles of the Quaker Bitters.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS,

For all the Purposes of a Family Physic

CURING

are the most congenial purgative yet perfected. Their effects abundantly show how much they excel all other Pills. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. They purge out the foul humors of the blood; they stimulate the sluggish or disordered organ into action, and they impart health and tone to the whole being. They cure not only the every-day complaints of everybody, but formidable and dangerous diseases. Most skillful physicians, most eminent clergymen, and our best citizens send certificates of cures performed, and of great benefits they have derived from these Pills. They are the safest and best physic for children, because mild as well as effectual. Being sugar-coated, they are easy to take; and being purely vegetable, they are entirely harmless.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA- DEBILITY- DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up. Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.
No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.
All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.
TESTIMONIALS.
"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."
"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."
"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and, at very reasonable charges. The Little Violinist.

[T. B. Aldrich, in St. Nicholas for April.]

Some of you, doubtless, have heard of James Speaight, the infant violinist, or Young American, as he was called. He was born in London I believe, and was only four years old when his father brought him to this country, less than three years ago.

Since that time he has appeared in concerts and various entertainments in many of our principal cities, attracting unusual attention by his musical skill. I confess, however, I had not heard of him until last month, but since then I do not think a day has passed when this child's face has not risen up in my memory, the little half sad face, as I saw it once, with its large serious eyes and infantile mouth.

One morning last January, when I told Charley and Talbot at the breakfast table, Prince Rupert and his Court had come to town,

"Some in rags,
Some in jags,
And some in velvet gowns."

the news was received with great glee, as you may imagine; for this meant that we were going to the play.

What interested me most, and what pleased Charley and Talbot beyond the Naiad Queen herself, was the little violinist who came to the German Court and played before Prince Rupert and his bride.

It was such a little fellow! he was not more than a year older than my own boys, and not much taller. He had a very sweet, sensitive face, and large grey eyes, in which there was a settled expression which I do not like to see in a child. Looking at his eyes alone, you would have said he was sixteen or seventeen, and he was merely a baby!

I do not know enough of music to assert that he had a wonderful genius at all; but it seemed to me he played charmingly, and like the natural musician. I thought the "Last Rose of Summer" the sweetest strain of music in the world, as it floated up from the small violin.

At the end of his piece, he was lifted over the footlights of the stage into the orchestra where, with the conductor's stick in his hand he directed the band in playing one or two airs. In this he showed a carefully trained ear and a perfect understanding of music.

I wanted to hear the little violin again, but as he made his bow to the audience and ran off, it was with a half-wearied air, and I did not join with my neighbors in calling him back. "There's another performance to-night," I said to myself, "and the little fellow isn't very strong." He came out and bowed, but did not play again.

All the way from the theatre my children were full of the little violinist; and as they went along chattering and frolicking in front of me, and getting under my feet like a couple of spaniels, I could not help thinking how different the poor little musician's lot was from theirs.

He was only six years and a half old and had been before the public nearly three years. What hours of toil and weariness he must have passed through at the very time my little ones were being rocked and petted and shielded from every ungentle wind that blows. And what an existence was his now,—travelling from city to city, practicing at every spare moment, and performing night after night, in some close theatre or concert room, when he should have been drinking in that deep, refreshing slumber which childhood needs. However much he was loved by those who had charge of him,—and they must have treated him kindly,—it was a hard life for the child.

He ought to have been turned out into the sunshine; that pretty violin—one can easily understand that he was fond of it himself—ought to have been taken away from him and a kite string placed in his hand instead. If God had set the germ of a great musician or a great composer in that slight body, surely it would have been wise to let the precious gift ripen and flower in its own good time.

This is what I thought, walking home in the glow of the wintry sunset; but my boys saw only the bright side of the picture, and would liked nothing better than to have changed places with little James Speaight. To stand in the midst of Fairyland and play beautiful tunes on a toy fiddle, while all the people clapped their hands,—what could quite equal that?

The next morning at the breakfast table, when I opened the paper which is always laid beside my plate, the first paragraph my eyes fell upon was this:

"James Speaight, the infant violinist, died in this city late on Saturday night. At the matinee of the 'Naiad Queen,' on the afternoon of that day, when little James Speaight came off the stage after giving his usual violin performance, Mr. Sewell noticed that he appeared fatigued, and asked if he was ill. He replied that he had a pain in his heart, and then Mr. Sewell suggested he remain away from the evening performance. He retired quite early, and about midnight his father heard him say, 'Gracious God, make room for another little child in Heaven.' No sound was heard after this, and his father spoke to him soon afterwards; received no answer, but found his child dead."

Was there ever anything sadder than that? The printed letters grew dim and melted into each other as I tried to read them again. I glanced across the table at Charley and Talbot, eating their breakfast, with the slanted sunlight from the window turning their curls into real gold, and I had not the heart to tell them what had happened.

Of all the prayers that floated up to heaven, that Saturday night, from the bedsides of sorrowful men and women, or from cots of happy children, what accents could have fallen more piteously upon the ear of a listening angel than the prayer of little James Speaight?

He knew he was dying. The faith he had learned, perhaps while running at his mother's side, long ago, in some green English lane, came to him then. He remembered it was Christ who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me," and the beautiful prayer rose to his lips: "Gracious God, make room for another little child in Heaven."

I folded up the newspaper silently, and throughout the day did not speak before the boys of the little violinist's death; but when the time came for our customary chat in the nursery, I told the story to Charley and Talbot. I do not think they understood very well, and still less did they understand why I lingered so much longer at their bedside that Sunday night.

As I sat there in the dimly-lighted room, it seemed to me that I could hear in the pauses of the winter wind, faintly and doubtfully somewhere in the distance, the sound of the little violin.

Ah! that little violin!—a cherished relic now. Perhaps it plays soft, plaintive airs all by itself, in the place where it is kept, missing the touch of the baby fingers which used to waken it into life!

Fearful Bigotry.

The Boston Post is disgusted with the bigoted partizanship of the republican forces in the Massachusetts legislature as displayed in the recent contest over the United States senatorship, and discourses as follows about it:

"When the democrats, who composed one-fourth of that body, were urging the election of a candidate so widely and justly distinguished as Judge Curtis, a man who had honored the highest judicial station but one to which his country could call him, not a hint was allowed to fall from the majority in either of its fighting factions that this untimely quarrel could be best composed and the State best honored by a generous concentration of votes from all sides upon the democratic candidate. The people of Massachusetts are invited to seriously consider whether they are quite ready to be thus dragged at the heels of a party whose divisions are seen to occur over persons rather than principles, and whose designs are demonstrated by the present contest to be intensely selfish and steadily hostile to the superior popular interest. Unless such bigotry is rebuked as it deserves, Massachusetts ceases to exercise that commanding influence to which she has hitherto laid successful claim."

"The State best honored by a generous concentration of votes from all sides upon the democratic candidate!" is rich; but it is not quite equal to the charge of "bigotry" preferred against the republicans for not being able to see things in that light. The steady voting of the one-quarter for the democratic candidate was of course "devotion to principle," and worthy of being honored with a feast at the Revere House and the praise of the party press; but for the three-quarters to vote for republican candidates, instead of "generously concentrating" upon the candidate selected by the one-quarter, is party "bigotry!" Sakes alive! As the two leading candidates on the republican side each led the democratic candidate in the number of their supporters, all through the balloting, we should think the charge of partizan "bigotry" would lie with the democrats better than anywhere else, for a "generous concentration" of the democratic vote on either Hoar or Dawes would have ended the contest at any moment. The democrats, however, stuck steadily to their candidate, who was a very good man to stick to, as it happened; but past experience of democratic party discipline and "devotion to principle" warrant the assertion that they would have stuck to him just the same had he been far less worthy of support. And the intimation that it was the duty of the republican majority of three to one to allow the democratic minority to select a senator, is about as rich a specimen of twaddle as we have lately seen, and certainly is not worthy the Boston Post.

A Great Flood.

Ten thousand square miles of the State of Louisiana have been overflowed, many thousand families are ruined and others threatened with starvation. Help is called for by the Governor. The Washita river in Arkansas has also overflowed its banks, entailing a loss of $1,000,000. The New Orleans papers of last week contain discouraging news from all quarters concerning the deluge. Evidence was then steadily accumulating that the belt of the Mississippi was receiving the greatest flood of water which it has known within half a century. The Times states that "in 1871 the river reached and maintained its highest mark on the 19th of April, but maintained that point but for only one day, and then steadily delined. This year the flood has already exceeded that mark largely, and for five days consecutively has maintained its highest rise without the least indication of a permanent abatement. On the contrary, the information from above is to the effect that greater floods are coming, sufficient to raise the water several inches above any mark thus far attained. A rise of from twenty-four to forty-four feet is pouring out of the Cumberland, and as the same cause which produced that must also have operated on the line of the Tennessee River, a like flood may be expected from that river. If that were all we might safely calculate on escaping without further material damage. But it is not all. Above the Louisiana line and between that and the mouth of the Arkansas River, the crevasses aggregate eighteen miles, which have poured immense volumes of water into the St. Francoisville swamps which empty themselves at Helena, the Arkansas and Black River swamps which empty at Napoleon, the Yazoo swamps which empty at Vicksburg, the Ouachita, Tensas and Mason swamps (which are forty miles wide and running full of water) which empty themselves at the mouth of the Red River. The back waters from the Mississippi had passed up the Red and Ouachita rivers to the vicinity of Trinity, in the parish of Catohoula. Already the waters gathered in the various swamp reservoirs named have commenced discharging themselves, and at the mouth of the Red River the water from the swamps has commenced pouring into the Mississippi, forming a stream four miles wide. At the same time the swamp discharges into the Ouachita are beginning to drive the backwater out of the Ouachita and Red rivers. It is estimated by those well-informed that there is enough water in the swamp reservoirs mentioned to keep up the flood at this point for twenty days to come, even with a falling river above Memphis. From Baton Rouge reports were received Monday morning by the President of the Levee Company that the water was running over all the levees in that vicinity. As a sample of the demands made upon the Levee Company almost every hour in the day, we may mention the despatch from Baton Rouge calling for 1500 feet of 5-by-4 inch scantling, 3000 feet 1 1-2 inch plank, and nails for the Leblanc levees, and 13,000 feet of lumber for other points. Not a day passes without the shipment of from 50,000 to 80,000 feet of lumber to various points, beside other materials and provision supplies for the workmen. The crevasse in Bonnett Carre Bend is still unclosed, but the exertions to shut out the water may be characterized as almost superhuman. A willow bank outside of the break favors the work, and strong hopes are entertained of final success. In the parish of Jefferson, left bank, between Carrollton and Kennerville, the river water has been washing over the levees since a week ago, despite the efforts of the planters and the large force of laborers employed there by the Jackson Railroad Company. On Saturday these laborers were transferred to the Bonnet Carre levee, and the Levee Company having had no men on the Jefferson levees left the entire work for a distance of twelve miles to be performed by six planters, aided by the few men they could secure. They have labored hard night and day, raising embankments on the levee, to keep back the overflow, but almost as fast as these embankments have been put up they have been washed away, and from the planter who reached the city on Monday morning, it is learned that unless assistance can be furnished there will most assuredly be a crevasse in that locality, and a very serious one at that."

The Picayune states that on Monday there were only two breaks of any consequence below the city. "The first of these," it says, "is at Madame Veriois', on the left bank of the river, about twenty-five miles below the city. The storm of the other day opened this and it increased to some 200 feet in width, the water rushing through with the utmost velocity, sweeping everything before it. In this instance, however, it appears no bed was washed out, the water merely running through the break, and hence could be stopped,—a large force of laborers, mostly from the neighboring plantations, being set immediately to work, and now have a fair prospect of shutting up the gap. The second crevasse of importance is on the right bank, at Mr. Stackhouse's Belle Chasse plantation, about fifteen miles below the city. The break is in a high levee some half a mile above the house, and almost abreast of what is known as the lower end of the cut-off. The levee being near the main channel, with little or no batture to break the force of the river, the water also rushes in with great force, cutting a passage over two hundred feet wide. Work with some hundred laborers was immediately begun at both ends, so as to stop its increasing, which being done, a rear levee is now being rapidly built so as to cut off the water. Staves and piles are being driven in and earth thrown on top, and it is hoped to close it before any great while. The water which rushed through at both these breaks has not as yet flooded to any extent the neighboring plantations, on Mme. Veriois' side it being carried off into Lake Borgne and on the Bell Chasse side by a large bayou which runs out somewhere in the rear of the cut-off, and another which runs out into Bayou St. Dennis and Lake Ronde, and it is, therefore, believed the damage will not be so great on the lower coast as was at first apprehended, the planters being all vigilant and doing everything in their power to strengthen their levees. Further down, way below Point-a-la Hache, in some places, however, the water is running completely over the levee, but as there are no large places to be ruined, this flooding is of not so much moment. The river, however, is reported all along as rising, and the utmost vigilance all along is necessary. The latest from the lower coast by the steamer Hensley, which arrived at a late hour last evening, is, that work on the crevasse at Belle Chasse had been suspended, the rain storm of last evening having swept away all the piles and earth which had been placed for the new levee since the break, and the laborers were discouraged. A large number wanted to leave, but it was hoped they would remain, as work was wanted to be again begun in the morning.

Readables.

San Francisco is a good village to publish a paper in, there are so many interesting local items to be procurred. A recent issue of the San Francisco Chronicle contained, beside minor matters, an account of the murder of one "hoodlum" by another; of the severe horse-whipping of a woman by a priest, and the whipper's subjection to a fine of $250; of the murder of a man in a photograph gallery by a weak-minded companion whom he had teased into insanity, the homicide afterward killing himself; and of the fatal shooting of two room mates at a boarding house, another case of murder and suicide.

Steamship Tacna, recently lost off the South American coast of the Pacific ocean, was a new vessel, built of iron, and very deep and long in proportion to her breadth, as it is fashionable for iron steamships to be. She turned over in good weather and smooth water, and notwithstanding the officers immediately commenced to throw over the deck load, the vessel sunk in five minutes and nineteen persons were drowned.

Ship Puritan, of Boston, from Manila for New York, was run ashore by a pilot while trying to make her port of destination; the ship was so badly damaged as to make four feet of water in fifteen minutes, and her keel came up alongside. She was subsequently got off and towed into port.

Barque Mary Edson left New York for Beyrout last November and has not yet arrived out; the Aurelia, which sailed from Baltimore for Liverpool, Jan. 9, and barque Monets, from New York for Havre, Jan. 26, are also missing; and all three are supposed to be lost with all on board.

The schooner Victoria of New London, is reported to have gone ashore near Sandy Hook, and the captain and one of the crew were drowned in trying to run an anchor.

The Bangor brig Matilda is reported to have sprung a leak and been abandoned, but the story lacks confirmation.

It is said that the Connecticut tobacco crop of last year remains unsold, and it is thought market gardening and the culture of strawberries will supersede that of tobacco in the State.

The body of a man with the head missing, and the body badly lacerated, was found floating under the Portland bridge on Thursday. It proved to be that of Tobias Barke, employed in the rolling mills, who fell from the bridge on his way home last November. He was twenty-eight years old and left a wife and two children. Foul play was suspected, but there was not evidence enough to make an inquest desirable.

The news from Arkansas is more serious. The forces of each side of the political quarrel are being increased, and the determination of each leader not to yield is as strong as ever. Further correspondence has passed between Baxter and the President, and the latter has so far interfered as to order the protection of the telegraph office at Little Rock by the United States forces. Brooks, at last reports, appears to be gaining in public favor.

Fremont is in San Francisco.

Bellows Falls has no cemetery.

The Narragansett Steamship Co. placed its world-renowned steamers Bristol and Providence on the Fall River route, last Monday, and they will run on alternate days (Sundays, from June 14 to Sept. 13, inclusive.) New state-rooms have been added, largely increased space for freight has been secured, and other new features adopted, having for their object the safety and comfort of passengers, together with increase of speed. The general repairs to boilers, hulls and machinery have been of the most thorough description. Hall's celebrated reed, string and brass bands are engaged for the season of pleasure travel.

All hands were saved from the wrecked steamship Amerique. This vessel, the third lost by the French General Transatlantic Company within four months, the Ville du Havre and Europe being the others, like the other two had been lengthened. The best modelled and best built iron vessel is but a weak affair when compared with a similar vessel built of wood; but when the original lines are far too long for safety, and then altered so as to be longer still, the crack iron ship only awaits one heavy gale or ugly sea to become a mammoth coffin, and all the pet classifying of the British Lloyds and resolutions of the British Parliament won't make her a safe vessel to be in at such a time. The last account is that the Amerique has arrived at Plymouth, England, in tow of two steamers, most of the baggage and cargo being saved. This has a good look for the salvors' pockets, but a bad one for the reputation of the Amerique's officers.

New Orleans has lost 30,000 inhabitants in two years and has 6000 unoccupied houses and stores.

Steamship Nederlands, ashore on Brigantine Shoals, was badly beaten by the sea on Friday, but on Saturday evening it was reported that she had been got off and was proceeding to Philadelphia in tow.

The captain of the French steamer Europe, recently lost, has had a great deal to say about his being prevented by force from returning to his vessel from the steamer Greece, whose first officer, Mr. Buck, endeavored with a salvage crew to take the abandoned steamship into port. If, as the French captain asserts, he considered his vessel not in any immediate danger of sinking and did not intend to desert her, what was he on board the Greece for? If his object was to secure the taking-off of his passengers, his chief mate would have been a proper agent to attend to that; and if he intended to abandon his ship he should have been the last person to go over her side. According to his own showing, he had no business to be out of his ship at all.

The New York stock gamblers are again excited over rumored heavy failures.

Two young men of Stonington, Conn., named Longworthy, 18 and 25 years of age, were assaulted on Sunday evening, the youngest one killed and the other probably fatally wounded. A hired man was also badly hurt, and there was evidence of a desperate fight. One account says the hired man is suspected of the murder, and another that tramps did it.

Bangor had a $100,000 fire, Saturday night; nine warehouses were burned.

Our Changing Bodies.

Our bodies are constantly changing. The dead matter passes off by the bowels and the pores, and digestion and assimilation supply fresh material. This material cannot be pure, and consequently the body cannot be healthy unless the stomach and the secretive organs perform their allotted tasks thoroughly and regularly. That they may do so, keep them in good working order with that most efficient of all invigorating regulating and purifying preparations, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. If you wish your blood to be really the "stream of life," to have your bones clothed with sound flesh, to be exempt from nervousness and debility, to be clear-headed and cheerful; in short, to possess that choicest of Heaven's blessings, a sound mind in a sound body, resort to the great vegetable restorative whenever you feel languid, or suffer from indigestion, or are bilious or low spirited, or suffering from any derangement of the animal functions. The relief is immediate, and full restoration certain.

No Other Medicine ever attained such an unprecedented sale as HELMBOLD'S BUCHU. Its name and fame are known everywhere; and it deserves its great reputation, for it has undoubted merit. OYSTERS.

W. FREEMAN has just received, per schooner Maria Webster, a cargo of Oysters from Cranes Island, Va. For sale at WHOLESALE and RETAIL, at Nos. 14 and 16 Congress street.

HERE THEY ARE COMPLETED AND

FOR SALE.

TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1615 to '20; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore; Smith's antiquated dark at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Gerrish's island, &c.

The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in its palmy days, the Light-House in its original height, and a lively sea view, at about 1830—a true picture of days when the white sail ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the embalmed canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a devoted son of old "Strawberry Bank," so called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.

Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-office.

Mr. Clarence B. Mason, who cut off his thumb while splitting wood several weeks ago, and had it bound on again, has the satisfaction of rejoicing at the success of the experiment, although the injured member is stiff.

The many friends of Lieut. Thomas M. Gardner, U. S. N., will be pleased to learn that he has been ordered to the command of the relief steamer Speedwell, at this station, Lieut. George R. Durand having been detached and ordered to the Ohio. Lieut. Gardner, who was formerly in command of the Mayflower when she was stationed here, and took her around to Key West when she was ordered away on account of the Virginius affair, is a thorough seaman and capable officer, and universally popular; and no better man could be selected to command a relief steamer than he.

The report that Mr. Bilbruck is to erect a large brewery on the site of the Came carriage manufactory is denied. Well, we can possibly get along with the few which already exist in the city.

Not having said anything about the weather heretofore, we will now observe that Monday wasn't much of a day. Snow fell liberally in the forenoon, and rain came down later, along toward night. But the grass has been fooled into believing Spring is here, despite the constant snow squalls, for it is getting beautifully green,—as indeed anything must be, to stop out of doors in such weather as we have had this month. We were favored with some vivid lightning in the evening, but no thunder; and the rain was very heavy until nearly midnight.

Prof. Gunning's illustrated lecture at Mechanics' Hall this evening will be on "World-making."

A number of marines and "boys about town" got into a row at the north end of Market street on Saturday evening. We believe the marines were the victors; but like the woman whose husband was fighting with a bear, we don't care a snap which licks in any such affair.

Mr. D. J. Lynch, an experienced working plumber, has opened a shop on Congress street, opposite Middle street, where he is ready to receive and fulfill any and all orders for work in his line of business, and will guarantee satisfaction in all cases. A skilled plumber has been needed in this city for some time past.

The Times reports that negotiations are being conducted-with a French firm (man and wife) of barbers, to induce them to open a hair-dressing and shaving saloon in this city; and that if they come, as is probable, ten cents will be their price for a shave. "We are ruined by Chinese cheap labor!"

A horse belonging to Mr. Henry S. Hartshorn, while standing in front of his market on Daniel street, Monday, was frightened by the blowing of a fish peddler's horn and started up Daniel street at great speed. Coming in contact with a post, the wagon was broken and the horse dashed through Congress and Middle streets with the shafts dangling at his heels, but was finally caught without having sustained very serious injury.

The Temperance Movement.

At New Bedford, Mass., Friday, two janiters of club-rooms were each fined $10 and costs and sentenced twenty days in the house of correction on charges of illegally keeping liquor, the judge who tried the cases holding that sales of liquors by tickets to members of clubs was an evasion of the prohibitory law. Both defendants appealed.

A meeting of conservative temperance women was held in Providence, R. I., Thursday, and a society formed called the Woman's Temperance Union, with the motto, "In God we trust." It was decided that personal visits be made to each house in the city.

State News.

The defendant and plaintiff in a breach of promise suit were married recently in Lancaster. The gentleman will probably be liable to damages all the same.

Mrs. James R. Hill of Concord, who had several hundred dollars' worth of jewelry abstracted from her satchel while on her way to New York some months ago, has recovered her property, which was found to have been stolen by a brakeman, who had caused Mrs. Hill's monogram to be erased from some of the articles, substituting the initial letters of the woman whom the thief recently married.

Assessor Haley of New Market is to be nominated for collector of internal revenue in the first district of New Hampshire, vice A. H. Young, the present collector.

The "Tontine" block in Laconia was destroyed by an incendiary fire on Sunday. Loss $3000; no insurance.

Ill-Fated Steamships.

The following melancholy list of "missing" transatlantic steamships we collate from a list of lost steamers published in the N. Y. Herald: On March 11, 1841, the British steamship President, with a long passenger list, left New York, never to arrive at her port of destination. The City of Glasgow, British, left Glasgow in the spring of 1854, with 480 persons o n board; the Pacific, American, left Liverpool January 23, 1856, with 200 persons on board; the Tempest, British, sailed from New York in February, 1857; the United Kingdom, British, left New York in April, 1869, with 80 persons; the City of Boston, British, left New York in January, 1870, with about 160 persons, touched at Halifax and then sailed for Liverpool; the Scandeia, British, sailed from New York in October, 1872; the Ismalia, British, left New York in September, 1873; the Anna, Norwegian, left New York in February, 1873; and not one of them has ever since been heard of, nor will be till the sea gives up its dead.

Of steamship wrecks concerning which something definite is known, the following were the most destructive of human life: St. George, British, burned at sea December 24, 1852; 51 lives lost. Arctic, American, run down off Newfoundland by French steamer Vesta, September, 1854; 300 lives lost. Le Lyonnais, sunk off Nantucket by ship Adriatic, November, 1856; 120 lives lost. Austria, German, burned in mid-ocean September 13, 1858; 470 lives lost. Indian, British, wrecked on Nova Scotia coast, November, 1859; 27 lives lost. Hungarian, British, wrecked on Nova Scotia, February, 1860; 205 lives lost. Canadian, British, sunk by ice in Straits of Belleisle, June, 1861; 35 lives lost. Anglo-Saxon, British, wrecked on a reef off Cape Race, April, 1863; 237 lives lost. Bohemia, British, wrecked off Cape Elizabeth, February, 1864; 20 lives lost. Hibernia, British, foundered off Irish coast, November, 1868; 50 lives lost. Cambria, British, wrecked on Irish coast, October, 1870; 190 lives lost. Atlantic, British, wrecked on Marr's rock, near Cape Sambro, Nova Scotia, April 1, 1873; 562 lives lost. Ville du Havre, French, sunk at sea by ship Loch Earn, December, 1873; 226 lives lost.

Benjamin's Eccentricities.

[N. Y. Times.]

But really General Butler is not a bad man at heart. His ruling passion is not avarice, though he has been falsely accused of the most audacious thefts; not ambition, though he cares more for power than for money; not cruelty, though he has been unjustly charged with wanton murder. His ruling passion is neither of these, but a calm, unfaltering, life-long determination to prove that a coal-hole is a snow-bank. Deceptive reasoning, which others use as a means, is to him an end of unequalled importance. He would sacrifice half his property to prove that two and two make five; he would surrender the Presidency to demonstrate that the three angles of a triangle equal four right angles; he would, though a man of strong affections, yield his nearest and dearest to the stake, if necessary, to make the people of Salem again believe in witchcraft, and would spend a day at the crisis of his fortunes to convince a schoolboy that the Atlantic Ocean empties into the Hudson River.

—At Boulogne, during the reception of Queen Victoria, some years ago, a number of English ladies, in their anxiety to see everything, pressed with such force against the soldiers who were keeping the line, that the latter were forced to give way; and generally were—to use the expression of policemen—"hindered in the execution of their duty." The officer in command, observing the state of affairs, called out, "One roll of the drum—if they don't keep back, kiss them all." After the first sound of the drum the ladies took to flight. "If they had been French," said a Parisian journal, "they would have remained to a woman."

—Mr. Beecher is always saying something. Recently he paid his respects to the housewives who are so intolerably industrious and so outrageously neat and clean that nothing has any peace in the house. They make it so orderly that nobody can live in it. This is a timely hint just on the threshold of house-cleaning time. Evidently the Brooklyn preacher has been there.

—Quiz's landlady is considerably bald, and while she was napping in the arm-chair, yesterday, her hopeful attached a picture to her poll by the process of decalcomania. And now she wonders why the youngster goes round holding his stomach and snickering as if he was mad. But that boy will make Rome howl when she finds out.

A Wild Boar Hunt.

[Paris Correspondence New York Times.]

Yesterday a couple of gentlemen, who were reading the morning papers at my club, were thrown into a great commotion by a brief message which reached them, convoking them at a point in the forest of Saint Germain. A wild boar hunt was to take place immediately. Some fancied that this was a mystification, but others avowed themselves quite willing to be mystified by Baron Hirsch, and started off at once. I must introduce a short explanation at this point. Since the fall of the Empire the hunting of the forests has been let to gentlemen—sometimes to one very rich man, sometimes to an association. The Duc de Tremoille, for example, has the forest of Rambouillet, M. Aguado the hunting of Fontainebleau, and Baron Hirsch that of Saint Germain. I do not know what the latter pays, but the Duc de Tremoille, and the score or so of gentlemen associated with him, pay 250,000 francs a year for the lease of Rambouillet. Doubtless American sportsmen, who are well satisfied with bagging twenty birds a day, have often been surprised to read of the hecatcombs of game bagged by European sportsmen. A party of ten or twelve frequently make up a bag consisting of 2,000 partidges, 1,000 pheasants, 100 woodcock, 12 chevreuil (small deer), 1,500 rabbits, and one or two sangliers, or wild boar. But each gentleman has one or more servants behind him to load his guns, and all he has to do is to march on with the line and shoot as the game rises. This game is sold in the market, and the net proceeds amounts to a very considerable sum—not enough, perhaps, to pay the rent of the shooting grounds, but something approaching it. This is a battue. A man alone, with a good dog, can easily bag from 100 to 150 head of game per diem, although I have hunted all day at Rambouillet for two patridges, and did not see five during the entire day. The hunting of Baron Hirsch is shooting fit for dressing-gown and slippers. The birds are so fat that they can hardly fly, and are so bountiful that you can bag your fill or fill your bag without walking a mile. But yesterday morning the guard came in to say that a number of wild boars had come into the forest. Where they came from no one can imagine. The Baron quickly sent off for his friends, a hunt was organized, and before dark seven wild boars were slain. One was very savage, and charged the huntsmen, wounding one horse severely, but he was soon brought down by a revolver.

An Alabama Poker Hand.

[Louisville Courier-Journal.]

The following is a recent occurence which, we think down here, would not be entirely devoid of interest to you:

The parties to it were Bill J——, the sheriff of our country, (Colbert,) who, like himself, was a zealous Christian poker-player, who could "straddle" your "blind" quicker than he would his horse "Ephraim" to serve a process, and says he would rather beat a "Jack-full" for you than capture the whole of the "God's Hill gang," and a prosperous Teutone merchant of our town named S——. The two were travelling on the cars, and, in order to pass away the time, engaged in a game of euchre. After playing some time the jolly Dutchman left his seat to get a drink of water, and Bill, knowing that he, too, had a penchant for poker, took advantage of his absence and dealt him a hand with four kings in it, and turned up the queen for a trump. Returning in a moment and lifting his hand, S. at once conceived the brilliant idea of playing the hand at poker, and accordingly suggested it to Bill, who consented, provided that he might be allowed to discard one of his cards and take up the queen. To this S. at once agreed, and the game proceeded. Says S.: "Bill, I bets you five dollars" In turn Bill raised him ten more. "Well," said S., "fifteen dollars will joost pay mine expense and some odder tings, and I calls you, Bill;" at the same time exhibiting his hand with four kings, and reaching his hand for the money. "Hold on," says Bill, "I have four aces!" Nervously, and in silence, the astonished Dutchman gathered the cards and shuffled them for a moment or two. Then, with his chin resting on both clenched hands, and his eyes staring into uncertainty, he exclaimed: "I say, Bill, now joost you told me vot de h—ll dot queen had to do mit dot hand?"

And up to this good hour his mind is perplexed continually to find the part that card had played in the game.

A Girl Who Bets To Win.

[Cincinnati Gazette.]

Mr. John Fishback, proprietor of the Indianapolis Sentinel, wagered $100 with a young lady neice that she couldn't "hold her tongue" for a week. The young lady very unexpectedly "took him up," and unless she speaks within the next two hours (it is now 4 o'clock P. M.) Mr. Fishback will have the $100 to pay. During the week he has escorted her to the opera, and although he has done his best to get her to speak, and hired other members of the family to "trap" her, yet she has resisted all their efforts. On Thursday last the journalist offered to compromise the matter and give her $50, but the proposition was scornfully rejected.

—A Troy cremationist asks, wouldn't it be pleasant to receive a dispatch something like this some day:

Dear Mother—William died at noon today. Ashes by mail. Yours in sorrow.
JOHN SMITH.

—The Danbury joker asks: Can the watermelon be successfully cultivated on sandy soil, in a rural town of 4000 inhabitants, and a theological institute located near by, containing 120 students studying for the ministry?

DR. FLINT'S
QUAKER BITTERS.

These celebrated Bitters are composed of choice Roots, Herbs and Barks, among which are Gentian, Sarsaparilla, Wild Cherry, Dandelion, Juniper and other Berries, and are so prepared as to retain all their medicinal qualities. They invariably cure or greatly relieve the following complaints: Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Liver Complaint, Loss of Appetite, Headache, Bilious Attacks, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Ague, Cold Chills, Rheumatism, Summer Complaints, Piles, Kidney Diseases, Female Difficulties, Lassitude, Low Spirits, General Debility, and, in fact, everything caused by an impure state of the Blood or deranged condition of Stomach, Liver, or Kidneys. The aged find in the Quaker Bitters a gentle, soothing stimulant, so desirable in their declining years. No one can remain long unwell (unless afflicted with an incurable disease) after taking a few bottles of the Quaker Bitters.

CURING

Costiveness, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Dysentery, Foul Stomach and Breath, Erysipelas, Headache, Piles, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Tetter, Tumors and Salt Rheum, Worms, Gout, Neuralgia, as a Dinner Pill, and purifying the Blood,

are the most congenial purgative yet perfected. Their effects abundantly show how much they excel all other Pills. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. They purge out the foul humors of the blood; they stimulate the sluggish or disordered organ into action, and they impart health and tone to the whole being. They cure not only the every-day complaints of everybody, but formidable and dangerous diseases. Most skillful physicians, most eminent clergymen, most best citizens send certificates of cures performed, and of great benefits they have derived from these Pills. They are the safest and best purgative for children, because mild as well as effectual. Being sugar-coated, they are easy to take; and being purely vegetable, they are entirely harmless.

'73 REUNION.

THE "HISTORY OF THE RETURN OF THE SONS & DAUGHTERS OF PORTSMOUTH, JULY, 1873," is just published. It contains 96 pages, octavo, and is a thorough detail of everything relating to the three Festal Days,

The Reunion, July 4th,
High School Reunion, 5th,
The Praise Meeting, 6th;

and containing a

Verbatim Report

of every speech that was uttered at the Tent on the 4th and 5th, besides giving a full report of all the Reunion preliminary movements in Portsmouth, Boston and New York. Much of the matter of this work has never yet appeared in any form, and we think it will prove interesting to all who participated in it.

Three Days' Jubilee.

The work is for sale at Foster's Book Store, the Chronicle Office, J. H. Wells, and at Wm. E. Preston's.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA- DEBILITY- DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.
R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,
For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs
NO. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,
After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and candid other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.
No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.
All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay then, are here saved inventors.
TESTIMONIALS.
"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."
"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."
"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

TOBACCO VERSUS HAT.

Deacon Clumper, of College Hill, attended the union temperance prayer-meeting held at the Congregational church last week. It was the first time he had been, but he was remarkably composed and confident—so much so that he took his beaver, one of Stinemetz's best, and placed it confidingly under the seat in front of him. A Saratoga trunk can pass under any of the seats in that church, but when the deacon placed his hat under this one he was not aware of the fact, and got it too far under. There was an antiquated-looking individual sitting directly over the spot where he had placed his hat, and during the exercises the deacon in pitching about, managed to crowd his beaver between the feet of this old veteran tobacco-chewer, and exactly in the spot where he was spouting the juice. The deacon never chews; on the contrary, he has an hereditary aversion to the business, and consequently at first he couldn't understand the movements of the old patriarch as he bended forward, spit, rubbed his hand over his mouth, and then straightened back, apparently relieved. He became interested in the old man, and not being able to account for these strange movements he tapped him on the shoulder and asked him in a whisper if he felt unwell. "Why, no; what made you think that, P" he returned. "Oh, nothing, only I noticed that you often put your head on the back of the next seat and appeared to be distressed," said the deacon. "That," again replied the stranger, "is the way I have of spitting." The deacon remembered the position of the hat, colored perceptibly, and reached to rescue it from that which he most despised—tobacco juice. He went down beaming with hope, but when he came up his entire countenance had changed. The lips were firmly set, the eyebrows twitched nervously, while his hand went into a coat pocket and returned with a handkerchief. He muttered "cah" and commenced wiping the hand which went for but didn't bring back the hat. Then he looked around for assistance, but he had foolishly left his wife at home, and consequently he had to fish out the hat single-handed. It wasn't single-ehanded exactly, either, for he run both feet under the seat, twined them gently about the beaver and drew it out. What a sight. It looked as though it might have been shot through a pneumatic tube, trimmed with leaky spittoons. The deacon isn't a man that will get up during religious services and kick a man down the aisle and through the vestibule into the street on a slight provocation, no matter how strongly he may be inclined to do so. This even disposition led the man in more peaceful ways. He took an Evening Star from his pocket and wiped the hat out and off and then set it upon the seat to dry. But it was too odoriferous. A scent arose from it which began to attract the attention of those nearest him, and he became nervous, seized the beaver and darted down the aisle like a man of property going to a fire. Fortunately for the old patriarch the services were only half over, and after remaining in the vestibule for some time for him to come out, the deacon gave up the proposed interview and left for home and its happiness, riding on the front platform of the car the whole distance, much to the annoyance of the driver.

A GOLD-FISH EPISODE.

The gentleman in question is a dry-goods clerk with the usual bald spot on his head. He had been promised the present of a gold-fish for some time past, and on Saturday his friend arrived at the store on the Avenue with the fish neatly encased in a glass globe. The knight of the yard-stick went into ecstacies over the finny gift, and straight took off his linen duster, donned his coat and hat and started home to show it to his wife, who was exceedingly fond of pets. As he passed by a high-toned restaurant on his way, he slipped in to show some friends his prize and they requested him to forthwith wet it. It occurred to the clerk that the treats were highly appropriate for the occasion, and he immediately set up the drinks. Drink after drink was drank for the health of the fish and everybody else who needed it, until it came to pass that the clerk got unusually happy. This was a fine chance for a wag who was a member of the party to play one of his pitiless pranks. He took the fish out of the jar, and, unobserved by the clerk, placed a moderate sized carrot in its place. After a while the party broke up, and the yard-stick man started for home, with pride in his eyes and a brick in his hat, fully determined to agreeably surprise his wife with a real, live gold-fish. She met him at the front door. "Dear," said he, "you'll perceive, by casting (hic) your optics (hic) at this yere jar, that I have captured that which you so much (hic) want." The wife looked at the carrot for a moment, and then seizing the jar she drew it out, and holding it up to her husband's face, said, in reproving tones, "John, that's nothing but a carrot!" He took it in his hands, turned it over, smelt of it, and then, casting it to the floor, cried, "I'll be blamed if that halint one of the most mysterious metamorphises of modern (hic) times. I'll bet my last (hic) dollar on Darwin." And his wife took him gently by the nape of the neck and pushed him up stairs to bed.

MOSES AND THE WINDOW CURTAIN.

Yesterday while Dr. Lord was lecturing, in Lincoln hall, on the life of Moses, the warm rays came streaming in at a window, where the curtain wasn't, with insupportable heat and brightness. Three stalwart young ushers came to the rescue. They were compelled to get up twenty feet from the floor in order to remedy the trouble, and with great forethought they secured a ten-foot ladder for the work. The slender thing was put up and the most daring of the trio cautiously crept to the upper round, and then looked back and smiled a smile of triumph at his companions, who were supporting the ladder below. He had two strings in one hand, the curtain in the other, a half dozen screws in his mouth and about three hundred people looking directly at the back of his head, expecting every minute that he would fall or swallow the screws —they didn't say which. He is the best man on the upper round of a ladder that congregation ever saw. He put the curtain in the hand which held the strings, took a screw out of his teeth, balanced confidently on his tip toes and screwed the screw into the wood work, while Dr. Lord was talking about the dizzy height of Mount Sinai and the ten commandments. The curtain was safely put up and apparently answered the purpose, notwithstanding it looked as though it had passed through the mutilating process of a threshing machine.

Washington Correspondence.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 17, 1874.

I am sitting in the grand Congressional Library of our noble Capital, with a fresh (two days old,) Portsmouth CHRONICLE open before me. Somewhat wearied with several hours' close attention to an ancient volume, I bethought me of the little sheet received this morning, and for the last half hour have eagerly scanned its columns for bits of news from home. Thanks, my dear CHRONICLE for the refreshment I have received; and as the expression flits across my mind—we are as the dumb within these sacred walls—I find myself wondering whether your breakfast readers would care to read a letter from Washington. If you think not, most goodish editor and friend, do not hesitate; you know the position and function of the waste basket. What a frightful old hum Washington used to be a decade and a half ago. Even at the time of my last visit here—the holidays of '67. —the great city—great in territory and in name, was little better than a gilded mud bank. I very well remember having a pair of close fitting rubber shoes sucked from my feet by the mud, one evening, in crossing a street not three hundred yards from the Capitol. The war clouds had all passed away then, and not even the smell of gunpowder was in the air; but the streets of the city—never good at the best, —still gave evidence of the terrible struggle that called for the hurrying to and fro of thousands of plunging horses, and countless heavy ambulances and baggage wagons across the yielding soil, ploughing and furrowing every street and passage way into the semblance of country roads in early spring. Perhaps some of your readers, who have known Washington well, of old, do not know her now, as, risen from her sleep of a century she has put on her bright garments and proudly assumed her rightful power among the great cities of the world. I have not the honor of a personal acquaintance with Gov. Shepard, and can only judge his character by outside observation; but I feel constrained to say,—not being a property holder here; who alone are the victims, as well as the beneficiaries of these innovations,—that if he is the master spirit, guiding and directing these grand and noble changes on every side, Washington will yet give him his meed of praises and in honor should rear to his name the proudest monument in her midst.

People who have not visited the Capital since the war have no idea how vast the change that has been wrought. Then, hundreds upon hundreds of unsightly buildings, miserable shops and tumble-down dirty shanties crowded thick about her halls of Congress and lined the leading thoroughfare. Now, though a few of the squatters of the war still obstinately hold their ground, by far the largest portion have gone their unreturning way, and a new City has risen in her might out of the mud and decay of the past.

The side-walks, the broad avenues, and the lettered and numbered streets are well flagged with stone, or asphalt or wood, and as clean as any streets can be, while some of the streets are so broad and so beautifully laid out that they appear like parks, and give the residences on either side a continuous garden in front. In every direction the eye encounters evidence of the wonderful strides an enlightened, progressive people are making, and it only needs a few more years of the same energetic activity and tasteful expenditure on the part of private individuals and the General Government to make the City of Washington one of the most beautiful and attractive capitals of the world.

The improvement of the streets is, however, not the only progressive step in Washington. Within the past eighteen months, in addition to the immense amount of work done under the supervision of the Board of Public Works—of which I will give you some account in another letter—there have been 1,216 private buildings and residences erected, or are in course of erection, amounting in the aggregate to a value of $3, 209,250, in addition to which may be mentioned a magnificent structure designed for the use of the Department of State, which will, ere completed, cost at least six million of dollars. The returns of real estate transactions during the past year amounted to more than ten millions of dollars. Two railroad connections with the interior have been completed during the past year, and a number of others are projected, and their early construction under consideration. The attention of capitalists and manufacturers is being strongly attracted by the remarkable water-power afforded above the city on the line of the Potomac, and finally, the healthy climate, delightful atmosphere, and pleasant location, together with the constantly increasing attraction of permanent society, and cultivated intelligence centering around the glorious library of 270,000 volumes, will make of Washington a scientific and social center, such as in a comparatively short time will not find its equal in America. SMILAX.

The Louisiana Floods.

Official despatches state the whole country from Monroe to the mouth of the Red River is under water and 10,000 people in that district will soon be on the verge of starvation. A large number of negroes from the overflowed district are flocking to New Orleans. Governor Kellogg has issued a proclamation to the officials and citizens of the overflowed district, assuring them that the State government had done and is doing all its resources allow toward alleviating the sufferings of those reduced to destitution by the disastrous crevasses and floods. Applications have been made to the general government for aid, which he has reason to belive will be promptly responded to. The mayor of New Orleans, president of the chamber of commerce, and a committee of distinguished citizens are doing all that can be done to send immediate necessaries to those most in need. Food, clothing and money will be forwarded without delay. They advise against sending the distressed population to the city, already overcrowded with unemployed people, recommend the organization of parish committees for the distribution of supplies, and that the laborers of the inundated districts be assisted in making their way to those parishes not under water, where their assistance will still be needed.

Educational.

Hon. D. G. Beede, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, is engaged in a new plan of operations with the view of improving the condition of our common schools. Assuming that the supervision of common schools may be a medium for attaining very useful results, he is organizing associations of town superintendents in the several counties of the State, for the purpose of holding meetings and discussing such topics as come within the scope of a school officer's knowledge and duty. By the arrangment in progress all who are or have been superintendents of schools are members ex-officio of their own county societies. We hear there is to be an association formed and meetings held in this county soon, and trust the matter will receive due attention from town school officers. Any thing that may help improve the condition of our common schools is to be hoped for and generously encouraged.

State News.

The passenger station on the Boston & Maine Railroad at Plaistow, was broken into on Sunday night or Monday morning, and the ticket office and baggage room rifled. Several trunks were broken open and the contents scattered about the room. It has not been ascertained what articles have been taken away, as the owners of the trunks have not yet been seen. This is the third time this depot has been broken into within a few montns.

The two Swedes who were confined in Ossipee Jail, awaiting trial for the murder committed in Bartlett last winter, broke jail Monday night by sawing out the locks.

Readables.

Walter R. Condon, 14 years old, fatally shot Charles Dolan, another boy of the same age as himself, in Worcester, Mass., Sunday morning. They had stolen money, ran away from home, bought watches and pistols, and were playing with the latter in bed when Dolan was shot.

For some time past the advertisements of drinking saloons for sale in Philadelphia have been numerous, and now the applications for licenses to sell liquor in that city show a decrease in one year of 1205. This is equivalent to a falling off in this branch of the liquor traffic of nearly one-third in twelve months. To whatever cause this is to be attributed, whether to "the times," or the influence of public opinion, or to the prayers of so many good people, the fact remains for the gratification of the advocates of total abstinence and the instruction of the general public.

The keel for a 1600 ton ship is to be laid in Emmons' ship yard, Kennebunkport, by Dame and Perkins. Within the last seventy-three years, between seven and eight hundred vessels have been built in the Kennebunk district.

More Scared than Hurt.

The Boston ship Puritan, before reported abandoned on the bar near Sandy Hook and afterward towed into port, was deserted by the captain, pilot and crew in a short time after she struck. Soon after two tug boats came along, and one of them actually ran alongside the derelict ship, which does not look as though the sea could have been very terrible; and the united efforts of the two steamers resulted in the ship being got off and towed inside the Horseshoe Bend. Next morning the Puritan's captain went out in a tug to see if anything was left of his ship, and found her in comparative safety, with a salvage crew on board, who declined to give her up, of course.

The engineer and mate of the steamer Spray, who first boarded the French steamer Amerique, report that they found all the steamer's boats gone except the gig. There were six feet of water in the stock hole, and two of the dead lights were burst in, admitting water. The pumps were found choked, which circumstance probably caused the panic. The mate thought it possible to save the steamer, as the weather was moderating, it then blowing half a gale. The Spray sent a salvage crew on board, large warps were attached to the Amerique's cable chain, and the Spray started with the steamer in tow on the morning of the 15th, heading for Brest. The work of towing was easy all that day, Wednesday. It was discovered the next day that the propeller of the Amerique was gone. The same day her chain slipped and was lost. The Spray then sighted the steamer F. F. Barry and arranged for her to assist in bringing the steamer into port. They continued to head for Brest until four o'clock in the afternoon, when the wind shifted and they resolved to change their course and make for a British port, and Plymouth was sighted Saturday at two o'clock P. M. No sounding-pumps were to be found on the Amerique. The donkey-engine was broken. The mate of the Spray says the bedding was piled against the broken dead-lights until the damage could be repaired. The Amerique was under two close-reefed topsails on her mizzenmast, and hauled on the starboard tack. The cargo had shifted, but when the port side was brought to the wind the steamer righted.

A Volcano in New Hampshire.

Somebody has just recollected that North Carolina is not the only Atlantic State which can claim a volcano, and cites the phenomena exhibited nearly a hundred years ago in New Hampshire, in one of the hills of the Connecticut Valley. The scene of this curious phenomena was West River Mountain, which rises to the height of nearly 1000 feet, on the east bank of the Connecticut in the towns of Hinsdale and Chester field, in Cheshire county, in the southwest corner of the State, and a few miles from Brattleboro, Vt. Loud noises having been heard, one of the inhabitants, a Mr. Barrett went to investigate, and found a hole forced through the side of the mountain, near the top—evidently, as he thought, by the action of internal fire. The hole was about six inches in diameter. A pine tree, which stood near it, was in a great measure covered by a black mineral substance, forced violently out of the hole, and consisting chiefly of melted and calcined iron ore, strongly resembling the scorise of a blacksmith's forge. It was forced out in a state partially liquid, and driven with such violence against the tree as not to be separated without difficulty. Rev. Dr. Dwight, president of Yale College from 1795 to 1817, published an account of the affair.

—At a fire in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., on a recent morning, the foreman of one of the hose companies rolled his carriage to the fire alone, and made preparations to stretch the hose, which fortunately was not needed, and then, without any assistance, took the apparatus back to the house again, called the roll, and entered a fine against every one of the absent members.

Our Changing Bodies.

Our bodies are constantly changing. The dead matter passes off by the bowels and the pores, and digestion and assimilation supply fresh material. This material cannot be pure, and consequently the body cannot be healthy unless the stomach and the secretive organs perform their allotted tasks thoroughly and regularly. That they may do so, keep them in good working order with that most efficient of all invigorating, regulating and purifying preparations, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. If you wish your blood to be really the "stream or life," to have your bones clothed with sound flesh, to be exempt from nervousness and debility, to be clear-headed and cheerful; in short, to possess that choicest of Heaven's blessings, a sound mind in a sound body, resort to the great vegetable restorative whenever you feel languid, or suffer from indigestion, or are billious or low spirited, or suffering from any derangement of the animal functions. The relief is immediate, and full restoration certain.

—"Hi! where did yez get them trousers?" asked an Irishman of a man who happened to be passing with a pair of remarkably short trousers on. "I got them where they grew," was the indignant reply. "Then, by my conscience," said Paddy, "you've pulled them a year too soon."

—A jovial artist was painting some divine, who felt it incumbent upon him to give the painter a moral lecture during his sittings. Somewhat in awe of the artist he began rather nervously; but as the knight of the brush painted away without any sign of annoyance, he gathered courage as he proceeded, and finally administered a pretty good sermon. He paused for a reply, and confessed afterwards that he never felt so insignificant in his life as when the artist, with the urbane but positive authority of his profession, merely said: "Turn your head a little to the right, and shut your mouth."

HERE THEY ARE COMPLETED AND

FOR SALE.

TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1616 to '20; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore; Smith's antiquated bark at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Gerish's Island, &c.

The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in its palmy days, the Light-House at its original height, and a lively sea view, at about 1805—a true picture of days when the white sail ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the embalmed canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a devoted son of old "Strawberry Bank," so called, and will tell their own story, when hung in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.

Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-office.

THOS. P. MOSES.

Laconics.

Some of our friends have expressed a strong desire to know where we were during the thunder storm of Monday night, that we so positively asserted in Tuesday's CHRONICLE that "no thunder" accompanied the vivid lightning and heavy rains. It's no matter where we were,—we are willing to accept their assurances that there was thunder, but we positively refuse to believe that it was first quality, for thunder which is not heavy enough to attract a man's attention, (when it is the first thunder of the season, too,) no matter where he is, is of mighty little account anyway.

Boatswain Isaac T. Choate is ordered to duty at the navy yard.

Mr. George A. Perkins' advice to the public to "keep cool" may seem superfluous just at present, but the good time is rapidly approaching when the cold stuff he advertises for sale will be a luxury to all and a necessity to many. Sick people, fishermen, butchers, imbibers of lemonade and soda water (and other mixed drinks, the names of which we cannot now recall to memory,) all need ice during the summer months, and Mr. Perkins' advertisement tells them where it can be procured.

The New Hampshire Methodist Conference convenes at Manchester to-day and continues one week. Those attending can procure tickets at the Portsmouth office at one-half the usual rates.

The Universalist society of this city have extended an invitation to Rev. S. S. Hebbard of North Bridgewater, Mass., to become their pastor at a salary of $2000 per annum. This church has been without a minister for nearly two years.

The following divorces have been decreed by the S. J. Court at Exeter: Lydia D. Seymour from William H. Seymour; Annie Mooney from Thos. P. Mooney of Portsmouth; Annie M. Cornell of Hampton from O. H. H. Cornell; John P. Foster of Salem from Mary J. Foster; Geo. A. White from Temperance White, of Newcastle; Lizzie G. Dinsmore from Jerome C. Dinsmore; Abbie L. Fogg from Chas. F. Fogg.

AID FOR LOUISIANA.

BOSTON April 21.

The intelligence of the flood in Louisana and its awful consequences is fully confirmed. Thousands of people have been driven from their houses and many are represented as being on the point of starvation. Relief is called for. Our citizens are moving earnestly to respond with alacrity and liberality to this appeal. It is hoped that all New England cities will cooperate in this good work. In behalf and by order of the Citizens' Committee.

SAM'L C. COBB, Mayor.

To the Citizens of Portsmouth.

Acting somewhat upon the above suggestion of the Boston Citizens' Committee, who have investigated the needs of the people of Louisana by reason of the devastating floods there, and being assured of the exigency of the case, I hereby invite all citizens interested in the matter to meet at the Common Council Room this Wednesday evening at half past seven o'clock, to take such action as they may deem best under the circumstances, for rendering any assistance practicable to the sufferers.

Respectfully,
FRANK W. MILLER, Mayor.

DR. FLINT'S

QUAKER BITTERS.

These celebrated Bitters are composed of choice Roots, Herbs and Barks, among which are Gentian, Sarsaparilla, Wild Cherry, Dandelion, Juniper and other Berries, and are so prepared as to retain all their medicinal qualities. They invariably cure or greatly relieve the following complaints: Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Liver Complaint, Loss of Appetite, Headache, Bilious Attacks, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Ague, Cold Chills, Rheumatism, Summer Complaints, Piles, Kidney Diseases, Female Difficulties, Lassitude, Low Spirits, General Debility, and, in fact, everything caused by an impure state of the Blood or deranged condition of Stomach, Liver, or Kidneys. The aged find in the Quaker Bitters a gentle, soothing stimulant, so desirable in their declining years. No one can remain long unwell (unless afflicted with an incurable disease) after taking a few bottles of the Quaker Bitters.

ATTENTION.

Keep Cool! Keep Cool!

SUMMER is coming! I want a piece of ICE; where can I get it? Why, just send a boy to Perkins', No. 30 South St., and you are sure of it. The Subscriber, having purchased the entire interest of the Portsmouth Ice Co., would take this opportunity to thank his old customers for their past patronage, and would solicit the continuance of the same as well as that of the public generally. Situated as I am, with a large Ice House on Mt. Vernon St., I am prepared to deliver ICE out from pure spring water, in any part of the city, on the shortest possible notice. By strict attention to the wants of the public and by selecting honest and accommodating drivers, I mean to merit and hope to receive a large share of the public patronage. Special attention given to delivering ICE to the Sick. Orders from Fishermen promptly attended to.

N. B. Hoping all misdemeanors of drivers will be reported to the subscriber before other steps are taken, I promise that all complaints will receive immediate attention. ORDER SLATE at H. M. Clark's provision store,—or orders may be left with the subscriber at No. 30 South St., or sent through the post-office. dawtf GEORGE A. JENKINS.

New Publications.

The GALAXY for May contains an unusual number of short stories. Among these the most noticeable is that entitled "In the Dark," by Theodore Gift, which describes a rather novel love scene in the depths of a cavern. Mrs. Emily E. Ford's "Glimpse of the Tropics" gives a pleasant picture of Havana, and Mr. Albert Rhodes's "American in Paris" tells—not precisely for the first time—the manner in which our countrymen and countrywomen conduct themselves in Paris. Mr. Richard Grant White writes a pleasant essay on the "Lost Beauties of be English Language," and Mr. Justin McCarthy fills his usual number of pages. Without being quite up to the standard of the Cornhill or Fraser, the Galaxy for May is entertaining and full of variety; in the latter respect being decidedly an improvement upon some of the previous numbers of the magazine.

The forty-eighth volume of HARPER'S MAGAZINE concludes with the May number, which opens with a reproduction of "Corinna's Going a-Maying," with three illustrations. A paper, with fifteen engravings, prepared by Helen S. Conant, gives an account of Dr. Schweinfurth's Explorations in the heart of Africa. Ellis Gray's description of the "Flower Mission," illustrated, is timely and very suggestive. Mr. Elliott contributes an illustrated paper on the Fur Seal of Alaska. Moncure D. Conway concludes his survey of Ikley, with reminiscences of Robert Collyer's early days, appropriately illustrated. A comprehensive review of the remarkable career of John of Barneveld—the subject of Motley's new work—is contributed by R. H. Stoddard, with four excellent engravings. In addition to this variety of illustrated articles there are two illustrated Poems—"The Kingfisher," by James Maurice Thompson, and "How the Rain Comes," by Mary Mapes Dodge. Mrs. Oralk's and Prof De Mille's serials are continued; and two short stories are contributed by Constance F. Woolson and Frank Lee Benedict. Harriet Prescott Spofford contributes a beautiful poem, entitled "At the Bridal," and Nelly M. Hutchinson two dainty bits of verse under the title of "Moods of the Calendar." Dr. Samuel Osgood presents an array of mortuary statistics, with suggestive comment. The editorial departments, including an admirable summary of scientific Progress, and a very interesting Drawer, conclude a number replete with entertainment and instruction.

The Frontispiece of ST. NICHOLAS for May is a fine engraving illustrating a passage in Goethe's Poem "Johanna Sebus." Indeed, this number contains many engravings of unusual excellence: Miss Hallock has two, one of which is a specimen of her very best work on wood; Miss Ledyard has two; Eastlake and Sheppard each has a capital piece of character drawing; there is a beautiful little thing copied from Michelet, and a picture from one of Hendschell's graceful and dainty sketches. There is even a drawing from a native Japanese artist. The literary contents this month alternate very fairly between the practical and the imaginative. There is an article on the "Origin of Blind Man's Buff;" one on the workings and wonders of the Telegraph; a paper by the late N. S. Dodge, on "Auctions All Over the World;" "Christmas City," a capital description of a toy-town which can be built by any smart boy; an account of the origin of the story of Blue Beard; a true story from Holstein, of a missionary Stork, and an article with illustrations descriptive of "Haydn's Children's Symphony." There are three serial stories by Trowbridge, Stockton and Olive Thorne; a story of Greenland, with an adventure with polar bears; a delightful little home-story called Miss Fanshaw's Tea-party; a Japanese Fairy tale, and "Jimmyjohns' Sailor Suits," one of Mrs. Diaz' popular sketches. "How Persimmons Took Cah ob Der Baby," by Mrs. Lizzie W. Champney, is a most delightful piece of southern dialect poetry, and with its capital illustrations, is sure to be popular with old and young. "In the Wood" is a sweet little poem with a sweet little picture. The Departments are all good as usual, especially Jack-in-the-Pulpit. The Riddle Box contains one of the best puzzles of the day, an every-day song, written in the "Language of the Restless Imps."

Jules Verne's new story, "The Mysterious Island," is continued in the May number of SCRIBNER'S, with which number a new volume of this magazine is begun. In the same number Edward King has another "Great South" chapter, profusely illustrated. "Atlas," an interesting story by Henry James, Jr., is begun, and will be concluded in June; Mrs. Spofford has a touching story, entitled, "At Last;" and there is a graphic sketch by R. H. D. of "The Doctor's Wife." Mr Richardson's illustrated paper on "The New Homes of New York," tells and suggests much about the "flat" system of living. Mr Stedman discusses "Tennyson" with skill, insight and catholicity; Mr Ruffner, Superintendent of Public Instruction of the State of Virginia, gives his own decided opinions on "The Co-education of the White and Colored Races;" and Mr. Schumacher describes the lately discovered "Silver Desert" of South Am rica. Mr. Taylor's "District School," the opening poem, is charmingly illustrated by Sol. Eytinge; and Miss Trafton's "Katherine Earle" is also illustrated. Dr. Holland, in Topics of the Time, writes about "Star Lecturing," "The Great Temperance Movement" and "Political Morality." The Old Cabinet contains "A Crooked Line" and "The Woodspurge." The Etchings this month are enlarged to four pages, and Home and Society deals entirely with the fashions.

LIPPINCOTT'S MAGAZINE, May number, maintains the usual freshness and fineness, commanding the interest and gratifying the taste of the reader. "The New Hyperion," by Edward Strahan, illustrated, will keeps on its even way, each chapter seeming to possess a qualitness and special interest of its own. "In a Caravan with Gerome the Painter," is illustrated. The "Bluebirds of Spring" is a charming poem. Mr. George MacDonald's serial story, "Malcolm," deepens in interest. The paper by Mr. T. Adolphus Trollope, "A 'Meet' in the Campagna," describes in a very readable way certain odd customs of fashionable English and American visitors abroad, and the provisions made for them by European nations. "Dentist & Dentist; or, My Life as a Book-Agent," part first, by Sarah Winter Kellogg, puts some very fresh life into a much-abused subject. "Burning and Burial," by Fannie E. Feudge, discusses a subject that is commanding a good deal of attention at this time. "A Modern Cressida" is continued, and Mrs. Edith Pearlyn's various loves and lovers are described in a fascinating way. "The British Civil Service," by Reginald Wynford, is a paper containing much valuable information. Then follows a somewhat lively paper on Flirts and their Ways; and the usual variety of Monthly Gossip and Literary Criticism.

"FETTERED FOR LIFE, OR LORD AND MASTER," is the title of a story of the present day, writes by Lillie Devereux Blake, and published by Sheldon & Co., New York. It is a plea for woman suffrage cast in the mould of the novel, and like most stories written to enforce a moral or political dogma fails as a story in the one element essential to the novelist's success—truth to life and to nature. In "Fettered for Life," all the characters and all the incidents of the story are warped to illustrate the subjection of woman to the brutal tyranny of man. The male characters, with no single exception of the favored being who is allowed to marry the heroine, (and even he is nothing but a moral milksop) are domestic tyrants, libertines, brutes, and in general, "fellows of the baser sort." The one person in pantaloons who is neither a muff nor a rous, and who possesses qualities calculated to enlist the sympathy of the reader, turns out to be a woman in disguise; on the other hand, the female characters are of quite a different order. From the butterflies of fashion to the painted inmates of the concert saloon, they are gifted with noble natures and lofty aspirations—but the tyranny of the male despot, alas! condemns to lives in which the principal features are the care of the babies and the sewing of refractory buttons to delapidated shirts! So completely does the author overshoot the mark aimed at that the reader indulges in a smile as the story progresses, and he is apt to laugh out loud when he arrives at the fate of the lady who committed suicide because her "lord and master" wouldn't let her write for the magazine! In short, we lay down the book with a feeling that the author has utterly failed to help the cause she has at heart, from inability to distinguish the line which separates the sublime from the ridiculous.

—A Chicago paper longs for some royalty, and promises that if the Queen will make Prince Arthur Duke of Chicago he will be run for Mayor of that city on a citizens' ticket.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA- DEBILITY- DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.
No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.
All necessary for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.
TESTIMONIALS.
"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."
"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."
"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their case and at very reasonable charges. Retiring from Business.

BY BRET HARTE.

What the colonel's business was nobody knew, nor did anybody care, particularly. He purchased for cash only, and he never grumbled at the price of anything that he wanted; who could ask more than that?

Curious people occasionally wondered how, when it had been fully two years since the colonel, with every one else, abandoned Duck Creek to the Chinese, he managed to spend money freely, and to lose considerable at cards and horse races. In fact, the keeper of that one of the two Challenge Hill saloons which the colonel did not patronize, was once heard to absent-mindedly wonder whether the colonel hadn't a money mill somewhere, where he turned out double eagles and "slugs," (the Coast named for fifty dollar gold pieces).

When so important a personage as a barkeeper indulged publicly in an idea, the inhabitants of Challenge Hill, like good Californians everywhere, considered themselves in duty bound to give it grave consideration, so for a few days certain industrious professional gentlemen, who won of the colonel, carefully weighed some of the brightest pieces and tested them with acids, and tested them and sawed them in two, and tried them and melted them up and had the lumps assayed.

The result was a complete vindication of the colonel, and a loss of considerable custom to the indiscreet barkeeper.

The colonel was as good natured a man as had ever been known at Challenge Hill, but being mortal, the colonel had his occasional times of despondency, and one of them occured after a series of races in which he staked his all on his own bay mare, Tipsie, and had lost.

Looking reproachfully at his beloved animal failed to heal the aching void of his pockets, and drinking deeply, swearing eloquently and glaring defiantly at all mankind, were equally unproductive of coin. The boys of the saloon sympathized most feelingly with the colonel; they were unceasing in their invitations to drink, and they even exhibited considerable Christian forbearance when the colonel savagely dissented with every one who advanced any proposition, no matter how incontrovertible.

But unappreciated sympathy grows decidedly tiresome to the giver, and it was with a feeling of relief that the boys saw the colonel stride furiously out of the saloon, mount Tipsie, and gallop furiously away.

Riding on horseback has always been considered an excellent sort of exercise, and fast riding is universally admitted to be one of the most healthful means of exhilaration in the world.

But when a man is so absorbed in his exercise that he will not stop to speak to a friend, and when exhilaration is so complete that he turns his eyes from well meaning thumbs pointing significantly into the doorways through which a man has often passed while seeking bracing influences, it is but natural that people should express some wonder.

The colonel was well known at Toddy Flat, Lone Hand, Blazer's, Murderer's Bar and several other villages through which he passed, and as no one was seen to precede him, betting men were seen offering odds that the colonel was running away from somebody.

Strictly speaking they were wrong, but they had won all the money that had been staked against them, for within a half an hour's time there passed over the same road an anxious looking individual who reined up in front of the principle saloon of each place, and asked if the colonel had passed.

Had the gallant colonel known that he was followed, and by whom, there would have been an extra election held at the latter place very shortly after, for the colonel's pursuer was no other than the constable of Challenge Hill, and for the constables and all officers of the law the colonel possessed hatred of unspeakable intensity.

On galloped the colonel, following the stage road, which threaded the old mining camps on Duck Creek; but suddenly he turned abruptly out of the road and urged his horse through the young pines and bushes which grew thickly by the road, while the constable galloped quickly on to the next camp.

There seemed to be no path through the thicket into which the colonel had turned, but Tipsie walked between the trees and bushes as if they were but familiar objects in her own stable yard.

Suddenly a voice from the bushes shouted:

"What's up!"

"Business—that's what," replied the colonel.

"It's time," replied the voice, and its owner—a bearded six-footer—emerged from the bushes and stroked Tipsie's nose with the freedom of an old acquaintance. We ain't had a nip since last night, an' that ain't a cracker or a handful of flour in the shanty. Did the old gal go back on yer?"

"Yes," replied the colonel, ruefully, "lost every blasted race. 'Twasn't her fault, bless her—she done her level best. Ev'rybody is against her."

"You bet," said the man. "All been a prayin' fur yer to turn with the rocks, an' somethin' with more color than spring water. Come on."

The man led the way and Tipsie and the Colonel followed, and the trio suddenly found themselves before a small log hut, in front of which sat three solemn, disconsolate looking individuals, who looked appalingly at the Colonel.

"Mac'll tell yer how t'was fellers," said the colonel, meekly, "while I picket the mare."

The colonel was absent but a very few moments, but when he returned each of the four was attired in pistols and knife, while Mac was distributing some dominoes, made from a rather dirty flour bag.

"Tain't so late ez all that is it?" inquired the colonel.

"Better be an hour ahead than miss in this'ere night," said one of the four. "I ain't been so thirsty since I came 'round the Horn, in '50, an' we ran short of water. Somebody'll git hurt if ther' ain't no bitters on the old concern—they will, or my name ain't Perkins."

"Don't count yer chickens 'fore they're hatched, Perky," said one of the party, as he adjusted his dominoe under the rim of his hat. "Sposin' ther' shud be too many for us?"

"Stiddy, stiddy, Clanks!" remonstrated the colonel. "Nobody gits along if they 'low 'emselves to be skeered."

"Fact," chimed in the smallest and thinnest man in the party. "The Bible says somethin' mighty hot 'bout that. I disremember exactly how it goes, but I've heard Parson Buzzy, down in Maine, preach a ripping old sermon from that text many a time. The old man never thort what a comfort them sermons wuz a-going to be to a road-agent though. That time we stopped Slim Mike's stage, an' he didn't have no manners than to draw on me, then sermons wuz a perfect blessin' to me—the thought of 'em cleared my head ez quick es a cocktail. An'——"

"I don't want to disturb Logroller's pious yarn," interrupted the colonel; "but ez it's Old Black that's a drivin' to-day instid of Slim Mike, an' ez Old Black ollers makes his time, hedn't we better vamose?"

The door of the shanty was hastily closed, and the men filed through the thicket until near the road when they marched rapidly on parallel lines with it. After about half an hour Perkins, who was leading, halted, and wiped the perspiring brow with his shirt-sleeve.

"Fur enough from home now," said he. "Taint no use bein' a gentleman at yer have to work too hard."

"Safe enough, I reckon," replied the colonel. "We'll do the usual; I'll halt 'em, Logroller 'tend to the driver, Cranks takes the boot, an' Perk takes right an' left. An'—I know it's tough—but considerin' how everlastin', eternally hard up we are, I reckon we'll hev to ask contributions from ladies, too, ef ther's any aboard—eh, boys?"

"Reckon so," replied Logroller with a chuckle that seemed to inspire even his blank domino with a merry winkle or two. "What's the use of Woman's rights ef they don't ever have a chance of exercisin' 'em? Hevin' ther purses borrowed 'ud show 'em the hull doctrine in a bran new light."

"They're trepsherous critters, women is," remarked Cranks; "some of 'em might put a knife into a feller while apologisin'."

"Ef you're afeared ov 'em," said Perkins, "you ken go back and clean up the shanty."

"Reminds me of what the Bible sez," said Logroller; "there's a lion on the trail; I'll be chawed up sez the lazy galoot," or words to that effect.

"Come, come, boys," interposed the colonel, "don't mix no more than—Hello, thar's the crack of Old Black's whip! Pick your bushes—quick! All jump when I whistle!"

Each man secreted himself near the roadside. The stage came swinging along handsomely; the inside passengers were laughing heartily about something, and Old Black was just giving a delicate touch to the flank of the off leader, when the colonel gave a shrill quick whistle, and the five men sprang into the road.

The horses stopped suddenly as if it was a matter of common occurrence, Old Black dropped the reins, crossed his legs, and stared into the sky, and the passengers all put out their heads with a rapidity equalled only by that with which they withdrew them as they saw the dominoes and revolvers of the road-agents.

"Seems to be something the matter, gentlemen," said the colonel blandly, as he opened the door. "Won't yon please get out? Don't trouble yourselves to draw, 'cos my friend here has get his weapon cocked an' his fingers is rather nervous. Ain't got a handkerchief, hev yer?" asked the colonel of the first passenger who descended from the stage. "Hev? Well, now that is lucky. Just put yer hands behind yer, please—so, that's it." And the unfortunate man was securely bound in an instant.

The remaining passengers were treated with similar courtesy, and the colonel and his friends examined the pockets of the captives. Old Black remained unmolested, for who ever heard of a stage-driver having money?

"Boys," said the colonel, calling his brother agents aside, and comparing receipts, "taint much of a haul; but there's only one woman, and she's old enough to be a feller's grandmother. Better let her alone, eh?"

"Like enough she'll pan out more than all the rest put together," growled Cranks, carefully testing the case of a gold watch. "Jest like the lowlived deceitfulness of some folks, to hire an old woman to kerry their money so it'd go safe. Mabbe what she got hain't nothing to some folk round here that ken win 'em money at races, but—"

The colonel abruptly ended the conversation, and approached the stage. The colonel was very chivalrous, but Crank's sarcastic references to Tipsie needed avenging, and as he could not consistently with business arrangements put an end to Cranks, the old lady would have to suffer.

"I beg your parding, ma'am," said colonel, raising his hat politely with one hand while he very circumspectly opened the coach door with the other, "but we're takin' up a collection for some deservin' object. We was a-going to make the gentlemen fork over the whole amount, but ex they hai'n, got enough, we'll have to bother you."

The old lady trembled, felt for her pocketbook, and raised her veil. The colonel looked into her face, slammed the stage door and sitting down on the hub of the wheel, stared vacantly into space.

"Nothin'?" inquired Perkins, in a whisper and with a face of genuine sympathy.

"No—yes," said the colonel dreamingly. "That is, untie 'em and let the stage go ahead," he continued, springing to his feet. "I'll hurry back to the cabin." And the colonel dashed into the bushes, and left his followers so paralyzed with astonishment that Old Black afterward remarked that "if ther'd ben anybody to hold his horses he would have cleaned out the hull crowd with his whip."

The passengers, now relieved of their weapons, were unbound and allowed to resume the stage, and the door was slammed, upon which Old Black picked up the reins as cool as if he had laid them down at a station while his horses were being changed; then he cracked his whip and the stage rolled off, while the colonel's party hastened back to their hut, finally inspecting as they went certain flasks they had obtained while transacting their business with the occupants of the stage.

Great was the surprise of the road agents as they entered their hut, for there stood the colonel in a white shirt, and in a suit of clothing made up from the limited spare wardrobes of the other members of the gang.

But the suspicious Cranks speedily subordinated his wonder to his prudence, as laying on the table a watch, two pistols, a pocket book and a heavy purse, he exclaimed:

"Come, colonel, bizziness before pleasure, let's divide and scatter. If anybody should hear 'bout it, and find our trail, and ketch us with the traps in our possession, they might—"

"Divide yerselves?" said the colonel, with abruptness and with a great oath. "I don't want none of it."

"Colonel," said Perkins, removing his own domino and looking anxiously into the leader's face, "be you sick? Here's some bully brandy I found in one of the passenger's pocket."

"I hain't nothin'," replied the colonel, with averted eyes. "I'm goin' and I'm a retiring from this business forever."

"Ain't a going to turn evidence?" cried Cranks, grasping the pistol over the table.

"I'm a-going to make a lead mine out of you of you don't take that back!" roared the colonel with a bound which caused Cranks to drop the pistol and retire precipitately backward, apologizing as he went. "I'm going to tend my own business, and that's enough to keep any man bizzy. Somebody lend me 50 till I see him ag'in."

Perkins pressed the money into the colonel's hand, and within two minutes the colonel was on Tipsie's back and galloping on in the direction the stage had taken.

He overtook it, passed it, and still he galloped on. The people at Mud Gulch knew the colonel well, and made it a rule never to be astonished at anything he did; but they made an exception to the rule when the colonel canvassed the principal bar-rooms for men who wished to purchase a horse; and when a gambler who was flush obtained Tipsie in exchange for twenty slugs—only a thousand dollars, when the colonel had always said there wasn't gold enough on the top of the ground to buy her—Mud Gulch experienced a decided sensation.

One or two enterprising persons speedily discovered that the colonel was not in a communicative mood, so everyone retired to his favorite saloon and bet according to his own opinion of the colonel's motives and actions.

When the colonel, after remaining in a barber shop for half an hour, emerged with his face clean shaven and his hair neatly trimmed and parted, betting was so wild that a cool-headed sporting man speedily made a fortune by betting against every theory that was advanced.

Then the colonel made a tour of the stores, and fitted himself to a new suit of clothes, carefully eschewing all the generous patterns and pronounced colors dear to the miner; he bought a new hat, and put on a pair of boots, and pruned his fingernails, and stranger than all he mildly declined to drink.

As the colonel stood in the door of the principal saloon, where the stage always stopped, the Challenge Hill constable was seen to approach the Colonel and tap him on the shoulder, upon which all men who bet that the colonel was dodging somebody claimed the stakes. But those who stood near the colonel heard the constable say:

"Colonel, I take it all back, and own up fair an' square. When I see you come out of Challenge it comes to me all of a sudden you might be in the road-agent bizziness, so I follered you—duty, you know. But after I seed you sell Tipsie I knowed I was on the wrong trail. I wouldn't suspect you, you know, if all the stages in the State was robbed; and I'll give you satisfaction any way you want it."

"It's all right," said the colonel, with a smile. The constable said afterward that nobody had any idea how curiously the colonel smiled when his beard was off. "Give this fifty to Jim Perkins the fust time you see him. I'm leavin' the State."

Suddenly the stage pulled up at the door with a crash, and the male passengers hurried into the saloon, in a state of utter indignation and impecuniosity.

The story of the robbery attracted everybody, and during the excitement the colonel slipped out quietly, and opened the door of the stage. The old lady started and cried:

"George!"

And the colonel, jumping into the stage, and putting his arms tenderly about the trembling form of the old lady, exclaimed:

"Mother!"

Daily Chronicle.

THURSSDAY, APRIL 23, 1874.

The Arkansas War.

News is received of the actual opening of hostilities between the forces of the rival Arkansas governments in Little Rock. A demonstration was made by the Baxter men, which resulted in a provocation to the Brooks party sufficiently strong to cause the firing of a few shots from their side. These were returned, and quite a lively fight ensued, lasting for a few minutes only, the federal troops under Colonel Rose interfering and putting an end to the hostilities by barricading the streets. About 200 shots in all were fired, and a number were wounded. Among these is Major Hall, whose injuries it is feared will result fatally. At last reports all was quiet.

The Arkansas Congressional delegation, together with the contestants for seats in the House—Gunther, Bell and Gause—representing all parties, had an interview with the President Tuesday, in the presence of the Cabinet, relative to affairs in Arkansas. They urged the President to maintain the position he now occupied, to take all proper measures to prevent collision and bloodshed and let matters in the controversy be settled by the courts.

The Louisiana Floods.

Captain Porter of steamer Alice reports the whole of Amite valley under water. The river generally has a bank of twelve to fifteen feet, but now the water is four feet deep over the banks, and has washed away houses, implements, etc., and the inhabitants have fled to high lands, where they now abide in a destitute condition. General M. Jeff. Thompson, chief State engineer, sends the following despatch to the Associated Press from Baton Rouge: "The Hickey crevasse is 1200 feet wide; passes seven feet of water at a velocity of eight miles per hour. The two McCullom crevasses are each 150 feet wide, but will be closed in a few days."

A bill to afford relief has passed both houses of Congress.

Readables.

A vigorous cannonade is kept up by the national troops upon the Carlist positions before Bilboa, Spain, and is beginning to tell. Several points bombarded by the republicans have been evacuated by the insurgents. It is reported that the food of the Carlists is exhausted and that the men are eating horse-flesh. Later reports say the Carlists have been compelled by the heavy fire of the republican batteries to abandon their positions at Portugalite and San Tuerco.

The steamers Electra of the Providence line, and City of Boston of the Norwich line, came into collision in New York harbor Tuesday, but though the latter was temporarily disabled, no serious injury to either steamer or to persons was caused. The passengers of the City of Boston were transferred to the steamer Rhode Island, and those of the Electra to the steamer Frances. The tug-boat S. J. Christian was sunk in endeavoring to render assistance, and there was for a short time great excitement among the hundreds of spectators.

Destructive fires are reported from the towns of Ishpenning and Vergennes, Michigan, with a total loss of $170,000; also in Richmond, Va., loss $500,000.

A severe tornado and thunderstorm occured in Erie, Penn., Tuesday, causing considerable damage, and the death of one man.

Captain Thomas of the steamship Greece, which rescued the passengers and crew of the Europe, has brought a suit for libel against the captain of the latter steamer.

The Nautical Gazette thinks that the reports which have recently appeared that the storms on the Atlantic have of late years increased in frequency and violence are nonsense. It says that modern steamers are constructed on such wretched models that they are unfit for rough weather. The old proportions of beam and depth to length are now disregarded, and the modern steamers, like velocipedes, must be kept going at high rate of speed or go down.

A traveller writes that nothing remains of the American colony which went to the Holy Land several years ago to reform the Turks and rebuild the Temple, but the site of their settlement. The German colony from Wirtemburg, which followed the American, was more practical and successful. They number sixty families, and have converted the waste land near Joppa into a garden, have hundreds of orange and lemon trees. The Americans, it may be remembered, were brought home at the expense of the government.

The House by unanimous consent has referred to the joint committee, now investigating the affairs of the District of Columbia, a resolution providing for the suspension of the present legislative assembly of the District. The regular time for the annual meeting is fixed for the 25th of this month. The opinion is daily gaining strength that the report of the committee will favor an entire change in the present government of this city.

The commissioners of internal revenue have received a report by telegraph from the corps of special agents sent to New Orleans for the purpose of investigating the alleged frauds in the working of large distilleries in that city. Mr. Brooks of Philadelphia, shot there some years since while engaged in a similar service, was at the head of the party, and Mr. John J. Hogue of Ohio accompanied them. Mr. Hogue was assaulted in that city and badly beaten by some of the distillery men on the ground that he was from Cincinnati, and that the investigation into fraudulent distilleries had been instigated by dealers in that city. Three of the four distilleries investigated were found to be engaged in frauds on a large scale. The investigation into the condition of the fourth is not yet completed. Mr. Sypher of Louisiana took occasion on the floor of the House, Tuesday, to attack the commissioner of internal revenue for seizing the distilleries thus engaged, and complained bitterly that the government troops have been employed for this purpose. Considering the circumstances attending the fraudulent acts of the distilleries, the speech of Mr. Sypher attacking the commissioner was one of the most remarkable of the kind ever made on the floor.

A letter from Mexico states that Rev. Mr. Watkins, another American minister and companion of the murdered missionary Stephens, has received a letter signed by a Catholic clergyman and sixteen Catholic students, threatening his life unless he leaves for America. They state that they have demanded his expulsion by the President, and if the demand is not complied with there will be a revolution. President Lerdo has given assurances of his protection to Watkins. Investigation into the murder of Rev. Mr. Stephens develops the fact that the military guard of the village of Ahualulco were the first to discharge their muskets into the body and head of Mr. Stephens, blowing his head to pieces, A Mexican, who occupied a room in the same premises, was then killed. Then Mr. Stephens' rooms were sacked, his papers and books taken to the public square and burned amid ringing of bells, music and great rejoicings, the murder was occasioned by a sermon of the Catholic priest in regard to the necessity of "cutting down a tree which bears bad fruit."

President Grant vetoed the finance bill on Wednesday, and recommended a speedy return to specie payments in his message to Congress.

—A Florida judge was arrested, and put in a calabooze for drunkenness. While in confinement he endeavored to issue a writ of habeas corpus, requiring a sheriff to seize his body, and bring it before himself, in order that he might inquire into the legality of his own confinement. However, the brilliant scheme didn't work, and yet, this is called a land of liberty.

Do Not Persecute the Body

In sickness with medicines that depress the physical energies. What the sick principally need is an accession of vital strength to enable them to cope with the enemy that has assailed them. The diseased system should be sustained, toned, purified and regulated, and there is no medical preparation in existence so largely end wed with the properties required to effect these objects as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. In ordinary practice aperient, blood-depurating, anti-bilious and sedative medicines are administered separately. In Hostetter's Bitters all these agents are combined, and act together in perfect harmony, so that undue debility and undue excitement are alike prevented, and the strength of the patient rallies while the disease is losing ground. In dyspepsia, liver complaint, chronic constipation, intermittent fevers, general weakness, and all ailments involving physical and mental depression, this pure vegetable restorative is a sovereign remedy.

Important to Sufferers.—The greatest benefactor is one who relieves pain and cures disease. Dr. Silsbee has accomplished both by his miraculous discovery of ANAKESIS, an absolutely easy, rapid and infallible cure for PILES in all stages. All Doctors endorse it and 20,000 cured sufferers testify to its virtues. It is a simple suppository acting as an instrument, soothing poultice—no medicine. The relief is instant and cure certain.—Price $1.00; sold by Druggists everywhere, and sent free by mail from Depot, 41 Walker st., New York.

SUFFERERS from Scrofula and Scrofulous affections, clean up! Why wear your Pimples, Blotches, Ulcers, Sores? Why have your life twisted out of you by Dyspepsia, Rheumatism and Gout? Why suffer Syphilitic and Mercurial diseases to rot the bones in your body, or the flesh off your bones? Why let your sluggish blood drag, and scatter its distempers through your veins? AYER'S COMP. EXT OF SARSAPARILLA cures these complaints, and cleanses them out of the system. Use it faithfully, and you bring to society a healthier, cleaner, and far more acceptable member.—[Democrat, Baltimore, Md.]

HERE THEY ARE COMPLETED AND FOR SALE.

TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1616 to '20; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore; Smith's antiquated bark at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Gerrish's island, &c.

The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in its palmy days, the Light-House at its original height, and a lively sea view, at about 1850—the picture of days when the white sail ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the enchanted canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a devoted son of old "Strawberry Bank," so called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.

Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-office.

Prof. Gunning's Lecture.

The lecture at Mechanics' Hall, Tuesday evening, was attended by fully as many persons as the room could well accommodate. This lecture was on "World-making," and the absorbing interest of the previous ones was sustained if not increased.

The speaker supposed that the crust of the earth could be peeled off to a depth of twenty-five miles. What would be the result? We would cut away all the lime, sand, slate,—all the stratified rocks; we would stand on a world of massive and crystalline rocks. These are the foundation rocks. How were they made? The speaker showed by a few experiments that burning is simply the jostling of atoms of oxygen with other atoms and that the deepest and oldest rocks are cinders. The illustrations and experiments take us to this great truth; that once our earth was like a sun, a globe of boiling rock and metal. Experiments show that such a globe would crust over and cool from without inward, and very slowly. One of the Germans had estimated 350,000,000 years as the time required for the earth to cool down from the melting point of granite to the dew-point. What would be the history of a cooling sphere? Science, deciphered from the rocks of one globe, is the deciphered law of the universe; and the history of our earth would be repeated in its great outlines on every earth.

The speaker showed how the crust would be crumpled into mountains, broken by volcanoes and shaken by earthquakes. He showed how by the seismograph we feel the pulses of the earth and determine the depth of the blow that causes the earthquake. He had sketched the history of the earth down along the lines of chemistry and mechanics, but had sketched only the great features which would answer for all worlds. How can we know the other worlds?

Touch by the finger-tip tells but little. We gain a knowledge of matter through undulations borne on the air and on the ether. Undulations borne on the air, the mind translates into sound. The longer and slower vibrations which pulse through the ether break on the body, where the mind translates them into heat. Shorter and quicker vibrations effect only the eye, where the mind knows them as light. Still shorter vibrations fall unheeded, even on the eye. Nature, as bounded by our senses, is not all of nature. Prof. Pearse has estimated that a dozen senses, each as far-reaching as the eye, would not be enough to translate into consciousness the whole of nature. As the ocean breaks on the cliff in waves and billows, so nature, as a vast sea of undulations, breaks upon man. And to the finest undulations man is as insensate as the cliff to the ocean. It is the province of science to make the mind feel where the hand cannot, and see where the eye cannot. We must reach out along the undulations which come from other worlds and make them tell what the other worlds are made of.

Here the speaker introduced a few experiments on light, which showed that different burning bodies and different intensities of heat give, each, its own color. This led to spectra, and experiments showed that burning bodies, if solid or fluid, give spectra of colored zones, and if vapor give spectra of colored lines. This fact determines the condition of heavenly bodies. Stars give spectra in zones, and must be either solid or fluid. Nebulae and comets' tails give spectra in lines, and must be vapor. Another course of experiments showed that the material of stars and nebulae is indicated by the spectra. We know almost as well what the sun is made of as the earth.

Once our earth was molten; sun and stars are molten to-day. The lines of light which come from Orion's nebulae take us one step farther toward the beginning, and show us the primeval world stuff.

The speaker introduced here the great French experiment in which an oil globe is made to throw off rings and the rings to break and gather up into mimic planets and those to throw off mimic moons. From the mimicry of a universe in oil we turn to the real universe. The harmless nebulae show a new creation begun. By a series of nebulae, we pass to the white stars such as the pole star. From nebulae they have lately passed into stars. They are young, and as their oxygen is almost all free they are burning with a fierceness of which we can hardly frame a conception. Their spectra show colored lines as well as zones, and we must infer that some of the metals there exist only as vapor. From the white we pass to the red suns, of which our own is one. Their spectra consist only of zones, and we infer that they are older than the white stars. Sorby has lately shown that the light shed from white suns—light which comes in pulses, quick and short,—could not build up a fruit or flower. Its energy could build up flowerless plants. The planets of the pole star class can have no fruit or flower, and our earth, when its sun was white, bore the flowerless plants of the coal period. Passing from the suns to the planets, the speaker showed that the smallest are the most advanced in their geologic development. The oil-spheres gradually slacken their speed of rotation, and their orbits contract. One by one they fall back into the central orb whence they came. The action of the tide is to check the earth's rotation and lengthen out the day. Take two tables of planetary distance, one by Bode's law and the other by observation, and it will be seen that the planets are nearer the sun than they used to be. The law whose out-working we saw in the oil-spheres is already dominating in the real universe. One by one these great globes will be gathered back to the sun, from whose bosom they came.

The next lecture will be on the great question of Science, "Darwinism,"—the question in the light of late discoveries.

Laconics.

Rev. F. R. Wade left Newcastle on Monday, the 20th, to commence his pastoral duties at Trumbull Corners, N. Y. His departure is deeply regretted, by both the schools and church over which he faithfully presided the past year.

About 10 o'clock on the evening of the 21st, the crew of a fishing vessel lying near the Spring Market were aroused by cries for help, proceeding from the water near their vessel, and jumping into their boat succeeded in rescuing a man from almost certain death by drowning, as the tide was running full strength at the time. On getting him on board he was found to be a marine from the navy yard; he was taken to the police station and properly cared for, but next morning was very sick, and the city physician pronouncing his complaint pneumonia, he was at once taken to the yard.

Edwin Herbert, son of Mr. George Herbert, living on Water street, fell overboard from a wharf on Wednesday, but was rescued by his young playmates, who seeing him drowning promptly jumped into the water and brought him safely ashore. No harm resulted to any of the little fellows, other than a good "ducking" and wetted clothes.

The executor of Arabella Rice has filed a bill in equity against the trustees of the Rice fund for a public library in Kittery, to have a construction put upon the clause on the will relating to the legacy, certain legal questions having arisen which might effect the interest of residuary legatees resident abroad. The trustees are represented by William H. Hackett and the residuary legatees by C. W. Woodman of Dover.

Portsmouth Items.

[Foster's Democrat.]

Mayor Miller has been very busy since his inauguration in looking after the expenses of the city. It is said on good authority he will make a saving of $2000 in the support of the poor. On the roll of pensions he has found a large number of people who are non-residents, and who should be taxed to the county. In one case a woman who had a bank account of $1800 has been receiving aid all winter. Things have been managed very loosely, and the chief aim seems to have been to see how large the Overseers' bills could be made and the most profit derived by them. The whole system of allowing store-keepers to act as Overseers is wrong.

The row among the parishoners of the Episcopal Church continues. Some of the old stand-bys have directed their pews to be sold if the present clergyman is engaged for another year, while a large number of others utterly refuse to pay any pew rent or do anything to support the parish. It is said they already have been obliged to use some of their permanent funds to pay current expenses, owing to this trouble.

Aid for Louisiana.

At the meeting of citizens at the Common Council Room, Wednesday evening, Mayor Miller was chosen chairman and William H. Hackett secretery. The following gentlemen were appointed a committee to take the matter in charge, and are requested to meet at the Council Room this (Thursday) morning at 10 o'clock; Ichabod Goodwin, Daniel Marcy, Wm. Simes, Frank Jones, E. G. Peirce, Jr., C. Marden, Wm. H. Sise, Chas. Robinson, John G. Moses, J. P. Bartlett, John H. Broughton, Frank W. Miller.

—"It is the fate of kings," says an old writer, "to look from the windows of their halls of feasting upon the sepulchres prepared for them." The vicissitudes of French royalty have more than once belied the force of the remark. The ashes of Louis Phillippe have not yet been deposited at Dreux; all that is mortal of Charles X. moulders in the crypt of a monastery in Austria; nor are the remains of Napoleon III. as yet sheltered either by the golden dome of the Invalides, or the groined roof-trees of St. Denis.

Great Mistakes.

To set up our standard of right and wrong, and judge people accordingly.

To measure the enjoyment of others by our own.

To expect uniformity of opinion in this world.

To endeavor to mould all dispositions alike.

Not to yield to immaterial trifles.

To worry ourselves and others with what cannot be remedied.

Not to make allowance for the infirmities of others.

To consider everything impossible which we cannot perform.

To expect to be able to understand everything.

—Bad words are as influential as the plague and the pestilence. They have wrought more evil than battle, murder and sudden death. They crop through the ear into the heart, call up all its bad passions, and tempt to break God's commandments. A few bad words get into the ear of the mother of mankind, and led her on to eat the forbidden fruit.

—A school teacher in DeWitt county, Ill., has introduced a new method of punishment into his school. When one of the girls misses a word the lad who spells it has permission to kiss her. The Clinton Public says: The result is that the girls are fast forgetting all they ever knew about spelling, while the boys are improving with wonderful rapidity."

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA- DEBILITY- DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.
No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.
All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent, and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.
TESTIMONIALS.
"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."
"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."
"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unsolicited proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges.

Oliver Harper Takes a Turkish Bath.

[Letter to Alta California.]

CONSTANTINOPLE, February 16.

I have read, certainly not less than fifty times, elaborate descriptions of genuine Turkish baths by Bayard Taylor, Ross Browne, and others, and I have always had my imagination filled with the combined ecstacies of being scrubbed with hot water and perfumed soap and iced sherbet, and I made up my mind not to leave Turkey without having had that delightful experience. You know that I belong to the softer sex, and that they do not bathe promiscuously here as in Baden, Long Branch, and many other fashionable places.

This bath where I went in is for ladies alone, not even the "common herd" being admitted, for the charge is very high. I have made a few friends among the natives since I came here, and can speak a few words of Greek (the predominant tongue), and owing to my acquaintance with these ladies, I got a glimpse, or rather a whole day's sight, of a Paradise where man is excluded. The exterior of these baths is in the usual style, or no style, of Turkish architecture; but the interior fully recompenses for the lack of beauty without. It is in the upper part of Galata, and you have to go in sedan chairs, which wait for you, as you must take the extremest care of yourself in coming out, particularly at this season of the year. A cold after a Turkish bath is almost always fatal.

Four of us went together with two women servants, who carried our towels, bathing-dresses and lunch. It is an all-day's job, and the ladies all take lunch with them. I had a number of very handsome and curious things given me at the Exposition by the Egyptian and Turkish Commissions, and among them were large bathing towels with borders of gold woven in; also, a bathingdress similarly decorated. My friends insisted on my taking them, and they made of me while in the bath a person of no ordinary importance, for, as it happens no one but royal ladies are permitted to wear such in public baths; however, nobody interfered with my right to wear them, only admired me, not always from a distance.

On entering we were conducted to a large room, where we must undress and leave our things. I think there were nearly fifty women there in all stages of undress, who all paused to regard us with curiosity while we disrobed. Men can pull off their most sacred garments, toss them in a heap, and run about as if nothing were amiss, but somehow I felt as Eve did, when she made the discovery that she was a little too thinly clad for the time of the year.

A servant caught up our bathing dresses and left the room, beckoning us to follow. We ran the gauntlet of a hundred pair of eyes before we reached the divan where I was laid, like a defunct, still with no clothes on. I raised my head to see if I could not find a friendly towel, or anything, but the attendant ducked my head back on the pillow again, as much as to say, "lie there." I did, but rolled my eyes around a little, and saw that there were at least twenty more women lying around in spots like myself; but they all seemed to take it very easily.

The room was very warm and grew warmer perceptibly, though how, I don't know, until I began to feel as if I should suffocate, my heart beat painfully hard and I grew very faint, when one of the women gave me some lemonade, of which I drank two glasses. Then all of a sudden, I began to prspire and I looked like a pumpkin that had lain out all night in a heavy dew. I felt as if I was dissolving, and waited patiently till the end should come, and I should be but the transparent essence of what was once a very substantial body; but that time had not come. I was so sleepy that I felt like calling very hard names, when the woman came and made me get up after she had rubbed me down like a race horse, with a pair of very scratchy gloves, which left my skin as red as a lobster. Then, we all being in the same state, were led into another great, vaulted marble-floored room, where the divans are made of marble, which is not at all soft to lie on. This room was warmer than the last, more vapory, and the vapor was more strongly perfumed with sandal-wood. After lying a few moments the marble grows soft, and a sense of most delicious repose comes over you. You feel a soft languor and a dreamy content, and your eyes close and you lay with a smile of exquisite laziness on your lips, and your imagination flies off in every possible direction, when the sweet repose is again rudely broken, and you have again to "move on."

Now, indeed, opens the door of Paradise. You are led, still without other covering than nature gives you, into a large circular room, with marble pillars supporting the blue dome that is spangled with stars. All round the room are marble divans, and in the centre is an immense fountain, with in the basin of which are sixty or seventy girls and women playing in the warm, perfumed water, or lying in all attitudes on the marble edges of the basin. The water rises in one grand column over fifty feet, and falls back into an upper basin, while the lower one is undisturbed except by the beautiful white forms that it most delights to receive.

On all the divans lay women of all ages and complexions, even to some negresses, who only served to make the white bodies and polished limbs appear more lovely than ever. Small fountains were placed at regular intervals around the large room, and from these the attendants poured continuously over the bodies of those who lay on the divans warm water, which was carried off by pipes.

One attendant stood at my head, holding my gold-embroidered bathing apparatus, one lathered me with perfumed soap till I began to imagine myself a gigantic rose, and all these beautiful beings laughing and singing and gliding around me but other specimens of flowers. Another attendant rubbed me with gloves made of sponge, and another poured warm water over me incessantly, not dashed it, not let it trickle, but just emptied the beautifully chased silver ewer over me with the gentlest of motions, till it seemed like a caress. Then soap of bitter almonds was rubbed on my face, and other of another kind was rubbed in my hair, all done in that tender, caressing way that made it a positive ecstacy; then more perfumed water till I felt drowning in a sea of all delights, in which I could distinguish perfumes, flowers, sweet-singing voices, and forms of heavenly beauty. Time and the outer world were lost in this delightful trance and I desired nothing, nothing else in the world to make my life content forever. To lie there on the marble and dreamily watch the glorious white of the living statues with the long, black hair, and the rich, dark eyes; to see the soft, undulating motions of them swimming in the warm, delicious water; to look at the lovely forms stretched full length on the divans and on the edge of the fountain, and others laughing, sporting, singing, mingling with affectionate glances, and wrestling in the water, or on the marble floor, dripping from every limb the perfumed water that glistened on their bodies, and the trickling of the fountain, and the rosy, subdued light that stole in through the jealously-guarded windows, were enough to send one of an imagination like mine off into the realms of fancy, and make one believe it the promised land, and cause the whole soul to be satisfied with the picture which needed no imagination to embellish. For after all, what is the Heaven we have been taught to believe in but a place where all is light and perfume, and love and beauty; where every sense shall be satisfied, and every desire filled with a pure and exquisite fulness? It is true that in this heaven of mine there were not any men, but I did not miss them in my supreme content, nor, I think, did any of the women who were lying about clasped lovingly in each other's arms, or laughing and sporting in the water, and I think now, as I have before, I had just as lief have my Paradise an exclusive one where no men could come.

Just as I arrived at this very sensible conclusion, my attendant roused me from my dreams of perfect peace by pointing to the fountain and signifying that I was also to get in. My four friends then made their appearance with the servants and our luncheon, and nobody can tell of the comical look of us five sitting round the baskets eating, and without any clothes on. I have seen many sights in my life, but we women around those baskets, with chicken-legs in our hands and glasses of wine, and other things, were too perfectly ludicrous for anything, and I laughed till I couldn't eat. If I only had napkin to cover my face I think I should have laid down and died on the spot.

All my dreams of a luxurious, sleepy, sensuous Paradise, filled with undulating figures of transcendent beauty, were gone, and I was fully possessed of the demon of mirth, and I provoked the others into my own state of mind—a capacity which has never deserted me at any time or place, or with any person, in my life—and we were soon the maddest of the crowd in the perfumed waters. I would be afraid to tell all the freaks we performed, and antics and pranks we cut. Although it did not in the least startle the natives, it might some who have imagined me to be the model of perfection in deportment.

But then you must remember that Mrs. Grundy does not live in Constantinople, and she has no one to tell tales out of school except my own self, and I never tell more than suits me. It was two full hours before our wild sport ended, and we slid out of the water and sat talking in little knots of four or five, while the attendants were drying our hair, and separating it till it stood out in a light puff all around our heads. Not a tangle was left in it, and no comb or brush was used. Then we were laid on the same marble divans, though with a thick bathing towel this time under us, while the attendants punched and pulled, and rubbed all our joints, and cracked all our knuckles and elbows and shoulders till I thought I should be always even more unsteady than ever. They don't give you the least chance to make a protest to this sort of thing. They roll you and rub you up and down and round and round, till you only want a chance to get your hands free to "punch their heads," when all at once, panting and perspiring, they grin at you and say pekky, which means "all right."

—An auctioneer in Burlington, Vt., got a bid of only 37 1-2 cents for an elegant family Bible. "What is the trouble with this town?" said he. A wag responded, "Squire, didn't you know that this city has just gone democratic?"

—The best thing the ever green Mrs. Malaprop has said lately, is that "she does not want to vote because she couldn't bear the shock of the electrical franchise."

FRIDAY, APRIL 24, 1874.

The President's Veto.

In the interest of honor and good faith, we rejoice at the action of President Grant in vetoing the finance bill. We think it one of the crowning acts of his administration, eminently wise and exceedingly commendatory. Had the bill been signed, speculation would have been encouraged and more inflation demanded. With the rapid growth of the country, contraction is inevitable unles the Executive interposes such checks as may prevent. The majority of the Western and Southern States have been destitute of sound principles of finance, and the representatives yielding to the popular clamor for temporary relief, have forgotton the pledges of good faith which each government note now represents, and without looking to the future, vote to add to the burdens of coming generations. Every honest man wants to pay his debts. Every honest nation should be guided by like principles and impulses. No man cancels his liabilities by increasing his promises to pay. No nation can afford to depreciate the value of its own notes. We did not anticipate that the bill vetoed by the President, would, had it been signed, have depreciated to any great extent the value represented by a gold dollar—but regarded it as an entering wedge to be followed by other and similar demands. Contraction tends to restore to their true values articles which enter into general use. Inflation aids in raising prices beyond their true value. When a physician seeks to conquer disease he applies remedies which will cure. Our national finances are diseased, and so badly that the caustic remedy of contraction is necessary to save credit and honor. The President sees clearly the danger, and is not content with passing the responsibilities to the next administration, but prefers probing to the root of the difficulty at once. A more equal distribution of the national currency is a plausible demand, but considering that it is only by contraction that permanent relief may come, the opposite course would only tend to increase the present difficulties and delay the desired return to specie payments. The desire for a return to specie payments is not born of a wish to hear the jingle of gold and silver, but rather to disestablish false and inflated values. The anxiety of the inflationists for a more equal distribution of the currency is on a par with the communist idea of dividing the wealth of the world among all its inhabitants. If inflationists and communists were alike successful in their propositions, equality would not last a day, the great money centres would speedily absorb the largest proportion of paper promises, and the shrewd financiers and money-getters would be constantly drawing from their simpler and more generous neighbors additions to their growing fortunes. In full sympathy with the masses of the population of this country, we think the President's course prevents a policy which only encourages speculation, paralyzes legitimate business, enriches the wealthy and tends to make the poor poorer. Recognizing in the President's action the only correct line of conduct to eventually bring down values to their true basis, we regard his decision as indicating that during the remaining years of his administration its Executive will use his power to stay the tide which speculators wish for to aid themselves at the expense of the masses. Let us hope that the inflation bubble is pricked.

The President's Veto Message.

As soon as the message was announced in the Senate, Wednesday, Mr. Conkling moved that it be read, and in the midst of a silence that was almost painful the Clerk began, and read as follows:

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
WASHINGTON, D. C., April 22, 1874.

TO THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES:

Herewith I return the Senate bill No. 617, entitled, "An act to fix the amount of United States notes and the circulation of National banks, and for other purposes," without my approval. In doing so, I must express my regret at not being able to give my assent to a measure which has received the sanction of a majority of the legislators, chosen by the people to make laws for their guidance; and I have studiously sought to find sufficient arguments to justify such assent, but unsuccessfully. Practically it is a question whether the measure under discussion would give an additional dollar to the irredeemable paper currency of the country or not, and whether, by requiring three-fourths of the reserves to be retained by the banks and prohibiting interest to be received on the balance, it might not prove a contraction; but the fact cannot be concealed that theoretically the bill increases the paper circulation $100,000,000, less only the amount of reserves restrained from circulation by the provisions of the second section. The measure has been supported on the theory that it would give increased circulation. It is a fair inference, therefore, that if in practice Congress should fail to create the abundance of circulation expected of it, the friends of the measure, particularly those out of Congress, would clamor for such inflation as would give expected relief. The theory, in my belief, is a departure from the true principles of finance, National interest, National obligations to creditors, Congressional promises, party pledges on the part of both political parties, and of the personal views and promises made by me in every annual message sent to Congress, and in each inaugural address. In my annual message to Congress in December, 1869, the following passage appears:

Among the evils growing out of the Rebellion, and not yet referred to, is that of an irredeemable currency. It is an evil which I hope will receive your most earnest attention. It is a duty and one of the highest duties of Government to secure to citizens a medium of exchange of fixed, unvarying value. This implies a return to a specie basis, and no substitute for it can be devised. It should be commenced now, and reached at the earliest practicable moment consistent with a fair regard to the interests of the debtor class. Immediate resumption, if practicable, would not be desirable. It would compel the debtor class to pay beyond their contracts the premium on gold at the date of their purchase, and would bring bankruptcy and ruin to thousands. The fluctuations, however, in the paper value of the measure of all values, gold, is detrimental to the interest of trade. It makes the man of business an involuntary gambler; for in all sales where future payment is to be made, both parties speculate as to what will be the value of the currency to be paid and received. I earnestly recommend to you, then, such legislation as will insure a gradual return to specie payments, and put an immediate stop to fluctuations in the value of the currency.

I still adhere to the views then expressed. As early as December 4, 1865, the House of Representatives passed a resolution, by a vote of 144 yeas to 6 nays, concurring in the views of the Secretary of the Treasury in relation to the necessity of a contraction of the currency, with a view to as early a resumption of specie payments as the business interests of the country will permit, and pledging co-operative action to this end as speedily as possible. The first act passed by the Forty-first Congress, on the 18th day of March, 1869, was as follows:—

An act to strengthen the public credit of the United States:

Be it enacted, etc., That in order to remove any doubt as to the purpose of the Government to discharge all its obligations to the public creditors, and to settle conflicting questions and interpretations of the law, by virtue of which such obligations have been contracted, it is hereby promised and declared, that the faith of the United States is solemnly pledged to the payment, in coin, or its equivalent, of all the obligations of the United States, and of all the interest-bearing obligations, except in cases where the law authorizing the issue of any such obligations has expressly provided that the same may be paid in lawful money, or in any other than gold or silver; but none of said interest-bearing obligations not already due, shall be redeemed or paid before maturity, unless at such times as the United States notes shall be convertible into coin, at the option of the holder, or unless at such times as the bonds of the United States bearing a lower rate of interest than the bonds to be redeemed can be sold at par in coin. And the United States also solemnly pledges its faith to make provision at the earliest practicable period for the redemption of the United States notes in coin.

This act still remains as a continual pledge of the faith of the United States to make provision at the earliest practical moment for the redemption of United States notes in coin. A declaration contained in the act of June 20, 1864, created an obligation that the total amount of United States notes issued, or to be issued, should never exceed $400,000,000. The amount in actual circulation was actually reduced to $356,000,000, at which point Congress passed the act of Feb. 4, 1868, suspending the further reduction of currency. The $44,000,000 have ever been regarded as a reserve, to be used only in case of an emergency, such as has occurred on several occasions, and must occur when, from any cause, revenues suddenly fall below the expenditures, and such a reserve is necessary, because the fractional currency, amounting to $50,000,000, is redeemable in legal tender on call. It may be said that such a return of fractional currency for redemption is impossible, but let steps be taken for a return to a specie basis and it will be found that silver will take the place of fractional currency as rapidly as it can be supplied. When the premium on gold reaches a sufficiently low point, with the amount of United States notes to be issued permanently within proper limits, and the Treasury so strengthened as to be able to redeem them in coin on demand, it will then be safe to inaugurate a system of free banking, with such provisions as to make compulsory the redemption of circulating notes of the banks in coin, or in United States notes themselves redeemable and made equivalent to coin. As a measure preparatory to free banking or for placing the Government in a condition to redeem its notes in coin at the earliest practical moment, the revenues of the country should be increased so as to pay the current expenses, provide for the Sinking Fund required by law, and also a surplus to be retained in the Treasury in gold.

I am not a believer in any artificial method of making paper money equal to coin, when coin is not owned or held ready to redeem the promises to pay; for paper money is nothing more than promises to pay, and is valuable exactly in proportion to the amount of coin that it can be converted into. While coin is not used as a circulating medium or the currency of the country is not convertible into it at par, it becomes an article of commerce as much as any other product, and the surplus will seek a foreign market, as will any other surplus. The balance of trade has nothing to do with the question; the duties on imports being required in coin, create a limited demand for gold, and about enough to satisfy that demand remains in the country. To increase this supply I see no way open but by the Government hoarding through the means above given, and possibly by requiring the National banks to aid. It is claimed by the advocates of the measure herewith returned that there is an unequal distribution of the banking capital of the country. I was disposed to give great weight to this view of the question at first, but on reflection it will be remembered that there still remains $4,000,000 of authorized bank note circulation assigned to the States having less than their quota, not yet taken. In addition to this, the States having less than their quota of bank circulation have the option of $25,000,000 more to be taken from those States having more than their proportion. When this is all taken up, or when specie payments are fully restored, or are in rapid process of restoration, it will then be the time to consider the question of "more currency."

(Signed) U. S. GRANT.

The Arkansas War.

The news from Arkansas tells of no more bloodshed since the skirmish of the 21st, although a renewal of hostilities at one time seemed imminent, the forces on both sides being deceived by the firing of shots which they supposed were from the enemy, but the mistake was soon discovered. The government troops still hold control of the situation. Baxter, with the approval of the President, has issued a proclamation convening an extraordinary session of the legislature to settle the controversy.

Lieutenant Cushman of the sixteenth infantry, stationed at Little Rock, went to Memphis to communicate with the President concerning the firing on Colonel Rose Tuesday night, which he says he could not do in Little Rock in consequence of the violent partisan feeling in the telegraph office. According to his statement Colonel Rose had secured an armistice between the rival factions, which was to continue until nine o'clock Wednesday morning, but on Tuesday night Colonel King White, with a regiment of armed negroes, marched down to the Anthony House, where he made a violent and inflammatory speech, calling on Baxter to allow him to go ahead and "clean out Brooks the usurper, or any other damned troops." Colonel Rose, hearing the disturbance, mounted a spirited horse, and rode down to inform White that he was not complying with the terms of the truce in marching his men to that point. Colonel Rose was unarmed except with a sword, and was accompanied by an orderly who was armed with two holster pistols. On reaching White, Colonel Rose asked him what he meant by breaking the truce, and ordered him to disperse his men. White made some reply which was not heard, and fired his pistol at Colonel Rose and shouted to his men to fire, which they did, generally into the air, but several persons were wounded, as already reported. As soon as the firing began, Colonel Rose rode back to the engine house where company C, 16th infantry, was stationed, and ordered the men to run out a hook and ladder truck and form a barricade, which was speedily done and the men placed behind it. During the excitement a private accidentally fired off his gun, and the cry was raised, "The regulars are going to shoot," and in less than ten minutes the street was deserted. Lieutenant Cushman states positively that, with the exception above stated, not a single shot was fired by the United States troops or by Brooks' garrison on the barricades.

The reports on Thursday evening were to the effect that the war is over, and Baxter's troops leaving for their homes.

A Boston Horror.

A horrible and brutal murder was committed in South Boston, Wednesday, the victim being a bright little four-years-old boy named Horace F. Millin, whose parents reside at 253 Dorchester street. The body was discovered on the marsh near the Crescent avenue station of the Old Colony Railroad, by a deaf and dumb boy, who left the place in terror, and found a policeman whom he guided to the marsh. The body was horribly mutilated, there being eighteen stabs in the region of the heart (any one sufficient to cause death,) five cuts on the back of the hands and a ghastly wound on the face, in addition to which the throat was cut from ear to ear. A young fellow named Pomeroy has been arrested on suspicion. This Pomeroy is only sixteen years old, but was some time ago convicted of torturing two little boys in South Boston, for which he served a term in the House of Correction. He admits his guilt.

In sickness with medicines that depress the physical energies. What the sick principally need is an accession of vital strength to enable them to cope with the enemy that has assailed them. The diseased system should be sustained, toned, purified and regulated, and there is no medical preparation in existence so largely endowed with the properties required to effect these objects as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. In ordinary practice aperient, blood-depurating, anti-bilious and sedative medicines are administered separately. In Hostetter's Bitters all these agents are combined, and act together in perfect harmony, so that undue debility and undue excitement are alike prevented, and the strength of the patient rallies while the disease is losing ground. In dyspepsia, liver complaint, chronic constipation, intermittent fevers, general weakness, and all ailments involving physical and mental depression, this pure vegetable restorative is a sovereign remedy.

—George M. Clark, of large renown as a showman, and of goodly repute as a gentleman, was giving a deposition in Manchester, in the case of Kelsey vs. Osborn. James F. Briggs, counsel for the plaintiff, did not like the looks of the deposition from his standpoint, and undertook to weaken it by belittling the witness. Hence he began, with a sneer: "You are in the negro minstrel business, I believe?" "Yes, sir," was the reply. "You black your face and sing for a living, do you?" "Yes, sir." "Well, don't you call that rather low business to follow?" "I don't know but it is, sir; but it is so much better than that of my father before me that I am rather proud of it." "Why, what did your father do?" "He was a lawyer."

HERE THEY ARE COMPLETED AND FOR SALE.

TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1616 to 20; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore; Smith's antiquated bark at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Gerrish's island, &c.

The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in the olden days, the Lighthouse at its original height, and a lively sea view, at about 1830—a true picture of days when the white sail ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the embalmed canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a devoted son of old "Strawberry Bank," so called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.

Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-office.

"Misplaced Economy."

The Times of April 21, under the above heading, contained an article from which we make the following extract, which contains the gist of the whole:

"Great complaint is made of the treatment of the poor by the new Mayor. It is said that he goes about the city, cutting off the scanty supplies that have been heretofore furnished to the needy, and insisting that the unfortunate poor shall go to the alms-house or starve. Much suffering has been caused in this way to those who are unwilling to make themselves common paupers but are compelled to ask from the city a little assistance to make out the bare living for which their own best exertions are not quite sufficient. Many of these are widows and orphans, who have seen better days and will submit to great privations and suffering rather than go to an alms-house. It seems to be the disposition of the Mayor to refuse all assistance to some of these suffering people and compel them to choose between absolute pauperism and starvation. Perhaps it is not fair to accuse Mayor Miller of being unfeeling or cruel, but the talk of those who know his conduct towards the poor and of those who have suffered from it, leaves him to choose between that accusation and the charge of very unwise and very inhuman economy. As economy has never been supposed to be one of the weaknesses of the new Mayor, there are many who are disposed to explain his course upon the supposition that he is seeking a cheap reputation for that virtue at the expense of those who are too helpless to explain."

These strictures are certainly not abusive nor do we imagine they are intentionally unjust, for the bitter personalities and dishonorable misrepresentations which formerly were the main stock in trade of the Times seem to have been entirely discarded by the new management, our formerly spiteful and mendacious neighbor now having a just claim to respect for its courtesy and fair dealing, even if it is as democratic as ever. But no person who knows Mayor Miller will for a moment credit any stories of his neglect or oppression of any of the worthy poor. It is only the pretenders and swindlers who can complain of being cut short in their accustomed rations from the public crib,—those who are either chargeable to other towns or States, or the county, or who are able to take care of themselves if disposed to do so. He probably thinks that Portsmouth people have enough of their own poor to take care of, without being so heavily burdened with outsiders as they have been of late; and it is always safe to remember that the loudest beggars are not usually the most needy or worthy.

The investigations of the Mayor and Overseers of the Poor have thus far revealed much abuse of charity in the past. The great trouble seems to have been the desire to sell to the city, for the support of the poor, groceries, wood and provisions, the poor list being increased largely beyond its just limits by the neglect of proper inquiries. The city has actually paid $1000 or more the past winter for the support of county paupers who should have been sent to the farm at Brentwood. In one section of the city, also, a careful investigation of the claims of nearly twenty recipients of aid was made, and the Board was unanimously of the opinion that but two were actually entitled to it. Thus far four persons have been found receiving aid, who belong in Maine! One woman has managed to get along nicely all winter, with city aid, without trenching on her $800 deposit in the bank. And a number of those who are justly chargable to the county, have expressed their perfect willingness to go to the County House rather than live as they have the past winter, notwithstanding the large sums expended by the city; and one of them, at least, says he would have been glad to have gone there last autumn had he been sent. The number of paupers cared for at the Almshouse during the past winter was fifty-one, while one hundred and seven persons have received outside aid!

Laconics.

Mr. John Burton, belonging in Union, in this State, a brakeman on the Conway division of the Eastern Railroad, fell from the cars about a mile this side of Conway Junction, Thursday, and striking on his head was instantly killed.

Sweetser & Clark offer for sale a large stock of standard and new-pattern furnaces, cooking stoves and ranges,—also a number of second-hand stoves, in good repair, very cheap,—children's carriages, carpet sweepers (just the thing for this time of year,) the "Empire" clothes wringer, marble mantles, shelves, brackets, etc. They have also a full line of metal and cement piping, valves, garden vases, iron sinks, copper and iron pumps, bath tubs, refrigerators, etc., and are prepared to attend to all orders for plumbing. See their advertisement in another column.

The alarm of fire, Thursday forenoon at ten o'clock, was occasioned by the burning of a bed in the large building on the corner of Vaughan and Russell streets, occupied by several families. The damage was trifling, one of the extinguishers putting out the fire without difficulty.

Remarkable occurrence—snow fell here on Thursday. Many people hurried out of doors to view the rare phenomenon. In some places snow storms are quite common.

The first train to Dover, Thursday, ran off the track near Cushing's station, and the first down train was delayed two hours.

The Newmarket Advertiser says; The Dover City Bonds have advanced an eighth per cent. since the Portsmouth youth drove fast enough through the streets of Dover, to "lend the city money," on the statement of the City Marshal before the Police Court.

Seven of the Jubilee Singers, including Mr. and Mrs. Bradley, have left for Providence, and are to travel with a panorama. The remainder of the troupe have recruited its ranks, and will continue their concerts under the leadership of Mr. Edwards.

Mr. James Rand, of Greenland, the oldest of the Eastern Railroad station agents, has been succeeded by Mr. Herbert Tafts.

The Dover Enquirer is informed "that there will be an excursion or visit to Portsmouth, in a short time, of one of the Masonic societies of this city, in all probability to return the visit of the Davenport Council, who were here two or three weeks ago. These reunions are becoming popular and are productive of great pleasure."

Four weeks ago two young men, unknown, left a team at Mr. Locke's stable in this city, and they have not been heard of since, nor has a claimant appeared for the team.

In Rochester, N. Y., one hundred guns were fired in honor of the President's veto. In New York, gold fell and government stocks stiffened, while other stocks fell.

It was reported from Memphis, on Wednesday, that the Mississippi was still rising and the weather was warm and rainy. The Memphis & Little Rock Railroad was but six inches above water, and the Mississippi Central was broken north of Canton by an overflow.

The Springfield Republican believes that the defeat of Dawes will be the means of electing Gen. Butler Governor of Massachusetts next Fall. Very good—that will get him out of Congress, you understand. We wish the General success.

Christian, the first mate of the French steamship Amerique, has committed suicide.

Massachusetts has had another playful assassination; Angus Brown, nine years old, son of a butcher in Lawrence, was instantly killed Tuesday evening, April 21, by the discharge of a gun playfully pointed at him by a young man named John Stoddard.

North Carolina sticks persistently to her new volcano. A letter from Chimney Rock, at the foot of Stone Mountain, on the 18th instant, says: "Stone Mountain and vicinity experienced one of the most terrific shocks yesterday yet felt. Several shocks have occurred within the last week."

By a fire in Montreal, April 22, an old lady named Cohen was burned to death and her husband badly injured.

The old wretch Bender, before reported as under arrest at Salt Lake City, has been positively identified through the agency of photographs sent from Kansas. The young man, suspected of being his son, proves to be merely a deserter from the army.

At the Springfield armory there have been manufactured, since work started up last year, about 7000 muskets of the model of 1873, and 7000 carbines; in all, one-half the 28,000 muskets and carbines which are to be completed by the 1st of July. The forging for all is done, however, and the foreman says about seven-eighths of the whole work is finished.

The ladies of Portland have determined to notify the governor that the liquor law is not enforced, and to ask him to see that it is carried out.

A "Crusader's Club" is to be formed at Bangor by the young men, who desire to aid the ladies in their work of closing the saloons and bars.

House Breaking and Burglary.

[Lawrence Eagle.]

Mrs. Horrigan, a respectable middle aged widow lives with her little son on Kingston street, South Side. About two o'clock on Monday morning she was aroused by the loud barking of her dog and got up and struck a light. The dog appeared to be attracted under the bed and she putting aside the valance discovered a man crouched up underneath the same. In her fright she hardly knew what to do at first, but being alone in the house with the child she resolved to take matters in her own hands so she went for him, dragged him forth by the hair of his head and seizing a camphor bottle which set upon the table, the only weapon within reach, she let the blows fall thick and fast directly on the top of his cranium. The bottle shortly gave way and the broken pieces of glass cut his head most shockingly, she still having him in her power, when he begged lustily for mercy. She then discovered who the maurader was, who proved to be no other than Maurice McDonald, a young man 23 years old, who resides only a short distance from her house on Kingston street. Finding that he was a neighbor and she probably mistaking his mission, as the sequel afterwards proved, she allowed him to go home. In the melee Mrs. Horrigan's little boy, who was sleeping in an adjoining room, was aroused, and after McDonald had left as they were wading about in the pools of blood that were left upon the floor (as he bled badly,) the boy picked up a twenty-five cent scrip. This caused Mrs. H. to search for her wallet and it was gone from the shelf where she left it; a further search found it upon the floor and eleven dollars in bills which it contained had been abstracted. Shortly after this officer Spofford of the night watch came along and to him the facts were communicated, who caused the arrest of McDonald, though he has not yet been indicted on a charge of burglary but on a complaint of being disorderly, and was fined $20 and costs or 90 days. McDonald is a fellow quite well known in the Sixth Ward and about election time has been a prominent ward politician. He has no family but resides with his mother.

Intemperance in Women.

[N. Y. Era.]

Dr. Stephen Smith, at a Temperance Conference held at the rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association, referred to the prevalence of intemperance among women, and deprecated the custom of encouraging young girls in the use of wine at parties and other festive gatherings. The doctor might have gone further, and referred to the practice which obtains among many modistes and other purveyors of articles for female adornment, of supplying their customers with alcoholic stimulants. It is certainly deplorable that a taste for ardent spirits should be permitted to fasten itself upon mothers, wives, and daughters of the Nineteenth Century; but that such is the case, we have unquestionable medical and other authority, both in this country and in England. It is a subject, however, that no one likes particularly to handle, and the suggestions of the learned Doctor as to the inculcation of right principles in the child, though very well in their way, will hardly reach the complaint. The advice that physicians should refrain from prescribing alcohol as medicine, is much nearer the point; and still another suggestion, peculiarly pertinent at this holiday season, we may venture to make on our part; it is to determinedly avoid the intoxicating cup, at this period of special temptation.

—Cobleigh left off his flannels, Monday, and on Tuesday quietly said to his wife: "Mid Cobleigh, ged by udderglooabs dab quick."

—A dog with two tails was seen in Brooklyn, the other day. One belonged to an ox, and was carried in the dog's mouth.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS,

For all the Purposes of a Family Physic

CURING

Costiveness, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Dysentery, Foul Stomach and Breath, Erysipelas, Headache, Piles, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Tetter, Tumors and Salt Rheum, Worms, Gout, Neuralgia, as a Dinner Pill, and purifying the Blood,

are the most congenial purgative yet perfected. Their effects abundantly show how much they excel all other Pills. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. They purge out the foul humors of the blood; they stimulate the sluggish or disordered organ into action, and they impart health and tone to the whole being. They cure not only the every-day complaints of everybody, but formidable and dangerous diseases. Most skillful physicians, most eminent clergymen, and our best citizens send certificates of cures performed, and of great benefits they have derived from these Pills. They are the safest and best physic for children, because mild as well as effectual. Being sugar-coated, they are easy to take; and being purely vegetable, they are entirely harmless.

'73 REUNION.

THE "HISTORY OF THE RETURN OF THE SONS & DAUGHTERS OF PORTSMOUTH, JULY, 1873," is just published. It contains 96 pages, octavo, and is a thorough detail of everything relating to the three Festal Days,

The Reunion, July 4th, High School Reunion, 5th, The Praise Meeting, 6th;

and containing a

Verbatim Report

of every speech that was uttered at the Tent on the 4th and 5th, besides giving a full report of all the Reunion preliminary movements in Portsmouth, Boston and New York. Much of the matter of this work has never yet appeared in any form, and we think it will prove interesting to all who participated in the Three Days' Jubilee.

The work is for sale at Foster's Book Store, the Chronicle Office, J. H. Lane's, and at Wm. E. Preston's.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA. DEBILITY. DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

R. H. EDDY,
SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,
For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs
NO. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.
After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Research made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims to any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.
No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.
All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay thereby, are hereby saved inventors.
TESTIMONIALS.
"Irregard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."
"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of getting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."
"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges.

Grand College Hall.

[Every Saturday.]

President Eliot is not generally regarded as a braggart; and when, in his annual report to the overseers of Harvard College, he spoke of the great dining hall, now nearly completed, in connection with Memorial Hall, in these words, "It is by far the grandest college hall in the world, and there are very few rooms for secular purposes in existence which can be compared with it," people were disposed to lift their eyebrows a little, and to feel uncomfortable at the thought of the peacock taking possession of the university. There are few public halls abroad, especially in England, that move men educated in our American colleges so much as the great college halls, like those in Oxford and Cambridge. Memorial Hall, and the more extensive Dining Hall, which, with the theatre, planned but not built, form the great building erected by the alumni of Harvard in commemoration of the noble dead, will appeal in the same way to travellers and students, and as a matter of dimensions President Eliot is assuredly right. Christ Church Hall at Oxford is 115 feet by 40, and 50 in height; Queens College Hall measures 60 feet by 30. In Cambridge, St. John's College Hall is also 60 feet by 30; that of Corpus Christi College is 62 by 27, the height 35; Trinity Hall is 36 feet in length by 24 in width, and 25 in height; and the two greatest halls, those of King's College and Trinity College, are, the former, 102 feet long, 36 feet wide and 45 feet high; the latter, 102 feet long, 40 feet wide, and 56 feet high. This last may perhaps be regarded as the finest college hall in England. Now the dining hall at Harvard is 165 feet in length, 60 feet in width, and from 50 to 60 feet in height. So, then, as regards dimensions, it surpasses the finest of the English halls, and when it is added that the Memorial Hall, connecting with it, is 104 feet in length by 30 feet in width, and that the theatre will be added finally upon the other side, with corresponding proportions, it may be seen that Harvard men may feel a justifiable pride in the structure. Nor is it simply in its bigness that one may rejoice, but in the noble simplicity of the interior, the honest workmanship, and the beauty of its lofty, open timber roof.

"The Durndest Knowingest Dog that ever Wore Hair."

[Virginia Enterprise.]

He came in from Truckee Meadows yesterday, did this level-headed dog. He rode in by the side of his master on a load of potatoes. He was not a pretty dog, not a dog of blue blood and high degree. He was a tall, gaunt, shaggy-haired, wild-eyed looking brindle beast of unrecorded pedigree. As the wagon, carrying man, dog, and potatoes, halted for a time in front of a saloon, in North C. street, one of a party of half a dozen loungers thereabout made some remark in regard to the appearance of the canine, when thus spake ye hornyhanded, frowsy-headed tiller of ye soil: "Fellers, that air ain't a purty dog, I know—he's like me, makes no pretensions to natural beauty—but he's just the durndest knowinest dog that ever wore hair. He's got more instink, that dog has, an' more savey, an' pen'tration, an' insight into human natur', jist in that ugly old cabeza o' his nor can be found in the heds of a whole plaza full of yer eddicated town dogs—poodles an' sich. What I pride in him for his regular human sense; he's jist the durndest dog out! Now of I come home from town perfectly sober (when I've left him to see after the ranch) it would jist do your hearts good to see that dog show off what a sense of appreciation he's got of me. Fellers, his gorgeous tail then stands aloft; he skyugles about; he runs on afore me a scrapin' up the yearth with his hind feet, sendin' the chips a flyin'; he holds up his head an' barks in a cheerful an' manly tone, o' voice, escortin' me forward an' feelin' pronder'n he'd holed a woodchuck! But let me come home full of tangle-leg, sheep-herder's delight, and terrantiller juice, and that is the durndest shamedest dog yer ever saw. He jist takes one look at me an' he knows it all. Down goes his tail, he lops his years, hangs his head, squats his back, an' lookin' back now an' then he slinks off an' crawls under the barn—actually ashamed to be seen about the premises for fear somebody'll find out that I own him. I tell you, fellers, he's the cussedest dog for right out an' out human sense that ever was seed in these parts, and Truckee Medders is proud that he war pupped thar!"

"Good-Bye, Old Pard!"

A popular clergyman of Buffalo returned from an extended journey a few days since, and just as he alighted from the cars and was receiving the congratulations of a crowd of delighted parishioners who had assembled to meet him, an inebriated individual followed in his wake, seized him by the hand, and exclaimed:

"Well, good-bye, old pard, I'm going further, and shall keep up the same old drunk for awhile yet, but you're pretty well sobered up, and you had better keep so, I 'spect, as drinkin's rough when a fellow's 'round home. But you know how to go on a gallus spree and have a rum time just as good as any pard I ever had, and you has my respect. Day-day, old buster."

Before the astonished clergyman could gather his wandering wits the hail fellow was off, leaving a terrible scandal for the delectation of the gossips of Buffalo, and a prospective candidate for the lunatic asylum.

Butler's Jokes in New Orleans.

Col. C. C. Fulton, writing from New Orleans to Baltimore American, says:

General Butler has left engraved in enduring granite several pungent jokes he perpetrated whilst in command of this city. One of these is on the base of the equestrian bronze statue of General Jackson. One morning when the curses of the people were loudest and deepest, a stone-cutter, guarded by a file of soldiers, was observed in Jackson square commencing work with his chisel. No one knew in what way he would desecrate the monument of the hero of New Orleans, and each letter was watched as it appeared on the base until that declaration which made him famous, "The Union must and shall be preserved," was spelled out by the indignant people.

A short time afterward, the same workman, similarly guarded, approached the bronze monument to Henry Clay, on Canal street, and soon was cut deep and distinct in the granite block, immediately under the foot of the statue, the following extract from one of the greatest speeches of the distinguished Kentucky statesman; "If I could be instrumental in eradicating this deep stain—slavery—from the character of our country, I would not exchange the proud satisfaction which I should enjoy for all the triumphs ever achieved by the most successful conqueror." Little did those who erected these monuments ever expect to see such inscriptions upon them, but although they gnashed their teeth at the time, they now regard the inscriptions as not altogether out of place, in view of the changes that have been wrought by fraternal war. The people have got used to them, and now laugh at these grim jokes of the erratic Butler.

"Uncle Dan'l and the Chillun.

In the new book, "The Gilded Age," a humorous episode is the experience of "Uncle Dan'l and the Chillun," when they saw the Mississippi for the first time, and caught their first glimpse of a steamboat.

"Uncle Dan'l" (colored,) aged forty; his wife, "Aunt Jinny," aged thirty; "young Miss" Emily Hawkins, "young Mars." Clay, the new member of the family, ranged themselves on a log after supper, and contemplated the marvellous river, and discussed it. The moon rose and sailed aloft through a maze of shredded cloud wreaths, and the sombre river just perceptibly brightened under the veil of light. A deep silence pervaded the air, and was emphasized at intervals, rather than broken, by the hooting of an owl, the baying of a dog, or the muffled crash of a caving bank in the distance. The little company assembled on the log were all children (at least in simplicity and broad, comprehensive ignorance,) and the remarks they made about the river were in keeping with the character; and so awed were they by the grandeur and the solemnity of the scene before them, and by their belief that the air was filled with invisible spirits, and that the faint zephyrs were caused by their passing wings, that all their talk took to itself a tinge of the supernatural, and their voices were subdued to a low and reverent tone. Suddenly Uncle Dan'l exclaimed: "Chil'ren, dah's sonefin a comin!"

All crowded close together and every heart beat faster. Uncle Dan'l pointed down the river with his bony finger.

A deep coughing sound troubled the stillness, away toward a wooded cape that jutted into the stream a mile distant. All in an instant a fierce eye of fire shot out from behind the cape and sent a long, a brilliant pathway quivering athwart the dusky water. The coughing grew louder and louder, the glaring eye grew larger and still larger, glared wider and still wider. A huge shape delivered itself out of the gloom, and from its tall duplicate horns dense volumes of smoke, starred and spangled with sparks, poured out and went tumbling away into the farther darkness. Nearer the thing came, till its long side began to glow with spots of light which mirrored themselves in the river and attended the monster like a torchlight procession.

"What is it! Oh, what is it, Uncle Dan'l?"

With deep solemnity the answer came:

"It de Almighty? Git down on ye' knees!"

It was not necessary to say it twice; they were all kneeling in a moment. And then, while the mysterious coughing rose stronger and the threatening glare reached farther and wider, the negro's voice lifted up its supplications.

"Oh Lord, we's ben mighty wicked, an' we 'zerve to go de bad place, but good Lord, deah Lord, we ain't ready yit, we ain't ready—let dese po' chill'en hab one mo' chance. Take de ole niggah if you got to hab somebody. Good Lord, we don't know who you's got an eye on, but we knows by de de way you's a comin', we knows by de way you's a tittin' along in yo' charyot o' fiah, dat some po' sinner's gwyne to ketch it. But good Lord, dese chil'ren don't b'long heah, dey's I'm Obedstown whah dey don't know nuffin, an' you knows, yo' own self, dat dey ain't 'sponsible. An' deah Lord, good Lord, it ain't like ye' long-sufferin' lovin' kindness for to take dis kind o' vantage o' sich little chil'ren as dese is when dey's so many ornery grown folks chuck full of cussedness dat wants roastin' down dah. O Lord, spah de little chil'en away f'm dey frens, jes' let 'em off jes' dis once, and take it out'n de ole niggah. Heah I is, Lord, heah I is! De ole niggah's ready, Lord, the old—"

The flaming and churning steamer was sight abreast the party, and not twenty steps away. The awful thunder of a mad valve suddenly burst forth, drowning the prayer, and as suddenly Uncle Daniel snatched a child under each arm and ran into the woods with the rest of the pack at his heels, and ashamed of himself, he halted in the deep darkness and shouted, but rather feebly, "Heah I is, Lord, Heah I is." There was a moment of throbbing suspense, and then to the surprise and comfort of the party it was plain that the august presence had gone by, for its dreadful noises were receding. Uncle Daniel headed a cautious reconnoissance in the direction of the log. Sure enough, the Lord was just turning a point a short distance up the river, and while they looked the lights winked out, and presently ceased altogether.

"Hwsh! Well, deres some folks dat say dey ain't no' ficiency in prah. Dis chile would like to know whah we'd a ben if it warnt fo' dat prah. Dat's it, dat it."

Daily Chronicle.

SATURDAY, APRIL 25, 1874.

The Voice of the Press.

Under the heading, "The Doom of Inflation," the New York Tribune says that General Grant has once more deserved well of the country, and that he merits the thanks of Congress no less than years ago when he defended the country against the assaults of a no more dangerous enemy. His veto of the inflation bill is an act of great moral courage, under the circumstances in which it has been done. He has had to resist the solicitations and the importunities of that reckless and unprincipled coterie who have for the last year made themselves his especial champions, and to whom he has yielded too much in matters of administration. To the members of Congress who, in the face of a majority relying solely upon brute numbers, have sustained the cause of common sense and financial honor, and to the members of the Cabinet who on Tuesday last, as we understand, unanimously advised the President against the consummation of this act of legislative folly, the country will not forget to make fitting acknowledgment. The veto of the President is therefore far more important for what it prevents than for what it immediately accomplishes. We congratulate him and the country upon it, not because it kill this particular bill, but because it issues a fair warning to the inflationists in Congress that in all future schemes for debasing the currency they must count upon the opposition of the President. It is a piece of that prevention which is so much better than cure. In this view of the case, General Grant has been able by one stroke of the pen to do a greater service to the country than most men can accomplish in a lifetime.

The New York Times thinks the course of the President is satisfactory, not merely because it kills a very bungling and confused piece of legislation, passed with a wholly indefensible purpose, but also because it proves the consistency of the President in his devotion to the cause of specie payments. The country now has a right to feel that, the issue having been presented in a way to induce the President to ignore it if he had any temptation to do so, he has chosen to meet it frankly. It is not this measure alone to which he is opposed, but the principle on which the measure is based. We may have confidence, therefore, that any similar measure will meet with the same fate. This one fact is calculated to do more for the business of the country than anything else could, because it gives a basis of calculation for the future.

The New York World says: It is with a surprised gratification that we record the veto of yesterday, by which President Grant has killed the inflation scheme and deserved well of all who love the honor of the United States. The citizen who, as Chief Magistrate, has thus given the death-blow to the madcaps of his party has done much to regain the forfeited esteem of large masses of his fellow-countrymen: for he is no patriot who does not rejoice with his whole heart that the strife of parties will now be over the steps toward specie payments, and not over the steps away from specie payments.

The New York Sun thinks General Grant's veto the smartest thing he has ever done since he was elected President.

The New York Evening Post urges that the veto was a noble act nobly done, and the common sense of the country will sustain the common sense of the President. He should now call Governor Dix to fill the office of Secretary of the Treasury, as it is to him, next to the President, to whom we owe escape from the shame and dishonor which Congress would have inflicted upon us.

The Commercial Advertiser says the President's veto is consistent with his record, and thinks there should now be confidence and an upward spring from the long business depression which has prevailed.

The Express says that all who respect the good name of the government will be heartily glad at the conclusion of the President.

The Mail says the veto message is worthy the best days of Jackson, its sole eloquence consisting in courageous adherence to common sense and to common honesty.

The Hartford Courant says the President has been true to his record, true to the Constitution, true to the interests of all men who earn their bread by work; he has again declared for honesty against dishonesty, he has kept the public faith. It is a great victory, a great escape, and we devoutly thank God for it; and we thank the President of the United States with all our hearts. This veto is the noblest jewel in the President's renown, and it will grow brighter as years pass and we look back to the abyss of national dishonor and disaster into which we so nearly plunged. At the opportune moment he has used most tellingly his great constitutional power. No man in his place has ever used it more bravely or in a better cause, and history will hold him in great honor for it. No single act of his will give him a higher place than this.

The Worcester Gazette contends that the veto message, though simple and short, is remarkable for its general soundness and its plain way of putting great financial truths. The hopes of the inflationists, it thinks, are crushed at one blow. The congressmen from the West and South may groan and gnash their teeth, but the most they can accomplish will be to legalize the use of the reserve issued during and since the panic. To take this step required a courageous man. Grant is courageous.

The New Bedford Standard urges that the President has been true to himself and to the republican platform so far, in vetoing a measure which was in open opposition to both,—a cause of sincere congratulation. It will tend strongly to turn the ebbing tide of public confidence in favor of the President and of the republican party, and had he been able to lay it before the people a few weeks earlier it would very likely have prevented the defeats in New Hampshire and Connecticut.

The Lowell Courier thinks the country will take courage from the President's pluck. The veto was none the less welcome because it was not confidently expected.

The Providence Press, after recounting the probabilities of a "break" between the President and the inflationists, says that General Grant will find a quick and hearty response from the people, and that emancipated from their influence he has a future before him if he thoroughly comprehends and has the courage to perform his duty.

The St. Albans Advertiser is of the opinion that the veto will save the republican party from present disintegration which would have followed swift and sure on the news that the President had been imposed upon by the contagious examples and specious reasoning of Morton and others, and had repudiated the pledges of his party.

The Portland Press says the tide is once more turned toward good faith, solvency and permanent national honor.

The Child Murderer.

The Advertiser says that when detective Wood asked Jesse Pomeroy, the murderer of the Millin child at Dorchester, Mass., what he thought should be done with him, he replied: "Put me somewhere so I can't do such things." He is now confined in a cell at headquarters, where he is watched by an officer.

He has had a rare and terrible history, and his condition, while one shudders and shrinks from his fiendish acts, is such as to excite feelings of pity well-nigh as deep as for the poor victims whom he has tortured. The public has scarcely recovered from the horror occasioned by this same boy's cruelty, practised upon the children of Chelsea and South Boston about two years ago, the circumstances attending which are still fresh in mind. Between twenty and thirty small boys, of ages ranging from four to ten years, suffered at his hands. It was his custom to entice them away to some secluded place, and there torture them by sticking the point of a knife and sharpened sticks into their bodies. In nearly every case he would cut a piece from beneath their eyes, disfiguring many for life. Public excitement became so intense that a vigilance committee was organized, and the city authorities offered a reward of $500 for the apprehension of the mysterious young villain, but for a long time no clue could be found. Then a similar enormity was practised in South Boston, for which Pomeroy was arrested. A little boy named Balch, who had been found in a shanty on Powder Horn Hill tied to a beam, divested of his clothing and bleeding from numberless wounds, identified him among one hundred others as the person who had inflicted them. Pomeroy, being then but fourteen years old, was brought before Judge Forsaith, trial justice for juvenile offenders, and sentenced to the State reform school to remain during his minority. Since his confinement there, however, he has conducted himself with such propriety as to interest the directors of the institution, and, when appealed to, the State board of charities released him about a month since on probation. He is now sixteen years old, and is a remarkably stout and active boy. In personal appearance he is by no means repulsive, a defect in one eye being the only blemish in a countenance otherwise bright and intelligent. His lower jaw is rather heavy and his forehead low, but there is nothing to attract special attention. He shows no signs of insanity, except when in conversation on the matter of the crimes which he has committed, and there is no doubt that he is the victim of a terrible mania, and that, as he says, the only way to prevent a repetition of his deeds is to put him in some place where he cannot find the opportunities.

Supreme Judicial Court.

[Exeter News-Letter.]

The past week has been chiefly occupied in the disposal of cases on the criminal docket.

Henry Beckman was found guilty of larceny of a watchchain to the value of three dollars, from George A. Weare of Seabrook on the 10th of June, and sentenced to five months imprisonment in the House of Correction at Brentwood, and to pay the costs of prosecution ($46.45.)

Charles Snow and George F. Snow were sentenced,—the former to sixty days imprisonment in the House of Correction, and to pay the costs of prosecution ($59.97;) the latter to sixty days imprisonment and to pay a fine of twenty dollars and costs of prosecution ($61.15,) for selling "Attleboro" for gold jewelry, at Portsmouth, in January last.

John S. Wendell Jr., of Portsmouth, plead guilty of cruelly beating a horse, and was fined $12 and costs, amounting in all to about $25. The complaint was made by the Portsmouth Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

To the indictment against David Marshall for stealing a quantity of chocolate and jelly in October, from the store of John Arshowe, in Portsmouth, he retracted his plea of not guilty, and plead unwillingness to contend.

Martin Malan of Plaistow, was tried for adultery with one Annie Welch. Jury did not agree on a verdict.

Wm. Splann and James Clasby were indicted for an assault of an aggravated nature upon Charles W. Bean of Fremont, on the 17th of March. The former plead guilty and was sentenced to six months imprisonment in the House of Correction and to pay the costs of prosecution ($22.16;) the latter was found guilty of an assault, and sentenced to five months imprisonment in the House of Correction and to pay the costs of prosecution ($41.36.)

The action of the State of New Hampshire against a quantity of spirituous liquor seized from Patrick Conner of Exeter, was tried, and the jury found they were kept in violation of the law. The case will go to the Supreme Court to settle the constitutionality of the law.

The case tried on Wednesday morning, was an action of assumpsit brought by Calvin Boardman of Salem, against Joseph Yeomans of Newton, to recover the sum of $100 and interest on a note given by the defendant to one Cook, and by her endorsed to the plaintiff. The defence was that no note was ever given; only a receipt for the $100 received. Verdict for plaintiff, for $109.80. Bartlett for plf.; Locke for deft. This action was in order Tuesday afternoon, but one of the plaintiff's witnesses had disappeared, and upon inquiry she was found at the defendant's house, and the plaintiff was unable to induce her to be present, as the defendant's wife said she should not come; but, later in the day, through the persuasive influence of Sheriff Odlin, Mrs. Yeomans' objections were overcome and the witness was induced to ride to Exeter and testify in the case.

On Wednesday was commenced the trial of the case, the State (by the town of Kingston) against Elmer C. Carter, which is a case of barstardy, that the respondent is the father of a child of Sylvania Winslow, and is brought by the town of Kingston to recover damages under the bastardy act.

Martin Malan of Haverhill, Mass., broke jail at Exeter, Thursday night, by escaping from his cell, thence through the bars of the passage window, sawed off by Bly, who escaped a few days ago. Malan was tried in the Supreme Judicial Court last week for the crime of adultery at Plaistow. The jury being unable to agree on a verdict he was remanded to jail and the case continued. The fugitive is an Irishman, about forty five years old, has one stiff knee and no beard. A reward of fifty dollars is offered by Sheriff Odlin for his arrest and delivery.

The news from Arkansas gives indication that all danger of further bloodshad is past, and that the controversy will be left to the courts to decide. No event of importance in connection with the difficulty has been reported since Friday.

Do Not Persecute the Bi·dy

In sickness with medicines that depress the physical energies. What the sick principally need is an accession of vital strength to enable them to cope with the enemy that has assailed them. The diseased system should be sustained, toned, purified and regulated, and there is no medical preparation in existence so largely endowed with the properties required to effect these objects as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. In ordinary practice aperient, blood-depurating, anti-bilious and sedative medicines are administered separately. In Hostetter's Bitters all these agents are combined, and act together in perfect harmony, so that under debility and undue excitement are alike prevented, and the strength of the patient rallies while the disease is losing ground. In dyspepsia, liver complaint, chronic constipation, intermittent fevers, general weakness, and all ailments involving physical and mental depression, this pure vegetable restorative is a sovereign remedy.

The only scientific, rational and successful mode of treating catarrh in the head that has been devised consists in applying Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy with Dr. Pierce's Nasal Douche (the only method of reaching the upper chambers of the nose) and taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery as a Constitutional treatment. To this thorough course of treatment the disease yields as surely as fire is extinguished by water. The Douche and two medicines for $2, by all Druggists. 71⁹

Important to Sufferers.—The greatest benefactor is one who relieves pain and cures disease. Dr. Silsbee has accomplished both by his miraculous discovery of ANAKESIS, an absolutely easy, rapid and infallible cure for PILES in all stages. All Doctors endorse it and 20,000 cured sufferers testify to its virtues. It is a simple suppository acting as an instrument, soothing poultice and medicine. The relief is instant and cure certain.—Price $1.00; sold by Druggists everywhere, and sent free by mail from Depot, 45 Walker st., New York.

SUFFERERS from Scrofula and Scrofulous affections, clean up! Why wear your Pimples, Blotches, Ulcers, Sores? Why have your life twisted out of you by Dyspepsia, Rheumatism and Gout? Why suffer Syphilitic and Mercurial diseases to rot the bones in your body, or the flesh off your bones? Why let your sluggish blood drag, and scatter its distempers through your veins? AYER'S COMP. EXT OF SARSAPARILLA cures these complaints, and cleanses them out of the system. Use it faithfully, and you bring to society a healthier, cleaner, and far more acceptable member.—[Democrat, Baltimore, Md.]

Webster on Rag Paper.

Daniel Webster, in his speech delivered in the Senate in 1832, depicted the evils of a depreciated currency with great force when he said:

A sound currency is an essential and indispensable security for the fruits of industry and honest enterprise. Every man of property or industry, every man who desires to preserve what he honestly possesses or to obtain what he can honestly earn, has a direct interest in maintaining a safe circulating medium. A disordered currency is one of the greatest of political evils. It undermines the virtues necessary for the support of the social system and uncourages propensities destructive of its happiness. It wars against industry, frugality and economy, and it fosters the evil spirits of extravagance and speculation. Of all the contrivances for cheating the laboring classes of mankind none has been more effectual than that which deludes them with paper money. This is the most effectual of inventions to fertilize the rich man's field by the sweat of the poor man's brow. Ordinary tyranny, oppression, excessive taxation—these bear lightly on the happiness of the mass of the community, compared with a fraudulent currency and the robberies committed by depreciated paper. Our own history has recorded for our instruction enough and more than enough for the demoralizing tendency, the injustice and the intolerable oppression on the virtuous and well disposed of a degraded paper currency, authorized by law or in any way countenanced by the government.

A rigid investigation into the cause of the disaster to the steamer Amerique has been ordered by the French government.

Extended reports from the flooded districts on the lower Mississippi, show that the severity of the calamity is on the increase, and the details of individual cases of suffering are very pitiable.

HERE THEY ARE COMPLETED AND

FOR SALE.

TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1630-40; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore. Smith's antiquated bark at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Gerrish's Island, &c.

The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in its palmy days, the Light-House at its original height, and a lively sea view, at about 1830—a true picture of days when the white sail shapes were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the embalmed canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a devoted son of old "Strawberry Bank," as he called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.

Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-office.

THOS. P. MOSES.

their children and themselves without exhausting their stamps. We know many by it, assisting others to PRACTICE ECONOMY these hard times. Every sensible Man, Woman and Boy will at once see that we can sell any of our READY-MADE

Custom Clothing!

AT LOW PRICES, when we have had the chance to make them up of fine First-Class Materials at half price. This is no puff, but a simple body that it would be disparaging to the intelligence of our customers to argue the point. Our assortment of

Gentlemen's Fine Garments,

Business Suits, and Garments Suitable for Mechanics, Laborers and Farmers

is extensive and varied and made up to wear, and those who buy of us will get their money's worth.

We sell no Bankrupt Stock or shop-worn, old faded goods. We do not wish to shock the sensibilities of our customers with fancy tales of fire distress of some (let us hope imaginary) unfortunate trader and his losses. We do not make stock in it. Our Stock and Goods are

NEW, NICE, WELL-MADE AND TRIMMED,

Cost no less than expected, and we sell them so cheap that our customers are cheerful and pleased at our success in business. We make a specialty of

BOYS' AND YOUTHS' SUITS

Voted, That the City Clerk be directed to call the attention of the Eastern Railroad to the dangerous condition of the draw and rail on the bridge to Noble's Island.

Excelsior.

Our local pride is stirred to its utmost depths in contemplating the announcement in the Times of the probable advent of a real flesh-and-blood German "Finished Artiste." We confess to a feeling of chagrin at the success of the Times in being the first to proclaim the event; but we quickly suppress any tendency to uncharitable feeling in view of the splendor of the acquisition.

Unhappily, the matter is still in abeyance, inasmuch as the "Professor" is undecided concerning this important movement. The city of Providence will be loath to surrender a German "artiste," especially one who is united matrimonially with a French lady; yet, if sufficient inducement were offered, no doubt the affair of transfer might be consummated without loss of honor to Providence, and greatly to the glory and profit of Portsmouth.

We have too long endured mutilation at the hands of mere American barbers; and those misguided beings have superadded to their already reprehensible course, the hideous enormity of increasing their price, thus placing themselves on an apparent level with a "Professor."

This is too much for an outraged public; and it is understood that a committee of prominent citizens is to wait upon the distinguished "Artiste," and by a proper representation of our benighted condition, and a liberal pecuniary consideration, compel him to entertain the proposition which we are obliged to make. For the furtherance of this beneficent object the City will issue Bonds, and a subscription list will be started at the City Hall on the corner of Pickering and McDonough streets; subscriptions will be received from persons of all ages and conditions. A public matter of such importance and magnitude should not be permitted to suffer by any paltry circumscription. XLCR.

Mr. Locke has made three journeys to Nova Scotia, spending some two months in search of this fugitive from justice.

The Biddeford Journal says: The Concord, N. H., Monitor, which has had Boston Advertiser and Beacon Hill on the brain, like other papers which have an itching to rub themselves against some of the cod-fish aristocracy to make themselves respectable, has been taken in hand by the plucky Portsmouth CHRONICLE, and shown to be so ridiculous that its friends have thrown up the sponge and cried "quits."

A Texan Tragedy.

A dispatch from San Antonio says that William Milbach, a commercial traveller, on the way from Gohad to Beeville in an ambulance, accompanied by a negro driver, was attacked by three bandits. One tied Milbach while others were searching for money and valuables. Milbach succeeded in getting one arm loose, and drawing a pictol concealed under his coat killed two highwaymen, but was himself killed by the third. The negro managed to escape with the money and valuables, amounting to several thousand dollars.

Communicated.

The Teutonic Element.

The great majority of the people of the United States being descended from England, Ireland and Scotland, gave rise to the present American language,—except in some remote or obscure localities, where even at this late day only patois of certain foreign languages are spoken. But at more recent dates there have been poured into America vast crowds of Germans, descendants of those races which invaded and overwhelmed the ancient Roman Empire. Perhaps from the grand conglomeration of so many different nationalities, parvenus even yet in our common country, may arise at a future period a generation of people superior to the present, which will make the name of the United States far more respected abroad; for republicanism is aggressive in its nature, and it is hardly to be expected that, when the principles of this government become more developed and its power still more extended, it will content itself with its present inaction in the diffusion of those principles. Apprehensive of this, there is a sort of smothered hostility to it in all aristocratic governments of the present day.

Phrenologically speaking, the average German must be considered as lacking in veneration, and in his organization causality must be well developed; consequently in forming his religious or moral ideas he is very slow to follow in the wake of priestcraft. He is apt to believe all of that profession "blind leaders of the blind"—all falling into the same ditch together. In modern parlance, he is to be considered a free-thinker. However, a modicum of the Prussians adhere to the Roman Catholic Church, some being Methodists, but a large proportion professing the Lutheran faith.

We have obtained the most of our notions of the observance of Sunday from the British Isles, but the ideas of the inhabitants of the Continent of Europe are quite different in that respect; therefore the German, after the labors of the week are over, considers himself entitled to a holiday. It may be that he will attend his church, if convenient, on Sunday morning, but the rest of the day is likely to be devoted to pleasures of various kinds, prominent among which are imbibing lager beer, listening to fine music, enjoying the conversation of his friends, etc.; and he would not be scrupulous even in engaging in the dance.

He is very slow in forming his opinions, but having once adopted them, he is very tenacious of them, and the prayers and entreaties of "bands of praying women" only serve to excite his derision. His intellect must be appealed to, in order to produce any change in him; he is not apt to be suddenly converted. Hence the modern crusaders in approaching him have "run against a stump" which has very nearly, if not quite, overthrown them.

But that very tenacity of opinion, and the fear of an overthrow of republican principles, as well as dread of monarchism from which they had so lately escaped, during the late unhappy civil war caused the German citizens of the United States to be devotedly attached to the Union, with a very few dishonorable exceptions. Neither tortures nor death could induce them to violate their allegiance to their adopted country, which they had sworn to support. In fact they risked their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor. The head of one, of whom I am now thinking, and who was incarcerated by a band of rebel ruffians in a south western prison to be led out the next day to the rope, grew white in one night; but he never faltered in his patriotism. Suspicions thrown (as many think, unjustly) on the Union principles of the democratic party have caused the German influence, as is well known to be given hitherto against that party; but a jealousy of the republican party has more recently given a different tendency to the German vote.

The German has a certain respect for the female sex, without any of that Quixotic mockery which sometimes developes itself among Americans of older descent, but that respect seems to be in a measure depreciated when woman steps out of her place. I am induced to make these remarks by the animadversions of some late newspaper correspondents, in which indolence is also charged upon the Germans. Whatever other faults may be charged upon them, indolence is certainly not one of them. Coming to the United States strangers and with little if any means, they are content to plod along as no native Americans would do. Soon a stately mansion arises to take the place of the humble cabin, and well cultivated fields are seen instead of waste lands, —"The wilderness has been made to blossom like the rose." Festina lente would seem to be their motto. By steady industry not a few of the poor Germans have raised themselves to the top of the ladder, while many of their more impatient American neighbors have slipped back. By German labor beautiful towns and cities have been built up in all the newer parts of the United States. VIATOR.

The town of Colfax, California, is reported to have been almost entirely destroyed by fire, with a loss of $40,000.

A famine is reported from Anatolia, Turkey.

The Road to Health.

IF there is a person who does not believe that one bottle of GILBERT'S EXCELSIOR LIVER LOZENGES, price One Dollar, is worth more than five dollars' worth of the best bottled medicine in the market, let that one try them and be satisfied. eS

PROPOSALS FOR MATERIALS TO BE SUPPLIED TO THE NAVY YARDS UNDER THE COGNIZANCE OF THE BUREAU OF CONSTRUCTION AND REPAIR.

NAVY DEPARTMENT,
BUREAU OF CONSTRUCTION AND REPAIR,
Washington, D. C., April 6, 1874.

SEALED PROPOSALS to furnish Timber and other materials for the Navy for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1875, will be received at this Bureau until 12 o'clock, M. of Thursday, May 7, 1874, at which time the bids will be opened.

The proposals must be addressed to the "Chief of the Bureau of Construction and Repair, Navy Department, Washington," and must be indorsed "Proposals for Timber &c., for the Navy," that they may be distinguished from ordinary business letters.

To prevent confusion, and facilitate the opening of the bids, parties bidding for supplies at several yards will enclose their bids in separate envelopes for each yard, endorsed with the name of the yard for which the bid is made.

Printed schedules for such classes as parties deal in are intend to bid for, together with instructions to bidders, giving the forms of proposal, of guarantee, and of certificate of guarantors, with printed forms of drafts, will be furnished to such persons as desire to bid, on application to the Commandants of the respective Navy Yards, and those of all the yards on application to the Bureau.

The Commandant of each Navy Yard and the purchasing Paymaster for each station will have a copy of the schedules of the other yards, for examination only, in order that persons who intend to bid may judge whether it is desirable to make application for any of the classes of those yards.

The proposals must be for the whole of a class, but the Department reserves the right to reject the whole class should the interest of the Government require it, before the execution of the contract. All applications for information, or for the examination of samples, must be made to the Commandants of the respective yards.

Bids or offers will be received only from parties who are bona fide dealers in, or manufacturers of, the articles they offer to furnish. The guarantors must be certified by the Collector of Internal Revenue for the district in which they reside.

The contract will be awarded to the person who makes the lowest bid and gives the guarantee required by law, the Navy Department, however, reserving the right to reject the lowest bid, or any which it may deem exhorbitant

Under the provisions of the second section of the act approved March 3, 1865, the offer of any person who, as principal or surety, has been a defaulter in any previous contract with the Navy Department will not be received.

Sureties in the full amount will be required to sign the contract, and their responsibility must be certified to the satisfaction of the Navy Department.

An additional security twenty per centum will be withheld from the amount of the bills until the contracts shall have been completed, and eighty per centum of the amount of each bill, upon proof in triplicate by the Commandants of the respective yards, will be paid by the Paymaster of the station designated in the contract, or if none is specified, by the Paymaster nearest the yard where the goods are delivered, within ten days after the warrant for the same shall have been passed by the Secretary of the Treasury.

The classes of this Bureau are numbered and designated as follows:

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.
R. H. EDDY,
SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,
For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs
No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,
After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.
No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.
All necessary drawings to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.
TESTIMONIALS.
"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."
"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of pushing their applications to a favorable issue than this an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."
"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges.
JOHN TAGGART."

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL,
For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma and Consumption.
The few compositions which have won the confidence of mankind, and become household words among not only one but many nations, must have extraordinary virtues. Perhaps no one ever secured a wide reputation, or maintained it so long, as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It has been known to the public about forty years, by a long continued series of marvellous cures, that have won for it a confidence in its virtues never equalled by any other medicine. It still makes the most effectual cures of COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, that can be made by medical skill. Indeed, the CHERRY PECTORAL has really robbed those dangerous diseases of their terrors, to a great extent, and given a feeling of security from their fatal effects, that is well-founded, if taken in season. Every family should have it in their closet for the ready and prompt relief of its members. Sickness, suffering, and even life is saved by its timely protection. The prudent should not neglect, and the wise will use. Keep it by you for the protection it affords by its timely use in sudden attacks.

FOREVER.

Those we love truly never die,
Though year by year the sad memorial wreath,
A ring and flowers, types of life and death,
Are laid upon their graves.

For death the pure life saves,
And life all pure is love; and love can reach
From Heaven to earth, and nobler lessons teach
Than those by mortals read.

Well blest is he who has a dear one dead;
A friend he has whose face will never change—
A dear communion that will not grow strange:
The anchor of a love is death.

The blessed sweetness of a loving breath
Will reach our cheek all fresh through weary years.
For her who died long since, ah! waste not tears:
She's thine unto the end.

Thank God for one dead friend,
With face still radiant with the light of youth,
Who loves the gray beard as he loved the youth,
Through twenty years of death

An Unconventional Girl.

Dr. Reginald Deane sat placidly sipping his coffee, glancing now and then at the morning paper beside his plate, and listening in not very polite attention to the remarks vouchsafed by his aunt from the opposite side of the table.

College days, medical lectures, and clinics were over for him. He had wandered through European hospitals, practised enough to attain requisite skill and nerve in handling the scalpel, and learned enough of Nature's philosophy to refrain from drugging his patients to death. He wished leisure now for study more than he desired extensive practice, and therefore he came back to the homestead, beautified the neglected grounds, decorated the long-closed rooms, built a conservatory which should open with white doors from his own especial sanctum, installed "Aunt Rachel" as housekeeper, and announced himself, by a modest door-plate, as ready for surgical calls.

At the house-warming all Ashland had eagerly assisted, whence it was well known that the furnishing was elegant, and many longing wishes to reign in the mansion as mistress filled the heads of aspiring damsels. But Dr. Deane, uniformly polite to everybody, showed no marked preferences, and when invited to parties managed either to avoid attending or else to be only Aunt Rachel's escort; so the sighing damsels turned their hopes in other directions.

All his life Dr. Reginald had dreamed of a "home" that should be "sweet," and he fancied the wife who should sit opposite to him at table and fireside; but he hated care and responsibility, and thought to gain the "home" by establishing Aunt Rachel where a wife would have perhaps given more pleasure, to be sure, but she would demand too much time and attention, he selfishly thought. Six months had gone very smoothly, yet he was conscious that, despite his luxury, his "home" was incomplete.

All this was vaguely passing through Dr. Reginald's mind while he sipped his coffee and listened absently to the lady opposite.

"The Marstons have come home," her last remark, elicited a little closer attention and a definite reply.

"Indeed! Well, we must call at once. Fred is a very agreeable fellow; Mrs. Marston the most perfectly well-bred woman I ever saw, and Miss June—the mischief! Why, she must be a young lady now. I'm half sorry for that; I used to have grand romps with her."

Aunt Rachel's lip curled; in her estimate of feminine attractions "romping" had no place, and the tone in which the Doctor was answered was as wintery as the November air outside.

"Miss Marston is not in the least like her mother. I can hardly conceive how it has been possible, under such training, for her to be so utterly unconventional as she is!"

"Yes; been seen them?" asked the Doctor.

"Yes; I met them yesterday at my dressmaker's, and positively Miss Marston shocked me by her queer ways. She is so unconventional!"

"Indeed!" in a quizzical tone, came from under the brown moustache opposite, while the mouth behind it curled with a derisive, incredulous smile.

"Yes," said Aunt Rachel, unheeding the tone; "she came in to Madame Foy's and while she was sitting there the Madame called one of the girls from the work-room. It was Mary Niles, whose mother was June's old nurse. Mrs. Marston was giving directions about her daughter's dress, but that young lady rushed toward the work-girl, flung her arms round her, and actually kissed her before us all! Mrs. Marston looked extremely annoyed, and Madame sent the girl from the room at once." Aunt Rachel waxed warm with indignation, but all the sympathy she received was a quiet

"Pardon me! but I fail to see any dreadful indecorum."

"Why Reginald! No young lady of any dignity would forget her social position so far as to do such a thing."

"My plants need fumigating, I think," he muttered; so he wandered among his treasures for an hour, lifting their delicate leaves and blowing among them the pretty blue rings which are a smoker's pet achievement, and thinking thus:

"June! It's a pretty name. I wonder if it brings summer sunlight to the owner? I shall like to see a young girl who doesn't try to be prim. If Miss June dare assume any stiffness I'll remind her of sundry episodes at Vevay, before her dresses grew long; I remember her laugh in those days, it was living music, and—really—it wouldn't sound badly floating through this dull old house now. Pshaw!" and the unfinished cigar was flung away impatiently. "I'd better let well enough alone. Aunt Rachel does nicely in spite of her prosing, and when I need other society I can seek it. These flowers are growing beautifully. Wonder if they would do better if 'June's were always here?"

But all this was very ridiculous; so the Doctor drew on his gloves, nodded good-by to Aunt Rachel at the top of the stair-case, and sauntered down the street.

Looking in at the post-office, he encountered Fred Marston, exchanged heartiest greetings, and Fred's house being nearest the two friends went thither. Opening the hall-door, a long, rippling merry laugh was their first welcome; for June herself was having a grand frolic with two little ones, who were busy at "hide the handkerchief" in the long hall.

"O Fred!" she began; then, spying his companion, started, flushed, then beamed with positive delight, and sprang impulsively forward.

"Mr. Deane! I am very glad to meet you again; but you see I'm not a bit more proper than I used to be."

Mrs. Marston came with her pleasant recognition, and the friends chatted gayly of days that were gone, of days now present, and then commenced plans for long evenings; into all of which Mrs. Marston entered with dignified interest, remarking at last that she had already met Mrs. Deane.

Here June interrupted—"And, O, Doctor! Miss Rachel said you had quantities of smilax. We can't get it here, and I want some so much! May'n't I come begging!"

"June!" began Mrs. Marston severely, and then added: "Dr. Deane, it is not my fault, but June will always act like an impulsive child. I wish she would control herself."

June blushed, the Doctor felt uncomfortable, and Fred audaciously whistled, going over to pinch his sister's cheeks, and answering, "It's no use, mother! June will be June, Rex doesn't mind, I'm sure."

The tall Doctor arose, saying:

"I shall be delighted to send to you any plants you may like, if you will come now and then and see my treasures. You will do so, won't you?"

There was a mischievous twinkle in June's eyes, but tone and manner were demurely proper, as she answered:

"Whenever mamma calls upon Mr. Deane I shall be happy to accompany her."

The Doctor's eyes twinkled back to her own merry thought, but all he said was:

"Very well! I shall take care that Aunt Rachel earns a visit immediately. My flowers are my pets, and they do reward me with such grace and beauty. My roses are lovely, even now."

"Roses! O, Doctor!"—and June flushed and dimpled with the quick thrill of delight, looking very sweet as the Doctor thought, as she added, in spite of mamma's frown:

"Why didn't you wear one here so I could have stolen it? Do you remember how I used to confiscate your button-hole bouquets at Vevay, and how vengefully that poor English old maid would watch me? It was such fun to listen to her endless tirades about 'pert American girls!'"

Mrs. Marston was looking unutterable annoyance at these reminiscences; Fred laughed outright, adding his own bit of absurd recollection, which the Doctor might easily have supplemented, but wishing to conciliate "mamma" he only smiled quietly and made his adieu.

Of course poor June received a lecture to which we don't care to listen. The Doctor's thoughts are more interesting. "She's grown certainly, but she is the same charming child I knew three years ago, in spite of her added inches. I'm glad she isn't after the pattern of Ashland damsels, and it is decidedly nice that she regards me so much her senior. I'll keep up that illusion for a while. Aunt Rachel shall call this very afternoon, and—yes—well—I think I will escort her."

Arrived at his own door, he went straight way toward the conclusion of his plans, calling from the hall:

"Aunt Rachel! Where are you? Here are some letters: and, oh! I met Fred Marston, and promised him we would call this afternoon. You have no engagements?"

"No. We will go about four, if that will suit you."

"Exactly. Now I have writing to do."

He felt like a conspirator, as he marched straight to his floral darlings, severing buds and blossom, leaf and tendril, till his hands were full. Then filling a dainty basket with damp moss he made the flowers nestle closely together; disentangled smilax sprays till he found a root; potted that; and then sent basket and vase to Mrs. Marston's with a card explaining that the plant was for Miss June, the flowers for mamma.

If June found deftly hidden under the shining leaves a tiny moss rosebud, it was most improper for her to kiss it and fasten it at her throat, blushing all the time. She couldn't have told "why." It was an instinctive impulse. The flowers despatched, Dr. Reginald settled himself to write an article upon the treatment of "femoral fractures." He had been provoked beyond measure by some unscientific methods in use among country practitioners. Indeed he had worked himself up to such a pitch of medical indignation that he fancied the treatise in question would almost write itself; but the "divine afflatus" would not come. Even the opening sentence was a failure. He caught himself writing "feminine" for "femoral;" and instead of thigh-bones he thought of a dimpled, flushing face.

Aunt Rachel's tap interrupted his soliloquy—

"Reginald! There has been a dreadful accident! You must go at once. Poor Mr. Niles has fallen from some staging, crushing him horribly"

The surgeon came back from his dreaming. It was the Doctor, not the sentimentalist, who snatched his instruments and ran to the sufferer's side.

Of course there was the usual crowd to be dispersed, and poor Mrs. Niles was of little use. Mary had come home from Madame Foy's, but it was Dr. Dean's own white hands that prepared everything, and with tenderest touch lightly examined the dreadful bruises. He was dimly conscious that some one had come into the outer room, though all he had heard was a stifled exclamation, and a low "hush!" He knew the baby stopped its wailing, and that Mary brought him a roll of fine soft linen that never came from the cottage stores; then he half heard a quiet murmur of a gentle voice; but when his work was done there was no stranger visible.

Giving his parting directions, he added:

"You will need some delicacies, Mrs. Niles, and I will see that Aunt Rachel sends you some wine at once."

"Indeed, sir! you're very good, but my sweet child—Miss Marston, sir—has been here, and, see, she's brought me wine and fruit and jelly enough to last the master for days. I was her foster-mother, sir; she never forgets me, nor my Mary there. Bless her sweet face! Why she treats my girl like a sister!"

Mary's eyes were full of tears, but she must add her mite of praise.

"O Doctor! she was trying on a dress at the Madame's when they came for me, and when she heard the news she made her coachman bring me at once!"

"Yes—well," said the Doctor coolly, though his heart throbbed "Bless her!" "I'll be in again before night. There is no danger, though there will be intense pain"—and he took his leave.

As he opened the gate there lay in his path a rosebud. Of course he picked it up, and recognized it as the one he had hidden in the smilax leaves two hours before, though why he held it with a caress for a second and then put it in the pocket of his visiting book, you must guess.

The Mississippi Flood.

The following from the New York Herald's New Orleans correspondence, under date of the 19th inst., gives much pertinent information in regard to the current destructive overflows of the Mississippi river:

The flood of 1874 came without anything or anybody being prepared for it. Since the rise of 1871 up to this year there has been no high water of any consequence. The levees battered, broken or swept away by the flood three years ago had not in the meantime been properly repaired or rebuilt. The water in 1872 and 1873 barely reached the base of the broken levees, hence no harm was done during these intervening years. The Louisiana Levee Company and the commissioners in charge thus became over confident, and, judging from these two years, seem to have forgotten that the Mississippi's great spring rise was of almost annual occurrence. Thus the first year of this company's organization there was no high water, the second year likewise, and this corporation, ignoring the fact that the water was unusually low these three years seem to have thought that it was owing to the company's efforts that for two years the people of Louisiana were saved from the dangers of overflow. Thus 1874 came, and the Louisiana Levee Company, with also the three commissioners, although having received over $1,000,000 in levee taxes, were in no wise prepared for the rise of this year, which is the greatest that has occurred since the country has been settled, here, at New Orleans, two days ago, the river being eight inches higher than it ever was before.

The coast planters, in the meautime, had relied on the Levee Company. Thus came the great flood of 1874, with nothing to resist it, deluging thousands of square miles of land, destroying crops whereon millions of money had already been invested, drowning, not only the beasts of the forest and field, but many human inhabitants of the desolated region. Thus came the great flood, making an inland sea of the most fruitful portion of the earth, riding on its billows such spectral ships as bankruptcy, famine and death.

Below the mouth of Red River a few miles was the great embankment known as Grand Levee. This had a base of 200 feet and was thirty feet in height, with the water near the top. Several hundred yards of this has given way, and a furious torrent rushes with a roar through the breach, spreading devastation and desolation for hundreds of miles.

The waters of the Grand Levee break have already met those of the Port Hudson crevasse, which is more than forty miles below, on the west bank of the river, opposite Port Hudson. This latter crevasse is several hundred yards in width. Through this second break a volume of water rushes, which has already submerged over one hundred square miles of territory.

By these two crevasses many crops have been entirely destroyed, immense numbers of stock have been drowned, and many people ruined and reduced to the extremities of starvation.

Thirty miles below the Port Hudson break is the West Baton Rouge crevasse, whose width is also several hundred yards. The turbid torrent that flows through this breach has already inundated many large sugar plantations and small farms.

Then further down the river is the Plaquemines crevasse, which, deluging a very populous district, damages the country to the extent of millions. This will probably submerge a larger area of cultivated land than any crevasse on the coast.

Forty miles above New Orleans, on the bank of the Mississippi, with a rush and a roar, pours the Bonnet Carre crevasse through a break in the levee nearly one-half mile wide. In the Bonnet Carre bend the Mississippi is only four and a half miles distant from Lake Pontchartrain. The water from this crevasse is already swelling the lake, till now it has crept up to the base of the back drainage levees of this city.

So far the Bonnet Carre crevasse has flooded a large area of sugar and rice land, has broken the line of our greatest railroad and is threatening New Orleans with overflow from the rear levees.

This city has a river front of fourteen miles. Three days ago in many places the water was pouring over this front. A force of over 2000 men was instantly set to work at raising the levee in many parts until at this date the danger is averted and the river has suddenly fallen ten inches, which fall is due to the immense outlets above, all taking out a great yet comparatively small tribute of the Mississippi's immense volume.

Below New Orleans is the fairest, most prosperous and most fertile portion of Louisiana. This region has natural advantages of climate and fertility which render it probably the most productive land in the South. For the first time in sixteen years it is deluged. The flood of 1874 broke through its levees and is now pouring over its fields and farms, engulfing them in one common ruin.

On Greenwood sugar plantation, twenty miles below New Orleans, east bank, is the largest crevasse of the lower coast. The volume of water which rushes through this opening has inundated and destroyed the crops on fourteen immense sugar estates and many highly improved farms.

After this, all the way down till the levee lands terminate, are many smaller crevasses, from fifty to 100 feet wide. These are in the rice region, which they are desolating.

Nearly the whole Lafouche sugar and rice district is flooded and laid waste by the great bayou crevasses in that section of the State.

This bayou and coast land, which the flood is thus desolating and devastating, before the war produced nearly all the sugar consumed in the United States. On it has been produced all the rice crops of Louisiana. Now it is stricken by a great calamity which threatens the suffering State of Louisiana with bankruptcy and general ruin—a calamity more terrible in its present and ultimate results than the great conflagrations in Chicago and Boston. The most fruitful portion of the State is an inland sea, a howling waste of waters, where vultures flap and flutter over floating carcasses, where venomous reptiles coil in the rafters of deserted houses, where all around is wreck and ruin, with no means for man to ward them off, and no hope when the flood goes down but for it to leave, where plenty was, nothing but famine and pestilence.

Readables.

The reports from Louisiana still continue discouraging, and the necessity for immediate relief is represented to be very urgent. The President has already ordered 500,000 rations to be sent, and they will soon be available. Generous measures of relief are also reported from various places.

Joseph Bigshaw was killed at Lowell Friday afternoon by the accidental discharge of a gun.

The official count of the Connecticut vote for Governor gives Charles R. Ingersoll 36,755, Henry B. Harrison 39,973, Henry D. Smith 4960, and 13 scattering. This gives a total vote of 91,701, and makes Ingersoll's majority 1809.

A terrible accident recently occurred at East Meadow, Long Island. A newly-made bride named Belle Palmer Wheeler, who is described as young and beautiful, had just entered a carriage after the wedding ceremony, to be driven home, when the horses took fright at the firing of a gun. The carriage was soon overturned, and the bride was dragged half a mile over a rough road, landing finally in a deep ditch. When picked up, she was quite dead; her head was almost torn from her body, and nearly all her limbs were broken.

The New York Herald says: There are some recommendations on the subject of free banking, but upon these we do not dwell now. Our first duty is to express to the President our hearty and profound commendation for his brave and manly act. The veto of this bill will stand out as the most conspicuous act in his memorable and extraordinary career. We know that this is the act of the President; his own resolute, clear-minded common sense, and we see in it another marked manifestation of the character that has made him the most celebrated American of his time. His veto will remain in our political history as one of those shining acts that certify a great man's claim to greatness. He had every temptation to sign the bill. He was called upon by the West where he lived, with whose people he was in sympathy and whose political power is greater than that of any other section. He was asked to please the South, who duly wanted reams of new paper to "save them from ruin." He was admonished that the honor of his administration needed this bill for his vindication, and he was entreated by the ablest, most active, the most persistent leaders of the republican party. It was a bold step to take, for the President has drawn a line of demarcation between himself and the most powerful sections of his party. The veto will save our brethren of the West and South from the demagogues who would lead them into ruin and call it statesmanship. And the time will come when they will remember it to the honor of the President as an achievement more glorious than Vicksburg and Appomattox. Then he saved the sovereignty of the Union—now he has saved its honor.

Hon. Francis Hamilton was once a very wealthy and prominent lawyer of New York city, but became reduced to poverty. Friday a friend called at his house in New Brighton, Staten Island, and found him dead in his bed, with his wife sitting beside him holding his hand. His poor wife, once remarkable for her accomplishments, was out of her mind and unable to give any account of her husband's death. Indeed she nor two little children in the room were aware that he was dead, though the body was cold. For three hours they had been sitting in the death chamber, careful to make no noise for fear they might awaken him. For some time past Mr. Hamilton's health has been failing, and with it his business gradually left him until he and his family were reduced to extreme poverty; and the condition of the room, with his emaciated frame showed but too plainly that his death had been hastened by want. He had not had medical attendance for some time.

The grandest instance of devotion in defeat on record is that of Mr. Haskins of the Massachusetts House, who, when his name was called, on the passage of a bill, responded in resolute tones, "Charles Francis Adams."

Valedictory of His Honor the Mayor of Denver, Col.: "Thank God, it's over with! I wouldn't take it again for a kingdom, not if I knows it."

State News.

The Laconia Democrat says that Charles McDaniels of West Springfield killed ten crows at one shot.

Mr Nelson Wilbur, the democratic representative-elect from Westmoreland, died on Sunday the 19th. It is supposed that a difficulty of the heart was the cause of his sudden death.

The public examinations and closing exercises of the State Normal School, for the year 1873-74, will occur May 5th and 6th. An address will be given before the trustees, students, and friends of the school, Tuesday evening, May 5th, by Gen. John Eaton, Jr., Commissioner of the Bureau of Education, Washington, D. C. The exercises of the graduating classes will occupy Wednesday afternoon, May 6th. At the Alumni Reunion, on Wednesday evening, an Address by Prof. Amos Hadley, of Concord, will be followed by a Memorial of Prof. S. H. Pearl, a Poem, Class Histories, and a supper at the Pemigewasset House. The Boston, Concord & Montreal R. R. will extend free return passes to all Alumni and friends of the school purchasing tickets to Plymouth to attend the exercises. HERE THEY ARE COMPLETED AND

FOR SALE.

TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four ft., in heavy gilt frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point on Newcastle, about the years 1616 to '20; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore; Smith's antiquated bark at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Gerrish's island, &c.

The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in its palmy days, the Light-House as its original height, and a lively sea view, about 1830—a true picture of days when the white sail ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the embalmed canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a devoted son of old "Strawberry Bank," so called, and will tell their own story, whether in a parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.

Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-office.

THOS. P. MOSES.

PEYSER & KENNEDY,

The liberal settlement of the Eastern Railroad Company for our losses for Damage by Fire and Water at the East Boston Freight Depot, enables us to throw a few cases more of

FINE WOOLENS, DOESKINS,
DIAGONALS, MELTONS,
KERSEYS, CASSIMERES, and
SILK AND WOOL MIXTURES,

into the market at a low appraisal. The price is marked in plain figures on each piece, and in comparison with the quality will be found to be

ASTONISHINGLY LOW!

Ask your friends and neighbors who have availed themselves of this

GREAT CHANCE,

or come and see for yourselves after examining other stocks, that this is no fancy-dream or fiction, but a fact, that you can buy CLOTH FOR GARMENTS of all qualities at so low a figure that EVERYBODY can afford to clothe themselves. Those of a limited means will find it a comfort to their children and themselves without exhausting their stamps. We lose no money by it, assisting others to PRACTICE ECONOMY during these hard times. Every sensible Man, Woman and Boy will at once see that we can sell any of our READY-MADE

DRESS UP

Custom Clothing!

AT LOW PRICES, when we have had the chance to make them up of the First-Class Materials at half price. The PRACTICAL ECONOMY of these hard times. Disparaging to the intelligence of our customers to argue the point. Our assortment of

Gentlemen's Fine Garments,

Business Suits, and Garments Suitable for Mechanics, Laborers and Farmers

is extensive and varied and made up to wear, and those who buy of us will get their money's worth.

We sell no Rusty, Musty, Shop-worn, old faded goods. We do not wish to shock the sensibilities of our customers with fancy tales of dire distress of some (let us hope imaginary) unfortunate trader and his losses. We do not take stock in it. Our Stock and Goods are

NEW, NICE, WELL-MADE AND TRIMMED,

Cost us less than expected, and we sell them so cheap that our customers are cheerful and pleased at our success in business. We make a specialty of

BOYS' AND YOUTHS' SUITS

and guarantee a good fit, at prices from 6 to 15 Dollars, a suit—Coat, Vest and Pant

Fine Linen Bosom Shirts,

custom made, at low prices, and a complete assortment of

UNDERSHIRTS AND DRAWERS, AND GENTS' FURNISHING GOODS.

We Cut and Trim Garments at reasonable charges for customers who make up their goods, and Make Garments to Order at the price of cloth and work.

Lieut.-Comdr. Chas. S Cotton is ordered to duty at this naval station.

The members of Mt. Sinai and Strawberry Bank Encampments, I. O. O. F., are notified to appear at Odd Fellows' Hall at 9 o'clock this (Monday) morning, in uniform, to attend the celebration at Dover of the 55th anniversary of the introduction of Odd Fellowship into the United States.

A snow storm set in on Saturday, the snow falling briskly Early in the night the wind increased to a heavy gale from the south and east, gradually veering around to the northeast; during Sunday forenoon the gale died away considerably, and was pretty well blown out by noon. It was one of the worst storms of the year; six or seven inches of snow fell, though it melted so fast that probably not more than six inches lay on the ground at any time. A business man of our acquaintance is desirous of contracting with some muscular, hardy man to keep his sidewalk clear of snow all summer.

Many people consider animal instinct as something superior in its way to human reason,—not that they have any very clear idea as to what instinct is, but they regard it as they do electricity, as something very wonderful and very mysterious, and a sufficient explanation of any queer circumstance which cannot be explained in any other way. But even instinct is not infallible; the rat is credited with possessing a good share of the best quality of the article, but even the astute rat sometimes fools himself. A few days ago a gentleman in this city removed a pile of boards which had lain near his hen-house all winter, and in the pile found a nicely-built rat's nest, an extremely ancient and long-tailed rat departing very suddenly for safer quarters, which he managed to reach unharmed though a shower of half-bricks and hard words was sent at him. Close beside the rat's bed were two porcelain nest-eggs which the old fellow had burgled from the hen-coop, the rat's instinct evidently not enabling him to tell the hens' productions from man's imitations.

Mr. Charles E. Plaisted, one of the veterans of the Portsmouth company of the gallant old Second New Hampshire Regiment, died in this city on Saturday, after a long and painful illness. Mr. Plaisted served in the war until the Regiment was mustered out of service, winning the esteem and respect of his comrades for his kindness of heart and bravery when on duty. He held various offices of trust under the national and municipal governments after the close of the war, and was a prominent member of Storer Encampment, Post No. 1, G. A. R. For several years he was chief clerk in the post-office in this city.

It is reported that the commissioners will report in favor of laying out the road from Newcastle to Rye over Little Harbor, estimating the cost of the bridge at six thousand dollars; of this the County of Rockingham is to pay $1566.67; the remainder will be paid by Rye and Newcastle in the proportion of two-thirds by Newcastle and one-third by Rye, these towns to contribute equally to its maintainance afterward.

Dr. W. W. Hebbard, whose physiological lectures in this city were so generally attended in 1868, is making arrangements to deliver an entirely new course, commencing probably next week. Crowds of people of both sexes will doubtless attend.

Adding insult to injury—the grinding out of the popular musical satire, "Spring, Spring, gentle Spring," by the Italian musician from Tipperary, in front of our office Saturday morning while we were warming our benumbed fingers at the stove.

The Biddeford Election Case.

[Biddeford Journal.]

Mayor Warren this week called the city council together to decide upon the contested seats. The whole subject was referred to a committee of three, consisting of R. W. Randall, Alfred Pierce and Joseph Gooch with instructions to report at the next regular meeting. At this meeting the seats of republican members from Ward 4, was also contested and referred to the same committee. Some cheap talk has been made because all the committee are republicans; but it is not unusual, while the revolutionary proceedings of the democratic members in attempting to instate themselves by force, and in defiance of law and common learning to run a rump convention, absolved the presiding officer from recognizing any of them on any committee in which they were personally interested; indeed, to so appoint them would have been a violation of the rules.

The committee have not yet decided upon the day for hearing, but one will be appointed, at which time parties will be allowed to appear by counsel with testimony. Messrs. Randall, Pierce and Gooch are men of high standing in the community, and have the reputation of being upright, fair and discreet men. A better selection could not have been made throughout the entire city.

Now about the hearing: The council, and of course the committee also, are setting as a court of equity. If the legislature were in session it could adjudicate upon the matter if it chose; but as it is not, there is no power but the "higher law" greater than the council in this matter, and from their decision there is no appeal. The members are sworn to do justice and are just as responsible on their oaths as any jurors. Whether the republican or democratic party, either or both, goes up or down in this city, must be nothing to the council in deciding the case. In our opinion the interest of good government requires that the practice of irresponsible parties counting votes after a lapse of time from the regular count, should not be tolerated as any conclusive proof on which to base an opinion. Therefore the committee will doubtless ignore all questions touching the recounting of the votes, treating it only as an incident, and go back to the day of election,

The question then to be decided is, is there evidence to believe that the votes were by fraud or mistake wrongfully counted—were votes counted as regular votes for any candidate, which the law declares shall not be so counted? That's all there is to it. If it is found that such votes were so counted, even in the absence of any subsequent count, the return should be altered, and the person for whom such votes were counted should lose from his whole vote the numbers so found to be fraudulently added.

Hard Travelling.

The party surveying the State line between this State and Maine started out March 30th. The party consists of six persons, three each from Maine and New Hampshire—A. P. Gordon, Esq., of Fryeburg, surveyor for Maine, with W. K. Hobbs of Fryeburg, and A. D. Russell of Weld, as his assistants; Prof. J. H. Huntington of Hanover, surveyor for New Hampshire, with J. F. Woodbury of Francestown, and Pat. Sullivan of Hanover, as his assistants. They travelled on snow shoes, dragging their provisions, etc., on a sled. They found the snow four feet on a level. By mistake of the guide they missed their way, and were lost in the wilderness three days, the thermometer below zero and storming most of the time. One of these cold nights Prof. Huntington and Mr. Russell had the misfortune to freeze their feet badly. They were obliged to leave their sled and take the load upon their backs. They crossed a stream and concluded to follow it, as the surest plan to find their way out. Traveling on snow shoes, with frozen feet, has but very little pleasure in it, but it had to be done, and eventually the party came back into the old tracks made in going toward the line. The forest trees consist of yellow and white birch, spruce and fir—very tall and straight. The mountains are as heavily timbered as the valleys, and they for went miles without finding an opening large enough to see out. It is about nineteen miles from Connecticut Lake to the corner between Maine and New Hampshire, which is marked by an iron post set up in A. D. 1842, by the boundary survey of that year.

A Love Match at Last.

"Another engagement of the many announced," writes a Washington correspondent, "is that of General Sherman's daughter, Minnie, to Mr. DeHaven Fitch, and it is a real love match. The day before Miss Sherman left London her uncle, Commodore Alden, was prevented by some duty from going with his niece to the Crystal Palace, as he had promised, but that she should not be disappointed he told her he would send one of his officers to go with her—a special protege and favorite, he said. So Mr. Fitch presented himself at the appointed hour, and the two young people went off together. He joined the party at dinner, and in return for his courtsey to Miss Sherman, Commodore Alden invited him to accompany them to the opera that evening. Miss Sherman was to sail the next day, and both she and her new friend regretted that their acquaintance should end so soon. But when she reached her steamer, lo! he was on the deck before her, and although there was no suitable accommodation for a cabin passenger, he took his chances and sailed with her. Doesn't that sound like a sweet old-fashioned story? She is a pretty, unaffected girl, who so charmed Prince Arthur of England, during his brief visit here four years ago, that he sent her as a princely souvenir a delicately wrought locket with her monogram traced in superb diamonds."

—The little boy who did not keep away from the lion's cage at Baltimore, last week, at the menagerie, was damaged, so his mother thinks, about $5000 worth. She is sueing Mr. Forepaugh for that amount. As usual in such cases, the lady is a widow.

Milkmaids.

Flanders and Holland are justly celebrated for their dairies, which are distinguished alike for cleanliness, good management, and rich produce. Dutch butter and cheese form no unimportant item in the commerce and comfort of the would. Milk, chemically and medically considered, contains those very ingredients, in the right proportion, which are requisite for the formation of blood, bone, sinew, muscle, tissue, etc., and it is in fact model food; so that a dietary however made up, whether for young or old, is wholesome and nutritious precisely as it bears an intrinsic relation to the component parts of pure milk. Man, if his life were led in a simple and natural manner, would thrive best on farm produce. Artificial drains on the nervous system, especially on the brain, call for artificial modes of compensation, and hence many forms and complications of disease are introduced; so that Carlyle was perfectly right, and in a deep sense too, when he said somewhere (we quote from memory,) "The cow is the friend and ally of man, but the French cook is his natural enemy." There is a singular story told of some milkmaids who once were the means of saving a city. Let me relate the story. During the wars in the sixteenth century in the Low Countries, the Spaniards intended to besiege the city of Dort, in Holland; and accordingly planted some thousands of soldiers in ambush, to be ready for the attack when opportunity might offer. On the confines of the city lived a rich farmer, who kept a number of cows in the fields, to furnish the citizens of Dort with butter and milk. His milkmaids at this time coming to milk the cows, saw under the hedges the troops laying in ambush. Seeming to take no notice of them, the girls milked the kine, and then went home, singing merrily as they went with their milkpails on their heads. On reaching the farm-house, they told their master what they had seen, who, astonished at the information, took one of the maids with him to the burgomaster (or magistrate) of the city. On the magistrate hearing the story of the girls, he immediately sent a spy to ascertain the truth of the tale. Finding the report correct, he began to prepare for safety, and instantly sent to the States, or Government, who ordered soldiers into the city, and commanded the river Maas to be let in by a certain sluice, which would soon lay that part of the country under water where the besiegers lay hid. This was forthwith done, and a great number of Spanish soldiers were drowned; the rest, seeing checked in their design to take the city, escaped with their lives. And thus the city of Dort was saved. The States, to perpetuate the memory of the merry milkmaids' services to the country, voted the farmer a large sum of money to recompense him for the loss of his house, land, and cattle by the floods and they also caused the coin of the city to have a milkmaid milking a cow engraven thereupon, which, I believe, is to be seen to this day upon the Dort dollars, stivers and doits. The same representation was also set up on the water-gate of the Maas; and the milkmaids were granted a handsome annuity for life. Milkmaids, both Flemish, Dutch, and English, render important services to their respective countries in plying their daily vocation of first milking the cows and then selling the milk; but it is not given to all such maids to have in their "milky-way" life, an episode so striking and so profitable as that which befell the fair maids of Dort.

H. E. CHAMBERLAIN, Supt.

PROPOSALS FOR MATERIALS TO BE SUPPLIED TO THE NAVY YARDS UNDER THE COGNIZANCE OF THE BUREAU OF CONSTRUCTION AND REPAIR.

NAVY DEPARTMENT,
BUREAU OF CONSTRUCTION AND REPAIR,
Washington, D. C., April 6, 1874.

SEALED PROPOSALS to furnish Timber and other materials for the Navy for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1875, will be received at this Bureau until 12 o'clock M., of Thursday, May 7, 1874, at which time the bids will be opened.

The proposals must be addressed to the "Chief of the Bureau of Construction and Repair, Navy Department, Washington," and must be indorsed "Proposals for Timber &c., for the Navy," that they may be distinguished from ordinary business letters.

To prevent confusion, and facilitate the opening of the bids, parties bidding for supplies at several yards will enclose bids in separate envelopes for each yard, endorsed with the name of the yard for which the bid is made.

Printed schedules for such classes as parties deal in and intend to bid for, together with instructions to bidders, giving the forms of proposal, of guarantee, and of certificate of guarantors, with printed forms of offer, will be furnished to such persons as desire to bid, on application to the Commandant of the respective Navy Yards, and those of all the yards on application to the Bureau.

The Commandant of each Navy Yard and the purchasing Paymaster for each station will have a copy of the schedules of the other yards for examination only, in order that persons who intend to bid may judge whether it is desirable to make application for any of the classes of those yards.

The proposals must be for the whole of a class, but the Department reserves the right to reject the whole class should the interest of the Government require it, before the execution of the contract. All applications for information, or for the examination of samples, must be made to the Commandants of the respective yards.

Bids or offers will be received only from parties who are bona fide dealers in, or manufacturers of, the articles they offer to furnish. They guarantees must be certified by the Collector of Internal Revenue for the district in which they reside.

A contract will be awarded to the person who makes the lowest bid and gives the guarantee required, if any be required by advertisement, however, reserving the right to reject the lowest bid, or any bid it may seem inexpedient.

Under the provisions of the second section of the act approved March 3, 1868, the offer of any person who, as principal or surety, has been a defaulter in any previous contract with the Navy Department will not be received.

Sureties in the full amount will be required to sign the contract, and their responsibility must be certified to the satisfaction of the Navy Department.

An additional security twenty per centum will be withheld from the amount of the bills until the contracts shall have been completed, and eighty per centum of the amount of the bill approved in triplicate by the Commandants of the respective yards, will be paid by the Paymaster of the station designated in the contract, or, if none is specified, by the Paymaster nearest the yard where the goods are delivered, within thirty days after the warrant for the same shall have been passed by the Secretary of the Treasury.

The classes of this Bureau are numbered and designated as follows:

No. 1, White Oak Logs; No. 13, White Pine Plank, Board, Nos. 15, White Oak, Elm, Beech; No. 6, White Ash Oars; No. 18, Black Walnut, Mahogany, Maple, Cherry; No. 22, Cypress, Cedar; No. 25, Black Locust; No. 34, White Oak Staves and Headings; No. 25, Lignumvitæ; No. 32, Wrought Iron, in round square; No. 33, Wrought Iron, Bar; No. 34, Iron, plate; No. 35, Steel; No. 37, Iron Spikes; No. 38, Iron Wrought Nails; No. 39, Iron Cut Nails; No. 42, Lead, pipe, sheet; No. 43, Zinc; No. 44, Tin; No. 48, Locks, Hinges, Bolts, of brass and iron; No. 49, Screws of brass and iron; No. 50, Axes; No. 51, Augers; No. 52, Tools for ship stores; No. 53, tools for use in yard and shops; No. 54, Hardware; No. 6, White Lead; No. 57, Zinc Paints; No. 58, Colored Paints, Dryers; No. 59, Linseed Oil; No. 60, Varnish, Spirits Turpentine; No. 63, Sperm and Lard Oil; No. 64, Tallow, Soap; No. 65, Fish Oil; No. 68, Glass; No. 69, Brushes; No. 70, Dry Goods for upholstering; No. 71, Stationery; No. 72, Crucibles; No. 73, Ship Chandlery; No. 74, Acids; No. 75, Rosin, Pitch, Crude Turpentine; No. 77, Belting, Packing; No. 79, Leather, pump, rigging, lacing; No. 85, Anthracite Coal; No. 86, Semi-bituminous Coal; No. 87, Bituminous Coal; No. 88, Charcoal; No. 89, Wood.

SOLICITOR OF PATENTS.
For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs
No. 78 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.
After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.
No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.
All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.
TESTIMONIALS.
"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."
"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."
"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL,
For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma and Consumption.
The few compositions which have won the confidence of mankind, and become household words among not only one but many nations, must have extraordinary virtues. Perhaps no one ever acquired a wide a reputation, or maintained it so long, as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. It has been known to the public about forty years, by a long-continued series of marvellous cures, that have won for it a confidence in its virtues never equalled by any other medicine. Its still makes the most effectual cures of COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION, that can be made by medical skill. Indeed, the CHERRY PECTORAL has really robbed these dangerous diseases of their terrors, to a great extent, and given a feeling of immunity from their fatal effects, that is well-founded, if taken in season. Every family should have it in their closet for the ready and prompt relief of its members. Sickness, suffering, and even life is saved by this timely protection. The prudent should not neglect it, and the wise will not. Keep it by you for the protection it affords by its timely use in sudden attacks.

Daily Chronicle.

An Unconventional Girl.

Concluded from yesterday.

Four o'clock came and the ceremonious visit was paid. Aunt Rachel's nerves were destined to quiver three several times when June laughed, while her disgust at finding the Doctor had already been there was evident enough. Worsted work was her one artistic fancy, Mrs. Marston was equally an enthusiast in Berlin wools, and June was asked to bring for display the marvelous flower-piece then in construction. The frame was large, so the Doctor gallantly held it while June quickly unpinned the cover from the delicate work, putting the pins in her mouth, girl-fashion, till the Doctor could bear it no longer.

"Don't, Miss June! that is horribly dangerous!"

"Pooh! I've always done it. The girls at school used to call me the 'perambulating pin-cushion!'"

"You may try it once too often. I can't bear to see you do so."

"When I swallow one you shall take it out," laughed the gay girl. "Don't you covet the opportunity? You can say 'I told you so' all the time you are choking me!"

"June! you are incorrigible. Put down those pins!" was Mrs. Marston's admonition, and June obeyed with a bit of rebellious pouting that was bewitching.

The guests left almost immediately after duly admiring the work, and Aunt Rachel's wrath found vent at once.

"She is like no young lady I ever saw. So self assured and pert. The idea of her answering you as she did! When I was a girl we were taught to be quiet and retiring. We never spoke to gentlemen except to answer some question. We had to be sought!"

"Why, aunty! why are you so prejudiced? June has the kindest heart. You told me yourself how warmly she greeted her old playmate, though only a dressmaker's apprentice."

"It was most improper to do it so publicly," interrupted the spinster.

"Well, then she came to Mrs. Niles' as soon as she heard of the accident; hushed the baby, and with her own hands and gentle ways brought order out of confusion."

"One swallow doesn't make a summer, Reginald. She doubtless has kind impulses, but your headlong people are never constant. Did you see her at Mrs. Niles'?"—the last query was a suspicion.

"No, I was in the sick-room, and didn't know she had been there till I came away."

That was all the Doctor said, but somehow his hand crept into his pocket, touching the poor little crushed bud he had hidden there, with a tender movement, and he thought:

"Poor June! She must make her own summer always: Society prefers wintry propriety."

The days flew by. Not one passed but fresh flowers were sent for June, and twice the Doctor encountered her at Mrs. Niles'. The last time there was just snow enough for the sleighs to glide smoothly. The temptation was irresistible, so he invited the young lady to ride, and June nestled down beneath the fur robes quite forgetful of everything but the electric excitement in the keen air, the music of the bells and the presence of Dr. Reginald. The longest way is very apt to be selected under such circumstances, so they sped along for more than an hour, overtaking Aunt Rachel as they dashed down the avenue.

Unlucky June! Some merry fancy just then amused her, so it was her own unmistakable laugh that floated out, more clearly than the ringing of the merry bells. Her offence against Ashland decorum had been sufficient if she had only ridden quietly with the much-coveted Doctor; but oh! that laugh!

Dr. Reginald gallantly lifted his hat, and June bowed, but poor Aunt Rachel deemed it her duty to testify against "such gonings on," and the winter wind was warm compared with her salutation. The Doctor was indignant. There was a spice of chivalry in his nature that made him care ten times as much for his sweet friend if he must be her champion. He had meant to take June home, but now—"Aunt Rachel should see how much he cared for her frowns." So the prancing horses were checked, then turned sharply round, before the good lady's astonished face, and more miles were measured off before they returned.

"You must come in and warm yourself, Doctor!" pleaded June; so the merry pair entered the house.

Mrs. Marston had grown used to the Doctor; she saw that June didn't annoy him, and wisely concluded to let them alone in their innocent fun; so she greeted them graciously as they stood near the glowing grate telling of the "splendid ride," as June phrased it. Her hood was tangled in her curls, its fringe had caught in the fastening of her furs, she had two pins in her fingers, and when those fingers were wanted the pins went into her mouth while she talked on as gaily as ever; and the Doctor watched her thinking how charming it would be to have such a "June" making a summer for him all the year round.

"Oh, mother! the Doctor's horses are perfect, I drove till my fingers grew numb and——" June stopped, choking, her eyes dilating in horror, and she gasped, "Oh—that—pin!"

Mrs. Marston screamed, of course. Dr. Deane grew pale, and his heart stopped its regular beat—just a second. The next his arm was around the sufferer, her head thrown back, and every professional nerve in order for service.

"Keep quiet, Mrs. Marston. Give me the case from my overcoat. Now—hold her hands."

"June! I won't hurt you any more than I can help, but it will almost choke you for an instant;" then, bending over her, he whispered swiftly:

"I can remove it safely, my darling! trust me!"

Through the look of agony to the brown eyes were flashed for a second a light that lent fresh nerve to the practised hand. The bright steel instrument glided to its task; then, as he withdrew it the Doctor shuddered a little, but the danger was over.

Can't you fancy how that instrument was flung aside—anywhere—and how the graceful head rested, for an instant, where never a woman's head had lain before? The mother's tears flowed fast now, for with all her icy rebukings June's mother loved her child, and she could find no words to tell her gratitude.

Once more the doctor bending over his patient, a message was given and received, though no syllable was uttered.

"I will come again before evening," said the Doctor to Mrs. Marston. "Meantime, please keep all pins at a safe distance."

They were happy thoughts that kept him company till he sprang up the steps of his own residence, with the brightness in his heart shining in his face, and he entered his sanctum singing gayly:

"Nita, Juanita, let me linger by thy side!"

Aunt Rachel never disturbed him till the dinner hour, and then she met him with a lofty air of displeasure that was comical, considering the culprit's six feet of manhood. Utterly ignoring her displeasure, Reginald sipped his soup, remarking pleasantly, "Mr. Niles can walk on crutches now, Aunty. I shall take him to ride to-morrow."

"Indeed? I should imagine you preferred daintier company," with a little sneer.

"Sometimes I do, and then I take it; as, for instance, this afternoon. Eh, Aunty! is that what you mean?"

"You were sufficiently conspicuous in your devotion, and she was evidently in high spirits. Ugh! I can hear that loud laugh now."

There was a dangerous flash in Dr. Deane's eyes, but he only answered quietly:

"Pardon me, Aunt Rachel! June never laughs coarsely or boisterously. Her laugh is like music itself."

"June, indeed!" retorted the irate maiden. "You treat her—and she seems to like it, too—just as if she were a little girl. No young lady with a particle of self-respect would allow herself to be spoken of in that way. You are making yourself the subject of most unpleasant remarks."

Not a word from the Doctor, and Miss Deane was much too eager to notice how the brows were bent together.

"Reginald! What do you mean? You have never paid any lady the slightest attention, though you have met the most elegant girls, and now this saucy chit seems to absorb all your thoughts. It isn't right, and——"

"That will do!" came in clear, even tones from across the table; yet there was a ring in them Aunt Rachel had never heard before.

"I believe I am old enough to choose my own way. I have chosen it, Aunt Rachel, and you may as well know it now as at any time. June"—ah! how tenderly he spoke the name—"June Marston will be my wife when the May roses bloom."

Poor Aunt Rachel! speechless for once. All the Doctor's anger vanished as he saw her utter dismay; and the old spirit of fear returned, and this is what he said as he left the room:

"You told me, Aunt, that 'one swallow didn't make a summer.' Well, perhaps it hasn't; but a swallow has hastened the promise of mine. In this case it was the 'swallow of a pin!'"

Then he went to his pets, the flowers, and whispered to them his new delight.

It came to our hero with all the dazzling splendor of a revelation. For weeks there had been about him les avants couriers of the wily Cupid. They had whispered sweetest hints of the joy that might come, and now our lover thought no other heart had ever known such supreme happiness.

Meantime, June quite forgot her pain, as she lay with closed eyes reading the look and tone she had met in the moment of peril. Her cheek grew bright—so bright with the leaping blood that Mrs. Marston was anxious lest fever was imminent.

"June, dear! doesn't your head ache? Your face is flushed."

The brown eyes opened with a merry laugh shining through them.

"Don't be worried, mamma. The Doctor said there was no danger now. He will tell you all about it this afternoon. Mamma, I'm glad I swallowed that pin!" Mrs. Marston shuddered.

"June! how dare you? It was horrible. If the Doctor had not been here you would have strangled."

"Yes—but—mamma"—and the eyes danced again—"The Doctor was here; that's just it. I never was so glad in all my life—but it hurts me to talk."

For once, true love ran smoothly. The Doctor "asked mamma" in his own frank way. The assent was given, but a conviction of duty required Mrs. Marston to give him at length a catalogue of June's peca-dilloes and faults; to all of which the Doctor listened with polite impatience.

Fred nearly crushed his hand with a wringing grasp of congratulation.

"Ah, Rex! old fellow; so you propose to have June all the year round? Well, she is a darling. Anyhow, one proverb is disproved, in spite of its age. One swallow did make a summer this time!"

That "swallow" did make a life-long summer for Doctor Deane, who loves his sweet wife more than ever, while now another "June" flits, with all her mother's grace, among the flowers, or sends the echo of her mother's laugh ringing and floating through every nook of the old homestead.

Daily Chronicle.

TUESDAY, ARPIL 28, 1874.

The Louisiana Flood.

At Monroe, the water is higher than was ever known before. The town is an island two and one-half miles long by half a mile wide, from which there is no exit, except by boats or swimming from the crossing of the railroad and Desard street. Back is one wide sea. People living in the rear have been driven in. All the vacant houses have been taken and several families are living in the court-house. Business is almost suspended, but the houses are open. Fully 1000 people have had no rations for three days nor money to buy. Stock of every description are starving. On Desard Island almost all the plantations are under water. At Pargond's Homeplace the water is two feet deep in the yard and there is no passing below there. Trenton is under water beyond the business houses of the town. Cotton is brought in and goods are sent out to Clarbourne, a half mile distant. On the flats at Head's and Standefer's, the water is two feet deep in the yards. On the river banks the front fences are nearly all washed down. A steamboat could be run down Colton street. There are no crops to speak of, and not five days' work has been done along the river for four weeks. Hillstand is washed badly, and what has been done toward making a crop has been labor thrown away.

Reckless Forgery.

Henry L. Emery, son of Paymaster Caleb J. Emery, U. S. N., a young man 28 years of age, attempted to pass forged paper at the Revere House, Boston, Sunday, representing himself as Colonel Fred Grant, a son of the President. Soon after arriving at the hotel he asked Mr. Comee, the clerk in charge, if he would cash a draft, in order that he might have some ready money. Mr. Comee was willing to accommodate him as far as he was concerned, but the rules of the house required the identification of the person so accommodated. "Mr. Grant" guessed he could find several friends at the Tremont House, and soon returned with a note of identity, purporting to be signed by "H. P. Kidder," of Peabody, Kidder & Co. As the name of the firm is Kidder, Peabody & Co., the signature aroused suspicion, which was verified by a gentleman in the house, who recognized him as Henry L. Emery. Officer James T. Comee was called, and took him into custody. On searching him two letters were found, one signed "H. P. Kidder," —the one presented by him to to the clerk, —and the other signed "U. S. Grant," in which the President was represented to be feeling lonesome in the absence of his "dear son," etc., etc. These papers Emery confessed to have written himself. There were also found on him two checks for $20 each on the Eliot National Bank, both dated April 25, 1874, and numbered 47. One was signed "C. J. Emery," and was made payable to H. L. Emery, and the other was signed "J. W. Andrews." The first named, he said, was his father, but he did not know who J. W. Andrews was. He finally confessed that the checks were forgeries, and that he had written them in a paper-store, near the hotel, some time in the forenoon. Young Emery has heretofore borne a good reputation, and is of good address.

Washington Correspondence.

WASHINGTON, April 24.

The Senate bill legalizing the issue of legal tenders to the extent of $400,000,000 and authorizing the increase of banking currency by the addition of $46,000,000, for the benefit of States having less than their proportion, having been vetoed, speculation is rife as to what next. The western and southern men are thunderstruck and for the moment paralyzed. The idea conveyed by the veto message is that the $44,000,000, known as the reserve, is to be continued as such, to be used only in case of emergencies, and withdrawn at the first possible moment. It was a little laughable to see the men who were almost frantic in New York last September to have the President issue this reserve without regard to law or any thing else that stood in the way of their preservation, now insisting upon a veto against its use. It shows how uncertain men are, and the danger of having such vast power and control over business left to the judgment or discretion of any man. Hence the desirability of a convertible and reconvertible bond bearing a low rate of interest, which would work like the governor of an engine, to contract when there was too much currency, and expand when there was too little. But such a bond would take too much from the profits of banks, by absorbing their deposits, to pass a body where there are so many personally interested in bank dividends. It is a matter of surprise that Kelley's bill for a bond of that character came within two votes of a majority in the House.

There is enough of bank circulation, but it is not well distributed. The four millions authorized but not in use, is either assigned to States not able to take it, or to organizations that have applied for it but could not get the capital together to get started. A provision ought to be made, and most probably will be, to withdraw banking capital from sections having an excess, to be assigned to sections where there is a deficiency. There is a provision of this kind already existing which needs some amendment to make it practicable. If the Eastern and Middle States make any further opposition to this equalization since demanding the veto it will show excessive selfishness.

The effort to make opinions on the currency question articles of political faith does not look hopeful. The democrats of the Senate were equally divided while a majority of the republicans were in favor of inflation. In the House the majority of the democrats were heavily in favor of the Senate bill while the republicans were more equally divided. There are really no political divisions in the House or Senate at present, except upon contested seats. Whether the veto will start out dividing lines, and range men upon one side or the other for any future action I much doubt. At present men of both parties are slashing around miscellaneously without seeming to damage their fellowship and regular party standing.

The bill for free banking, as it is called, which passed the House by eighteen majority, on the same day as the Senate bill, and which was supposed to be practically dead, will probably be the measure upon which will be engrafted the Senate idea for a substitute for the bill vetoed. It will probably give rise to another long discussion and postpone the hopes of an early adjournment of the session. Any proposition to increase the revenue as proposed by the message will also give rise to an angry and prolonged discussion. We are now reaching a season when the imports will be diminished and after another month the internal revenue will be diminished, after the annual stamp taxes are paid, and then there is danger of the expenses getting ahead of the revenue, if the proper addition to the sinking fund is kept up.

The Arkansas troubles seem coming to a head and will probably in a few days get adjusted while the Louisiana muddle continues to occupy the Senate. These attempts to get and hold power without right or law, are getting to be too much like Mexican pronunciamentos. Every honest man in the land ought to demand submission to the fair expression of the popular will. Anarchy must soon follow any attempts to stifle it in order that knavery may hold power that has not been rightfully conferred.

The House is at work over the legislative appropriation bill and scrutinizing it more closely than ever before. Members are in an economic mood, in view of the ordeal of the coming election, through which they are to pass. There are, and probably always will be, great inequalities. They refused to raise the pay of the chief clerks of the Controllers above $2000 per year while giving $2,500 to clerks in the Secretary's office and heads of division in Internal Revenue, with infinitely less responsibility. In fact the responsibility of the Controllers clerks is equal to that of the Deputy Commissioners to whom they give $3000, and $3500.

The weather still gives cause of grave complaint and unfavorable comment; cherries, apricots and peaches were too far advanced to stand the icy ordeal. There is hope that the later qualities and a part of the late buds are not killed. March and April thus far have been the most unpleasant months. It is now hoped we have reached a season when there will be some fair and pleasant weather. EXE.

Advices from Arkansas Monday morning, represent that the peace negotiations had failed, and both parties had ceased sending away their troops, and were firmly maintaining their respective positions, while the federal troops continued to control the situation.

The approaching third triennial festival of the Handel & Haydn Society will be such a feast of music as is seldom provided in this country. The Bostonians rejoice in having the best musical organization in the United States, the most thoroughly drilled corps of singers and the ablest director. The chorus consists of 600 voices, and Theo. Thomas' orchestra increased to 85 pieces will furnish the instrumental music. The rendering of "Judas Maccabeus" is to signalize the opening concert Tuesday evening of next week, followed on Wednesday afternoon by a grand miscellaneous concert by orchestra and singers; Wednesday evening by Haydn's "Seasons," Bethoven's Ninth Symphony, and other selections; Thursday afternoon by an Oratorio matinee, Mendelssohn's "Christus," and "Hear My Prayer," and the psalm "God is my refuge;" Friday afternoon a miscellaneous concert; Friday evening, Bach's "Passion Music;" Saturday afternoon, a miscellaneous concert; Saturday evening the Oratorio of "St. Peters;" Sunday evening closing the Festival with Handel's "Messiah." Next week will be an era in musical circles. Season tickets will be sold at $15 each; single tickets for Oratorio concerts for $2.50 and $1.50 each, according to location, and single tickets for orchestral concerts for $1.50 and $1.00 each.

Two railway accidents are reported as happening on Saturday in England, by which twenty persons were killed or wounded.

There has been much labor performed during the past week in which Speaker Blaine has been very active, looking to a compromise of the currency bill. It is understood that a measure including the following points has been agreed upon by a number of the most prominent leaders on each side: First, free banking on the present basis, with some of the present restrictions on the reserves removed; second, retiring 50 per cent. in greenbacks of the new banking currency issued, until the greenbacks are reduced to $300,000,000, the limit at which the retirement shall begin, whether at the present volume or when it has reached $400,000,000; third, redemption of greenbacks in 4 1-2 per cent. bonds. Upon this point one extreme desires 3.65 and the other 5 per cent.; fourth, purchasing 5-20's with greenbacks obtained by process of redemption.

Snow at Strafford, Monday, was 15 inches deep, and the sleighing as good as at any time the past winter.

A foot of snow fell in Manchester, Sunday.

A supplementary course of lyceum lectures will be given in Exeter by James T. Fields, Esq., commencing next Monday evening; subjects, "Charles Lamb and his friends," "Sydney Smith and his work of life," "Christopher North, with personal recollections," "Alfred Tennyson, the man and the poet," "Literary and artistic society in London 25 years ago," and "Fiction and its eminent authors."

A fire was discovered at about 3 o'clock Saturday morning in the upper portion of the Manchester Exchange. When the firemen reached the scene they found that a hall in the upper story, occupied by the Straw Rifles, and the rooms immediately beneath in the second story, occupied by the New Hampshire Insurance Company, were badly burned. The fire was soon subdued and the damage to the building will amount to about $1500. The lower story in this portion of the building was occupied for dry goods stores, by Piper & Hawley, Holton & Sprague, and Jackson & Co. The fire did not extend to these stores, but the goods of Holton & Sprague and Piper & Hawley were very badly damaged by water. Their loss will probably amount to between $5000 and $6000 each. The damage to the stock of Jackson & Co., was slight.

What Zaccheus Did.

[N. Y. Letter to Chicago Times.]

A story is told of a certain newspaper proprietor who relieved his dishonesty by a spice of humor.

The agent of a large manufacturing house went to him to protest against frequent assaults in the editorial columns.

"What the devil is the matter?" said the agent. "All you say is an infernal lie. But, then, we feel that we can't afford to have this go on. What shall we do to stop it?"

The proprietor appeared abstracted for a few moments, and then remarked: "I was thinking about a character in the Bible. Let me see; his name was—was Zaccheus. What did he do? Oh yes; he climbed a tree to see the Lord; and he didn't see him either. What did he do then? Do you remember, Mr. Agent, what he did then?"

"He came down, I suppose."

"Ah, yes?—thank you—that's it! He came down, sensible fellow; he came down."

The parable was fitting. The agent imitated the example of Zaccheus, and the journalistic batteries were instantaneously spiked.

in sickness with medicines that depress the physical energies. What the sick principally need is an accession of vital strength to enable them to cope with the enemy that has assailed them. The diseased system should be sustained, toned, purified and regulated, and there is no medical preparation in existence so largely endowed with the properties required to effect these objects as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. In ordinary practice aperient, blood-depurating, anti-bilious and sedative medicines are administered separately. In Hostetter's Bitters all these agents are combined, and act together in perfect harmony, so that undue debility and undue excitement are alike prevented, and the strength of the patient rallies while the disease is losing ground. In dyspepsia, liver complaint, chronic constipation, intermittent fevers, general weakness, and all ailments involving physical and mental depression, this pure vegetable restorative is a sovereign remedy.

Important to Sufferers.—The greatest benefactor is one who relieves pain and cures disease. Dr. Sibbee has accomplished both by his miraculous discovery of ANAKESIS, an absolutely safe, sure and infallible cure for PILES in all stages. All Doctors endorse it and 20,000 cured sufferers testify to its virtues. It is a simple suppository acting as an instrument, soothing poultice and medicine. The relief is instant and cure certain.—Price $1.00; sold by Druggists everywhere, and sent free by mail from Depot, 42 Walker st., New York.

Blessings brighten as they take their flight.—If you have a good head of hair take care of it; once gone and we realize its loss far more than we appreciate its presence. The BEARINE is taking the place of all other hair dressings, because it is healthful to the hair and delightful to use.

Don't be Discouraged. Suppose you have "tried fifty remedies" and received no benefit, is there therefore "no balm in Gilead?" Verily there is. Your liver may be congested, your stomach half paralyzed, your nerves quivering, your muscles knotted with torture, your bowels constricted, your lungs diseased, your blood full of impurities—yet in one week after commencing a course of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS you will feel like a new creature. a22 4w

SUFFERERS from Scrofula and Scrofulous affections, clean up! Why wear your Pimples, Blotches, Ulcers, Sores? Why have your life twisted out of you by Dyspepsia, Rheumatism and Gout? Why suffer Syphilitic and Mercurial diseases to rot the bones in your body, or the flesh off your bones? Why let your sluggish blood drag, and scatter its distempers through your veins? AYER'S COMP. HERE THEY ARE COMPLETED AND

FOR SALE.

TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1616 to '25; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore; Smith's antiquated bark at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Gerrish's island, &c.

The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in its palmy days, the Light-House at its original height, and a lively sea view, at about 1820—a true picture of days when the white sail ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the embalmed canvas with all greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a devoted son of old "Strawberry Bank," as called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.

Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-office.

Feed The Birds.

In late snow storms the suffering birds come to us for help. which can be given them with little trouble and without cost. Turn off your plank walks early in the morning and again at four or five o'clock in the afternoon; or, make two or more places of fare ground and cover them through the day and night (except at early morning and late in the day) with boards; or make fare places every morning, without taking any care about covering them. The object in having several places is that the different kinds of birds may each have a separate one. Any trifling assistance rendered the birds when hard pressed by unseasonable weather, will be repaid many fold by their destruction of insects during the hot months. FARMER.

Cremation is making quite a stir just now, a society in New York being about to erect a furnace for the purpose of burning up such dead people as may desird to be so treated; and we should not wonder if some people who do not desire it get into the fire after they are dead. We hope the cremation society will not be too particular, for we know of several people whom we think would be much improved by being burned up, and we see no reason for deferring the ceremony until after their deaths. By the way, if the theory advanced by the European savans and enlarged upon by Prof. Gunning in his lecture on the evening of April 21st, that the earth will at some future period drop into the sun, is correct, won't there be a wholesale cremation then? We don't care, however; we do not expect to live till then.

During the gale of Sunday two schooners laying at anchor in the lower harbor dragged their anchors and went ashore. Steam tug Clara Bateman went to their assistance, pulled them off and towed them to safe anchorage. Neither of them sustained any damage worth mentioning.

Admittance to the Bar.

The witty Piatt giveth the following account of the attempt of a lady to gain admission to the bar in Washington. The story is told in that wicked paper, the Capital, which all Washingtonians blaspheme against and then religiously buy and commit to memory. It proceedeth thusly:

Last Monday, Mrs. Belva Lockwood put in an appearance at the Court of Claims. She had in her hand that abstruse authority called "Every Man his own Lawyer," and was leaning confidingly on the arm of Colonel A. A. Hosmer, who moved her admission to the bar. Chief-Justice Drake remarked that she was a duck of a lawyer, but that the rules of Court required the applicant for admission to be: First, a man; second, of good moral character; and that from personal observation of practitioners about him, he had found that attention had chiefly been directed to securing a compliance with the first requisite of the rule; that, although Mr. Lockwood's being at home washing the children, it being wash day, was to the court prima facie proof that she was the better man of the two, yet it would not establish for her even masculine equality outside of the domestic circle. Mrs. Lockwood had recourse to her pocket, and brought forth a bottle of salts and a paper, being a certificate of character. Whereupon the Chief Justice, with characteristic gallantry, said, "Belva, dear, the lovely face which I behold refulgent with the sunshine of intelligence, blended so delicately with the beautiful shades of blushing modesty, is an estoppel to any inquiry on this point." Then gruffly to the clerk, who had taken the liberty of smiling, which every American citizen, except a Government clerk, can do with impunity at all times and everywhere except at his own funeral, "We'll decide this to-morrow." On the morrow Mrs. Lockwood appeared, looking very much like a skirmish line with feeble supports; on her right hand being Professor J. Hamilton Knox Wilcox; on her left, Mr. Lockwood, who had just finished rinsing out the children and hanging them up on the clothes-line in the back yard to dry. Suspense hung like a threatening cloud over the court-room until the Chief Justice announced that the Court wanted further time to consider. Mrs. Lockwood retired majestically. Mr. Lockwood followed as meekly as a prince consort.

Justice Miller's Game Cock.

[N. Y. Sun.]

Justice J. G. Miller, of New Castle, Superintendent of a Sunday-school at Mount Kisco, tells this story about himself: My wife had half a dozen Leghorn hens and a rooster which she thought everytning of. She had all the modern improvements put into the hen-house, and took special pains to see that her fowls enjoyed all the luxuries that well regulated and orderly hens should enjoy. One day a friend of mine from Croton Falls gave me a game cock. Of course I had to keep him in a coop to prevent him from exterminating the Leghorn rooster. My wife disliked game fowls, and I had to feed him myself. One morning the rooster got out. He went straight for the masculine Leghorn. I pursued him, and seemingly made desperate efforts to catch him. But I took good care not to capture him until he had had half a dozen enchanting battles with Leghorn. When I thought that Leghorn had about all he could stand, I cooped up my chicken. Mrs. Miller was excited and I was very sorry about the accident. The next night I went out to find my rooster, but he was not in his coop. I searched the yard but could not find him. I went into the kitchen and made inquiries of my wife.

"He got out this morning," said Mrs. Miller.

"How did he get out?" said I.

"I let him out," said she.

"Where did he go?" said I.

"Into that pot," said my wife, pointing to the steaming vessel on the stove.

I haven't had a game fowl since.

Our Jenny.

She is the most discontented, unhappy little monkey that ever lived. She finds something to cry about twenty times a day. Yesterday I saw her sitting on a box in the back yard, a small monument of despair. The tears were running slowly down her checks, and old Carlo, the Newfoundland dog, all decked in rags and strings, stood wagging his tail and watching her sympathetically. I took her up in my arms and asked her what she was crying about.

"O, many sings," she said.

"What things, darling?"

"O, everysings is wrong, everysings in dis world. I wish you hadn't borned me."

"Tell mamma what is wrong now."

"Well, den, old Tarlo's tail drowed out behind, when I wanted it to drow out 'tween his shoulders, tos why for a pummel, so's I could ride on his back and have somesing to hold on to."

A Canine Hero.

A bull-dog who already bore about his muzzle some not inglorious scars, accompanied his master, who carried on his breast the Victoria Cross, to the Ashantee campaign. Having from his breed a natural turn for fighting, he distinguished himself throughout the campaign. In one instance he rushed into the enemy's ranks, and singling out one of his naked foes, so bit and worried him that he actually brought in his prisoner in triumph. He was such a favorite with the men that in a heavy engagement their fire was suspended for a minute to allow of his uninjured retreat from one of his desperate forays. He lives to enjoy his return and his honors, and is one of the greatest pets of Belgravia.

—Last week a bright little boy, son of one of the clerks in the Hartford post-office, was visiting in Norwich. A theatrical company had been giving a performance in the city, and one of the actors, being a friend of the family, was stopping with them. The little boy's lively ways pleased the actor considerably, and taking him on his knee he said pleasantly in stage parlance: "I wish I had this little boy; I think there's money in him." To which promptly responded the child: "I know there is, for I swallowed a cent when I was at grandpa's the other day."

The Female Captain of the War.

[New York Times.]

Miss Anna E. Carroll keeps pushing her claim for compensation for furnishing the plan of the campaign up the Tennessee river in the spring of 1862, her chief witness being Thomas A. Scott, then Assistant Secretary of War, who certifies that Miss Carroll did furnish a plan, the general ideas of which were adopted by the War Department. It is insinuated that the fame of "some of our great Captains" would be injured by the admission of the claim in question; but the only General who would be affected by it is General Halleck, who has not been called "great" for a long time. He was then in command of the Department of the Mississippi, and it was his business to plan the campaign against the enemy in that section. We strongly suspect he did it. The only other persons whose official duty it was to select the line of attack were Secretary of War Cameron, and President Lincoln, and we have not heard that either of them ever claimed to have done so. Gen. Grant was then a subordinate commander, and would not have proffered a plan unless called on by Gen. Halleck. The latter is prima facie the man responsible for the plan of the campaign, and entitled to the credit of it. It would be interesting to know if Miss Carroll put forward her claim before General Halleck died, and if so, what he said to it.

The Growth of Texas.

The Mobile Register, one of the most prosperous of the Southern journals, referring to the growth of Texas, calls attention to the vote recently polled in that State to illustrate the great strides that the State has taken. According to the Register the entire vote polled at the last election "was 158,000, indicative of a population of 1,050,000. In 1860 the population was but 604,000. An increase of nearly a quarter of a million in less than three years is absolutely wonderful. The best blood and energy of the South are concentrating on her magnificent plains." The Register might have said more. The secret of the prosperity of the State lies in the fact, first, that it is not weighed down by a burden of debt; and, second, that its people possess the public spirit to encourage emigration. This, after all, is what is most desired to make the States not long ago desolated by the war acquire a higher degree of prosperity than they could ever hope for under the enervating influence of slavery.

—As the afternoon train from Fitchburg over the Boston and Albany Railroad reached South Farmington, Mass., on Wednesday, a horse, attached to a buggy, becoming frightened, dashed from the road and turned in upon the track in front of the moving train. The engineer gave the signal of alarm several times, but finding that the animal kept on, he concluded to run his chance of striking the carriage. The animal was fleet-footed, however, and kept ahead of the train to Natick, although the cars were moving at great speed. At this point several parties who saw the impending danger rushed upon the track in front of the horse, who turned into the road again, where he was caught. Neither the horse nor carriage were much injured, although the animal jumped two culverts in his terrible race. Fortunately no person was in the carriage.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA- DEBILITY- DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot possibly hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.
R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,
For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs
No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE ELDBY ST., BOSTON,
After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.
No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.
All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.
TESTIMONIALS.
"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."
"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."
"Mr. R. H. Eddy has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case, which is considerable proof of great talent and ability on his part deads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

BY UNCLE JOSEPH.

Charlestown Mass., was settled in 1628, a church formed in 1630, and John Wilson chosen teacher. Not satisfied with the location, quite a portion left and commenced the settlement of Boston. The church consequently was transferred to Boston, where Mr. Wilson was installed pastor. Soon Rev. John Cotton, from Boston, England, who had been a preacher there, came over, and on October 17, 1633, was installed pastor. The order of exercises is worthy of note. The congregation gave Mr. Cotton a call by raising hands; Mr. Cotton accepted; Mr. Wilson prayed, and hands were laid on; hands were removed and laid on again in the name of the Holy Ghost; a charge was given, probably by Mr. Wilson; the ministers present gave the hand of fellowship. Mr. Cotton was minister of this church 19 years, and died December 22, 1652, aged 57. This church was the only one in Boston till two years before his death, when a second, now the Hanover street church, was formed.

Rev. Seaborn Cotton was son of the above, and was born at sea, August 1633, while his parents were on the voyage to this country; hence his name. He graduated at Harvard College in 1652, and in 1660 was constituted pastor of the church in Hampton, in this State. He it was whom Gov. Cranfield undertook to trouble, after he had silenced Rev. Joshua Moody of Portsmouth. Mr. Cotton retired to Boston till Cranfield left the Province. He died in Hampton, April 19, 1686, aged 52. Rev. John Cotton was also a son of Rev. John Cotton, of Boston; graduated at Harvard College in 1657, preached some to the Indians, was ordained in Plymouth, Mass., June 30, 1669, where he continued 29 years, then to Charlestown, S. C., where he supplied over one year, and died September 18, 1699, aged 59.

Rev. John Cotton, son of Rev. Seaborn Cotton of Hampton, graduated at Harvard College, 1678; after his father's death he supplied the church in Hampton for about 10 years, was ordained pastor in November 1696, and died March 27, 1710, aged 51. Rev. John Cotton, son of Rev. John Cotton of Plymouth, Mass., graduated at Harvard College, in 1681; and settled in the ministry in Yarmouth, Mass. No farther account can be given of him. Rev. Rowland Cotton, brother of the last named, graduated at Harvard College, in 1685, and became minister in Sandwich, Mass. Rev. Theophilus Cotton, brother of the two preceding, graduated at Harvard College, in 1710, was ordained as the first minister of Hampton Falls, January 2, 1712, preached there 14 years, and died August 18, 1726, aged 44.

Four sons of Rev. Rowland Cotton, of Sandwich, Mass., were ministers. The first was Rev. John Cotton; he graduated at Harvard College, in 1710, and was minister in Newton, Mass., from 1714 to May 17, 1757, when he died, aged 64. Rev. Nath'l Cotton graduated at Harvard College, in 1717, was ordained in Bristol, R. I., August, 30, 1721, and died July 3, 1729, aged 31. Rev. Josiah Cotton graduated at Harvard College, in 1722. After a pastorate in Providence, R. I., and Woburn, Mass., he was constituted the first pastor in Sandown, in this State, November 28, 1759, where he died May 27, 1780, aged 78. Rev. Ward Cotton graduated at Harvard College, in 1729, was ordained at Hampton in 1734, dismissed in 1763, and died awhile after in Plymouth, Mass., While he was pastor in Hampton, the celebrated Whitefield preached there in the open air, near where the Academy now stands. In the biography of Mr. Whitefield it is stated he was much pleased with Mr. Cotton and his excellent wife.

Rev. Samuel Cotton, son of Rev. John Cotton of Newton, Mass., settled as pastor in Litchfield, in this State, in 1765; was dismissed in 1784, and moved to Claremont, where he died in 1819.

Here is a brief record of twelve ministers in five generations of one family. Some of them were eminent in native talents, intellectual culture and piety. About a year ago, Rev Wm. M. Burnham of England, in a lecture in Music Hall, Boston, spoke of Rev. John Cotton, early in Boston, as having been in New England what Melanchthon was in the days of Martin Luther.

The record of Rev. Seaborn Cotton of Hampton is that he was a good man, and able preacher, The "Old Colony Memorial" said of his brother, Rev. John Cotton of Plymouth, Mass., that he was so well versed in the scriptures that if any words were named, he could tell the chapter and verse. Of Rev. John Cotton of Hampton, son of Rev. Seaborn Cotton of the same place, Rev. Jabes Fitch of Portsmouth said, he was a person of great learning and integrity, instructive in conversation and much beloved by his people. When Rev. Ward Cotton was ordained at Hampton in 1734, his brother, Rev. J. Cotton of Newton, Mass., preached, and the discourse was printed.

Ned's Dog.

Every one has a world of sympathy for Ned's dog, for Providence certainly never bestowed upon it a single line of beauty. What magic tie there can be between the dog and its master no one can tell, and while many say that Ned could not live without his dog, all know the dog would die if it were not for Ned. The dog is small and its master is not large, and in this fact some see the tie that binds. It is well known that Ned is a disciple of Nast, and being a caricaturist, Ned probably chose the canine for his character rather than beauty. Just one week after we first saw the dog, we heard Thomas Nast lecture and at that time he drew on the canvas, with his magic pencil, a canine that we at once recognized as Ned's dog. We couldn't mistake it, for this dog is totally unlike all others. It is evident that the other dogs are jealous of him and hence we are frequently affected at the serio comic sight of a long legged dog running like mad after this short-legged one, and yet they ought to know better than to have a grudge against this harmless pup simply because he has a style of his own. The other day Ned tried to improve on his dog. Catching the spirit of the masquers, he tied a mask over the northern extremity of the dog, and jumping into his wagon whistled him on. The dog saw there was something wrong and turning his head saw a new head had grown where his tail ought to be, which frightened him so that he ran as only a mad dog can run and when he got tired he naturally wished to sit down, but having a head at both ends of him he didn't know which end to sit on, for he couldn't set on one without disrespect to the other. He finally did set down on his rear face, and then he felt so ashamed about it that he wouldn't get up, and would probably have been sitting there now had not Ned feared that he would smother the down cast face and gently raised him. The friendship between Ned and the canine is legitimate, and it would not be wrong for Ned to even worship the dog, as it is certainly not in the likeness of anything in the heavens above or the earth beneath.

A Nevada Cat Story.

The Virginia City (Nevada) Enterprise adds the following to its already large list of very interesting and slightly improbable stories: "The floor of the office of the county clerk was day before yesterday covered with a carpet. This carpet is of a fanciful pattern, and in it are many bright colors. About the office is a cat, raised in the place and a stranger to anything but naked floors. After the upholster had finished his work the feline, "Maggie" by name, came from the office of the county auditor, sheriff, or some other room about the Court house, and, crying at the door, Mr. Thompson, county clerk, went to let her in. Upon the door being opened "Maggie" was about to walk in as usual, when her eyes fell on the carpet. She instantly halted, and gazed upon it as though petrified with astonishment. All the coaxing and petting that could be done failed to induce the cat to put her feet upon the carpet; she would smell of it, and if a hair tickled the end of her nose would spring back, shake her head, and prepare to elevate her back and thicken her tail.

At last she was caught and carried to the centre of the room, and, after being soothed till quiet, was gently placed upon the carpet. At first she was afraid to move, but presently began to walk slowly about, smiling at the figures in the pattern and stepping high, like a horse with the spring-halt, and whirling about with a frightened look, whenever the claws of her feet caught in the threads of the fabric. At length she got the better of her fears, and began to examine the situation more critically. In the pattern of the carpet at intervals of about four feet in all directions is a large figure of a bright scarlet color. After cautiously smelling one of these spots, the cat lay down upon it, and rolled over and over, displaying great pleasure. She then went to the next red spot and rolled upon it, and so on over the whole room, selecting the bright red spots, and rolling upon them till thoroughly tired out. She paid no attention to any color but red, though there are in the pattern of the carpet several other bright colors of various kinds."

Wholesale Murder in the South Seas.

[Sydney Herald.]

The Pluto, 236 tons, Captain Clarke, owned by Mr. Collingwood, of Sunderland, sailed from New South Wales, on the 29th of April, bound for Hong Kong with a cargo of coal. She got on shore on a reef outlying from New Caledonia, and became a total wreck. The crew secured one of the boats, and as a strong southeast monsoon was blowing Captain Clarke determined to make for the Solomon Group, and subsequently reached Port Adam (Malayta). Here a landing was effected by a portion of the crew, who wanted to obtain water, the boat meanwhile lying off at anchor; but the natives came down in numbers and killed every soul that landed. Captain Clarke at once put to sea; but canoes were in chase, and unfortunately the boat got on a reef. Being without any arms, the canoes ranged alongside and ruthlessly slaughtered all on board the boat with the exception of one man named John Collins, who has been spared to describe the horrible scene. This man was terribly wounded by arrows, but principally about the lower part of the body, and a superstition appears to exist among the natives of this locality that where death does not at once ensue, the victim must not be again attacked, and he is tabooed from further harm. He was taken on shore, and would appear to have been well treated. While at the "Bank's Group" Lieutenant Suckling received intelligence from the missionaries that a white man was in the hands of the natives at Malayta. He at once got under way and proceeded to the spot, and after considerable difficulty succeeded in getting the unfortunate man out of their hands and placing him safely on board the Renard.

Captain-General Concha of Cuba has ordered a draft for military service to take place from May 1st from the class of ages between 25 and 35 instead of 18 and 25 years. Substitutes will be accepted. Any person liable to draft will be permitted to leave the island on the payment of $500 in gold.

A Rome despatch states that the secretary of Count Mariaffori and a Turin merchant were assassinated and plundered in a railway carriage between Alessandria and Stradella. The ruffians escaped. The police are unable to discover the assassins.

Civil Engineer Charles Hastings has resigned, and his resignation has been accepted by the Secretary of the Navy.

Both branches of Congress devoted their entire sessions Monday to eulogistic addresses upon the late Senator Sumner. Tributes of respect were paid by Mr. Boutwell, who presented the usual resolutions in the Senate, and Messrs. Anthony, Sherman, Sargent, Morrill, Thurman and others. In the House Mr. E. R. Hoar opened the proceedings by highly eulogizing the life and services of the dead Senator, and he was followed by Messrs. Dawes, Potter, Rainey, G. F. Hoar, Nesmith and Lamar of Mississippi, the speech of the last named gentleman being remarkable for its liberality toward Mr. Sumner and the north.

Chilian advices state that the court of inquiry find the captain of the lost steamship Tacna, as well as those who loaded the ship at Valparaiso, at fault and responsible for the loss of the steamship and 19 lives.

Margaret Harris, living in the rear of 19 Moon street, Boston, was taken to Station One, on Sunday evening, and thence to the City Hospital, her case being among the most abject and wretched to be conceived. This woman was delivered of still-born twins on Friday night, and she having no means of interring them, or having that office performed, and being without money or any one to advise or assist her, kept the lifeless bodies in the house until Saturday night. The adjoining tenement is occupied by Kate Anderson, who knew of the misery existing at her neighbor's, but considered the matter no further than to be rid of the bodies if possible. So on Saturday night she got drunk, as a brace to her intentions, and going into Mrs. Harris' room, beat the sick woman in a frightful manner and threw the bodies out of the window. On Sunday, the First Police were informed of the matter, and arrested the Anderson woman and gave the bodies to the City Undertaker for burial.

A very sad occurrence took place in Parsonsfield, Me., Sunday morning, Mr. Jamin Sargent, a citizen of that town, by accident fatally shooting his daughter Marcia, a child eight years old. It appears that the girl took a revolver out of the pocket of her brother. Not dreaming that the weapon was loaded he pointed it at her, cocked and fired it. The ball entered the girl's left side, just below the heart, and she expired in a few moments. The father is almost frantic with grief at the result of his folly.

Nellie Grant is to get spliced May 21st.

The Concord Patriot says Mr. M. G. Shaw, who works for the Page Belting Company, on Monday morning killed forty-seven crows before eating his breakfast, firing only four times. The first shot brought down fifteen crows, the second thirteen, the third ten and the fourth nine.

Burned to Death in a Prairie Fire.

[Fort Scott Monitor.]

A little boy, aged four years, by the name of Isaiah Roy, whose parents are living down in the Clyburn neighborhood, near the south line of Scott Township, and some five or six miles southeast of the city, was burned to death on last Friday evening, under the following most distressing circumstances: The little boy, in company with his older brother, was standing by a prairie fire, which had been set out by Mr. Bryant to back-fire around some fencing, when suddenly the wind veered around with a perfect whirl and drove the flames into his face and setting almost his entire clothing, which was of cotton, on fire. At the same time the flame and smoke so strangled him that he reeled and fell directly into the blazing grass. The older boy, with great coolness and presence of mind, dragged him out of the fire as soon as he possibly could and took him to a ravine only a few yards off, and endeavored to extinguish the fire in his clothing by rolling him in the water. The clothing was of cotton, and so thoroughly and completely ablaze by the time he got him there that he did not succeed in doing so until his entire apparel was consumed and his skin burned to one complete blister. The poor little fellow suffered the most intense pain for some two or three hours before death relieved him of his agony.

Atrocious Scoundrelism.

[Chicago Tribune.]

The insignificance of human life compared with a few cents a day added to or taken from the pay of the rolling mill laborer, was illustrated recently at Indianapolis. Fifteen hands at the Capital City Rolling Mills struck, and their places were filled by colored men. Shortly after midnight the fires were started under the boilers, and a few hours later the engineer came along, tested the guages, and found no water. He was about to start the pumps, when he discovered that the boilers had been tapped and were perfectly dry. Had he not made the discovery in time the mill would have been blown to atoms, and every person in it killed to a certainty. It is not wonderful that strikers, no matter where or what their provocation, meet with little public sympathy when such atrocities are meditated by some of them. The cause of the workingman is incalculably injured by the frequent discovery of such desperate efforts at revenge.

The Height of Honesty.

About fourteen years ago Mr. Wm H. Neal, shoe manufacturer of Saccarappa, Me., failed and settled with his creditors for fifty cents on a dollar, taking a legal discharge from all liabilities. One year ago he called on each of his creditors and paid the other fifty per cent. and now within a few days he has again called on them, all the original creditors being now alive, and paid them thirteen years' interest at six per cent., being for the whole time they were deprived of the fifty per cent., compounded on the original settlement. All business men will agree that such instances are extremely rare, and all will unite in wishing Mr. Neal every success and prosperity in the future as a reward for such unexampled honesty and integrity.

So Easy to Manufacture It.

In 1775 the then Congress set about the manufacture of paper money in the same free and easy style now proposed in Congress, a hundred years later. Pelatiah Webster then argued in favor of taxation, but a member of Congress indignantly asked if he was to help tax the people when they could go to the printing office and get a cart load of money. Webster was outvoted by the expansionists of 1775 and the manufacture of paper money was entered upon with so much activity that in the spring of 1780 the bills were worth but two cents on the dollar, and then ceased to circulate. It is related that a barber's shop in Philadelphia was papered with them, and a dog coated with tar, and the bills stuck all over him, was paraded in the streets.

Mrs. Attorney-General Williams.

[Washington Letter.]

For many weeks the stately Mrs. Williams, wife of the Attorney-General, has lain at her home—her new and beautiful home—stricken and broken. There is something so unutterably sad and mournful in her fate that the tenderest comment in this way seems almost a sacrilege. But let the intent atone for the act. Here was a lady whose brain, whose will, whose ambition, whose courage and quick adroitness of diplomacy might have made her, in other times and under other conditions, an Elizabeth, an Isabella, or perhaps a Maria Theresa. Hers was the rare ill-fate of being endowed for a throne and born for a cortege. With a man the circumstances of birth make but little difference, so his brain is sound and his constitution good; for in the masculine case, "will in human undertakings" is much oftener "synonymous with faculty" than Carlyle would have us believe.

But in the woman's case there is an element of chance about the realization of her ambition that does not attach to the other sex and its aspirations. It so happened that Mrs. Williams, learning, as women must, upon the arm of a man for escort up the incline of fame, leaned upon one weaker than her own; and, when he gave way at the knees, she fell down, too. Williams took his defeat—a defeat that would have driven a fine-grained man into an asylum, or a keenly sensitive man head first into the Potomac—this defeat Williams suffered with stolid unconcern. There was no deepened trace of care upon his automatic face, no averting of his eyes. He came and went about his daily avocations in the Department of Justice, and there was nothing in his soggy, leaden tread to indicate that his feet had ever aspired to a higher threshold. But the woman was cast in a different mold, as to her prouder nature this blow came with deadening, benumbing, paralyzing force.

For a little time she stood up and tried to bear the agony that had smitten her soul. The shock that has crushed her hope and broken her heart, had as yet only bent her pride, and that sustained her for a little while when it, too, gave way and then—"Mrs. Attorney-General Williams is very ill with malarial fever, and is unable to see anybody"—was the sententious announcement in the Evening Star that told the story of a life and the sequel of a romance. But she braved her woe to the end of the "social season." To the casual observer her eye was as bright, her laugh as flute-like, her face as radiant, heart as light, and her carriage as queenly as when her hopes had been highest and her prospects fairest. But after all and beneath all there could be detected the disquiet and faintness that was in her mind and heart.

The French Hercules.

Monsieur Henri Joignerey, the French Hercules, arrived in the Adriatic, under an engagement to perform in Barnum's Hippodrome, New York. A Sun reporter who interviewed him found him an unassuming, compactly built man, scarcely over five feet six inches in height, and weighing about 180 pounds. He is of light complexion, and has a pleasant address. His hair is brown and thin, and his moustasche is kept artistically waxed. He carried a light cane and acted like a well-to-do Frenchman seeking pleasure. No one at a glance would suppose that he has the strength he is credited with. He was pleased to see the reporter, and said that he was delighted with America. The reporter with both hands could not encircle the largest part of his arm; the flesh was as solid as marble, and the gymnast laughed when the reporter vainly tried to pinch his legs. Joignerey will perform in the ring feats never before attempted by any other athlete. He will hang from a trapeze by his feet, and with straps around the bodies of two horses raise the animals from the ground.

"You mean ponies, don't you?" asked the reporter.

"No, no," answered Joignerey, "horses, say 1,500 pounds each. In Moscow they gave me such heavy horses that the muscles of my arms were lengthened by lifting them. I will raise one horse with my teeth." Here Hercules opened his mouth and laughingly called attention to his fine, white, but not very large, teeth. He continued, "I will hang from the trapeze and lift two men with my teeth, or I will lift six men with my hands."

The reporter saw the dumb bells which Joignerey uses. One weighs 275 pounds, and the other 325. Hercules lifted one and then the other seemingly with ease. On the 275-pounder he will bear a full-grown man. Hanging from the trapeze he can, he says, hold a ball weighing three hundred pounds, by means of a strap in his teeth, and at the same time have a ball of the same weight in each hand.

—James O'Brien of Newton Upper Falls went to Boston, for work. He had all he was worth in a valise in his hand. At midnight, he entered one of the police stations and told of the loss of that valise. He was walking up Hanover Street, and accosted a strange young man: "Say, yeung fellah, where can I get lodging?" "Come along with me," said the young man, "my uncle keeps a boarding house." The pair went along for a few minutes. "Here's the place," said the young man; "you just run in and ask him if he has a spare bed, while I hold your valise." That's how O'Brien lost his other shirt and Sunday clothes.

—"Little Tommy didn't disobey mamma, and go in swimming, did he?" "No, mamma; Jimmy Brown and the rest of the boys went in, but I remembered what you said, and didn't disobey you." "And Tommy never tells lies, does he?" "No, mamma; I wouldn't tell a lie for all the world." "Then how does Tommy happen to have on Jimmy Brown's shirt?" That conundrum was too much for Tommy. He had to give it up.

—On Wea Prairie, near Lafayette, Indiana, is a little hut four feet high, with a forty-foot lightning rod on it. The proprietor, being asked if he was afraid of the lightning, replied, "Not a bit; but it keeps those lightning-rod fellers from striking."

Do Not Persecute the Body

In sickness with medicines that depress the physical energies. What the sick principally need is an accession of vital strength to enable them to cope with the enemy that has assailed them. The diseased system should be sustained, toned, purified and regulated, and there is no medical preparation in existence so largely endowed with the properties required to effect these objects as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. In ordinary practice aperient, blood-depurating, anti-bilious and sedative medicines are administered separately. In Hostetter's Bitters all these agents are combined, and act together in perfect harmony, so that undue debility will not result, elements are alike prevented, and the strength of the patient rallies while the disease is losing ground. In dyspepsia, liver complaint, chronic constipation, intermittent fevers, general weakness, and all ailments involving physical and mental depression, this pure vegetable restorative is a sovereign remedy.

Important to Sufferers.—The greatest benefactor is one who relieves pain and cures disease. Dr. Silsbee has accomplished both by his miraculous discovery of ANAKESIS, an absolutely easy, rapid and infallible cure for PILES in all stages. All Doctors endorse it and 20,000 cures testify to its virtues. It is a simple suppository acting as an instrument, soothing poultice and medicine. The relief is instant and cure certain.—Price $1.00; sold by Druggists everywhere, and sent free by mail from Depot, 45 Walker st., New York.

Blessings brighten as they take their flight.—If you have a good head of hair take care of it; once gone and we realize its loss far more than we appreciate its presence. The BEARINE is taking the place of all other hair dressings, because it is healthful to the hair and delightful to use.

Don't be Discouraged. Suppose you have "tried fifty remedies" and received no benefit, is there therefore "no balm in Gilead?" Verily there is. Your liver may be congested, your stomach half paralyzed, your nerves quivering, your muscles knotted with torture, your bowels constricted, your lungs diseased, your blood full of impurities—yet in one week after commencing a course of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS you will feel like a new creature. n29 4w

SUFFERERS from Scrofula and Scrofulous affections, clean up! Why wear your Pimples, Blotches, Ulcers, Sores? Why have your life twisted out of you by Dyspepsia, Rheumatism and Gout? Why suffer Syphilitic and Mercurial diseases to rot the bones in your body, or the flesh off your bones? Why let your sluggish blood drag, and scatter its distemper through your veins? AYER'S COMP. EXT OF SARSAPARILLA cures these complaints, and cleanses them out of the system. Use it faithfully, and you bring to society a healthier, cleaner, and far more acceptable member.—[Democrat, Baltimore, Md.]

ANNOUNCE THEIR

SPRING OPENING

— OF —

Bonnets, Hats, Flowers and Ribbons.

The Largest Stock, The Latest Styles, The Lowest Prices.

The beauty of Henderson's opening is you are not obliged to turn your purse inside out, and pull out the bottom dollars to pay for a

NEW BONNET.

It is a well known fact that HENDERSON sells everything in the Millinery line full 25 per cent. less than any other house in the city, and the question is often asked "How can he do it?" We answer:

First. We are not dependent on our Millinery trade alone for a living. We do an extensive business in DRY and FANCY GOODS, and our Millinery is sold with our other goods at a cotton cloth profit, so that you are not obliged to pay us the fancy prices charged by dealers doing an exclusively millinery business.

Second. Our business in STRAW GOODS having increased so enormously (our sales in the summer of 1873 being nearly three hundred cases of Bonnets and Hats, the largest retail trade in the State,) that we buy entirely of manufacturers, thus making a saving in this way alone of fifteen per cent., which goes to the benefit of our customers.

Third. We Trim Hats free of charge; you all know that this one item saves you half a dollar. We have opened a larger stock than ever before, and keep the finest as well as cheaper grades of goods.

Hats, not trimmed,

From One Cent to One Dollar.

Hats, trimmed,

From 50 cts. to $10.00.

HERE THEY ARE COMPLETED AND

FOR SALE.

TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1616 to '20; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore; Smith's antiquated bark at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Gerrish's Island, &c.

The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in its palmy days, the Light-House at its original height, and a lively sea view, at about 1820—a true picture of days when the white sail ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—the then Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the embalmed canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a devoted son of old "Strawberry Bank," so called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.

Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-office.

The Odd Fellows' Excursion.

Mt. Sinai and Strawberry Bank Encampments, accompanied by Harlow's Band, left this city on the 10 o'clock train to celebrate the 55th anniversary of the introduction of Odd Fellowship into this country, with the Quochecho Encampment of Dover, on the 27th. Arriving at Dover the Encampments were received at the depot by Quochecco Encampment, accompanied by the Dover Band; the advertised line of march was given up on account of the bad condition of the streets, and after passing through the main streets the Encampments were escorted to Odd Fellows' Hall, and dismissed until 12:30 P. M., that being the dinner hour. The Encampments met in due time and everything being ready the Patriarchs were marshaled to the Banquet Hall of the Odd Fellows, where the Daughters of Rebekah had made themselves useful by filling many tables with food for the inner man.

At the striking of a bell in the hands of the chairman, Dr. Stackpole, divine blessing was asked by Past High Priest Ashworth of Quochecco Encampment; then the Patriarchs (showing a desire to help the Rebekahs clear the table) made things lively for a while, everybody being satisfied with the feast. The chairman gave a little history of one by the name of George, who always was in for a time and was in the habit of getting people in difficulty, and introduced Patriarch George Lamos, as toast-master, who after saying a few words called upon Past High Priest Ashworth, who read the history of Odd Fellowship since its foundation. Then the first toast was given:

Our Guests; Mt. Sinai and Strawberry, welcome to the camp of the Quochecco; may the Gardner from the Strawberry Bank be helped by the rugged sides of Mt. Sinai, so that the transportation may continue to flourish and bring forth as good fruit in the future as in the past.

This was responded to by Past Grand Rep. Gardner, and Chief Patriarch R. C. Sides, Jr. The toast to Grand Encampment, was responded to by Past Grand Rep. Hartshorn.

"Quochecco Encampment," was responded to by Chief Patriarch Gray, in words of welcome, answered by Chief Patriarch Hidden. The last toast was Woman; God made the diamond and all the other precious jewels, and then went one better and made woman.

Response by the chairman. Speeches were made by many other Patriarchs; then for a little exercise the Encampments had a street drill of one hour and a quarter, when they took tea and prepared for the dance. The bands furnished excellent music throughout the speaking and march, and in the evening Harlow's Band gave a concert in front of the Hall. Grand march was started at 8 o'clock, Harlow's Band playing; the hall was well filled with the smiling faces of the Dover ladies, and all kept on their feet until the small hours, when the visitors with their lady friends were escorted to the depot, the band playing "Home, Sweet Home" on the way to the station, and "Marching through Georgia" on leaving the depot in this city. H.

Laconics.

The Committee on Relief for Louisiana are requested to meet at the City Rooms at 11 o'clock this (Wednesday) forenoon.

The popular favorites, Dollie Bidwell and Lillie Wilkinson, with Charlie Wilkinson's New England Theatre, appear at the Temple this evening in a six-act drama, translated from the French, entitled "La Tentation." An adaptation of the same play under the title of "Led Astray" has had an extraordinary run both in Boston and New York. The play will be presented with proper attention to everything necessary to insure its success. Admission 35 and 50 cents. Reserved seats, without extra charge, can be secured at Preston's.

During the violent storm of Sunday, the frame of a large barn being built on the Sagamore farm by Messrs. G. W. & J. S. Peirce, was blown to the ground.

Costumes for the K. of P. masquerade to-night, can be had at Terhune & Berry's, under the Franklin House.

Henderson & Co. announce their Spring opening of millinery,—hats and bonnets, trimmed and untrimmed, sash ribbons, ties, frames, etc.,—at Nos. 3 and 6 Daniel street.

The case of Jeff. C. Rowe vs. Eastern Railroad has been carried to the U. S. Circuit Court which meets in this city May 8.

The heirs of the late Joseph D. Pillow have settled with the Eastern Railroad for $4000.

Scarlet fever is raging at York.

Peirce Downing, a railroad section hand, fell from a hand-car near Eliot last week and was badly if not fatally injured.

J. Rider & Son advertise corned pork at 11 cts. per pound, teas at 40 and 50 cts., flour at prices varying from $9.25 to $11 per bbl., camphor, soap and other goods in their line, very cheap.

Mr. E. Newton announces that fresh fish and lobsters can be procured every day, "at the sound of the horn."

Now is the season to attend to white-washing, and Mr. William Andrews, of Hill street, is ready to do anything required in that line. He also does plastering, brick and stone work. See his advertisement.

The physiological lectures by Dr. W. W. Hebbard, who is a man of high culture and deep study will commence next Monday evening at Congress Hall. The range of subjects embraced in the course is wide and comprehensive, the treatment combining the scientific with the amusing and practical. These lectures are heartily commended everywhere by the press and people. We bespeak for the lecturer a full house at the opening lecture.

A Loose Gun On Shipboard.

(Hugo's "Ninety-three.")

A gun that breaks its moorings becomes suddenly some indescribable supernatural beast. It is a machine which transforms itself into a monster. This mass turns upon its wheels, has the rapid movements of a billiard ball; rolls with the rolling, pitches with the pitching; goes, comes, pauses, seems to meditate; resumes its course, rushes along the ship from end to end like an arrow, circles about, springs aside, evades, rears, breaks, kills, exterminates. It is a battering-ram which assails a wall at its own caprice. Moreover, the battering-ram is metal, the wall wood. It is the entrance of matter into liberty. One might say that this eternal slave avenges itself. It seems as if the power of evil hidden in what we call inanimate objects finds a vent and bursts suddenly out. It has an air of having lost patience, of seeking some fierce, obscure retribution, nothing more inexorable than this rage of the inanimate. The mad mass has the bounds of a panther, the weight of the elephant, the agility of the mouse, the obstinacy of the ox, the unexpectedness of the surge, the rapidity of lightning, the deafness of the tomb. It weighs 10,000 pounds, and it rebounds like a child's ball. Its flight is a wild whirl, abruptly cut at right angles. What is to be done? How to end this? A tempest ceases, a cyclone passes, a wind fails, a broken mast is replaced, a leak stopped, a fire dies out; but how to control this enormous brute of bronze? In what way can one attack it? You can make a mastiff hear reason, astound a bull, fascinate a boa, frighten a tiger, soften a lion; but there is no resource with that monster, a cannon let loose. You cannot kill it—it is dead; at the same time it lives. It lives with a sinister life bestowed on it by Infinity.

Two Dollars.

The Fairfield Chronicle tells a good story of Judge Wm. B. Snell, now of Washington, formerly of Fairfield. Mr. Snell, at all times noted for driving a sharp bargain, had engaged a Frenchman, by the name of Ronco, to saw and carry into his office a load of wood. The work was faithfully performed, and Ronco demanded his dollar. Whereupon Mr. Snell said he believed they were square. At this Ronco seemed much surprised, and asked how it came about. The Squire replied, that he had at one time read a letter for Mr. Ronco and furthermore had written a reply. Joe listened attentively, and, looking very much disappointed, turned to go away; but, before closing the door, he looked piteously into Snell's face, and said:

"Meester Snell, Meester Snell, when you work as me to earn a dollar, your belly no stickee so much out!"

A short time afterward Snell had occasion again to employ Ronco to work up a similar pile of wood.

When asked if he could do it, the old man, with child-like simplicity, enquired if he must take "lawyer's pay?"

To this Mr. Snell replied: "Oh no, I'll pay you the money as soon as your work is done."

On completing it, as before, in he walked for his money.

"Well, Joseph," said Mr. Snell, "how much this time?"

The old man slowly raised his eyes from the floor and responded, "Two dollars sir."

Mr. Snell quietly drew out his pocket-book and, without a word, promptly paid the two dollars.

—A man named Tucker was married last week in Woodford county, Ill., and the "boys," presuming on his good nature, gathered to give him a grand charivari. They were progressing finely when they discovered the bridegroom in their party pounding on an old tin pan as hard as any of them. The subsequent proceedings interested them no more.

—A Chicago pork packer, whose pew rent was raised to twenty-five dollars, exclaimed: "Great Cæsar! here's a nice state of affairs—the Gospel going up and pork going down. What is to become of us?"

—Bailey's farewell to Danbury and the world in general is "Good-by. Owing to press of advertising matter we have been compelled to crowd Mr. Bailey out of this country."

—It is rather cool in a San Francisco paper to advise a young man to "go West."

Grindstones, and How They are Made.

[Scientific American.]

The sandstone formation overlying the coal-beds of England furnishes the grindstones of that country, the principal quarries being located at Newcastle-upon-Tyne and at Wickersly, near Sheffield.

These quarries are worked by hand, and all the grindstones are made with mallet and chisel, and have been imported into this country for over 100 years.

The grindstones from the provinces of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick are also the overlying sandstone formations of the coal districts bordering on the Bay of Fundy and extending across the Province to the Gulf of St. Lawrence. These immense deposits contain a great variety of grits, known as the Nova Scotia grindstones. These quarries are generally worked by the French people known as "Acadians," from the name they gave this country, "Acadia," and are the descendants of the "Huguenots," who were driven out of France by religious persecution.

They are a very industrious and simple-minded people, and the females retain to this day the style of dress brought over from France by their ancestors.

The tides of the Bay of Fundy rise and fall from 60 to 70 feet every 12 hours, and these people will avail themselves of this power to work the quarries, which extend from a high bluff on the mainland, down to low water mark in the bay.

At low water a huge mass of stone is loosened from its bed and a heavy chain is passed under it and over a large boat, which is placed alongside. As the tide rises, the stone attached to the bottom of the boat is floated into a sand cove at high water, and made into grindstones after the tide recedes. This work is done with mallet and chisel, the rough parts being first chopped off with a heavy axe. Machinery has been recently introduced, and the small grindstones are now turned in a lathe by steam power. The sandstone deposits of this country which are made into grindstones are found along the shores of Lake Erie, and extending for a considerable distance east and west of Cleveland, and inland as far as Marietta, on the Ohio. They are also found on the shores of Lake Huron, above Detroit.

These deposits are of a different character from the foreign stone, and do not seem to be the overlying strata of coal formations, but appear to be a later formation, as the quarries look as though this part of Ohio had once been the bottom of the lake, the sand of which had become solid, and been up-heaved by some convulsion of nature. Nearly all the Ohio grindstones are made by machinery driven by steam power.

The blocks of stone, being loosened from the quarry bed, are roughly hewed out, with a square hole in the center. This is placed on a heavy square iron shaft furnished with a 9-inch collar, against which the stone is securely fastened by means of another collar keyed against the side of the stone. The shaft and stone being driven by steam power, two men on opposite sides of the stone turn it off perfectly true, by means of soft iron bars about 6 feet long, and 2 by 1-2 inch thick, which are drawn out to a thin point, which is curved upward. This was formerly a very unhealthy occupation, owing to the shaft dust being inhaled by the workmen, but this difficulty is now obviated by means of blowers, which drives it away.

—A Detroit paper noting the fact that a man fell down dead while combing his hair, says: "And yet there are people who will persist in that dangerous habit."

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA- DEBILITY- DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA,
FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.
This compound of the vegetable alteratives, Sarsaparilla, Dock, Stillingia and Mandrake, with Iodides of Potassium and Iron makes a most effectual cure of a series of complaints which are very prevalent and stubborn, and yet baffles the skill, purges out the lurking humors in the system that undermine health and settle into troublesome disorders. Eruptions of the skin are the appearance on the surface of humors that should be expelled from the blood. Internal derangements are the determination of these same humors to some internal organ, or organs, whose action they derange, and whose substance they disease and destroy. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA expels these humors from the blood. When they are gone, the disorders they produce disappear, such as Ulcerations of the Liver, Stomach, Kidney, Lungs, Eruptions and Eruptive Diseases of the Skin, St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Ulcers and Sores, Rheumatism and Neuralgia, Pain in the Bones, Side and Head, Female Weakness, Sterility, Leucherrhœa arising from internal ulceration and uterine disease, Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Emaciation and General Debility. With their departure, health returns.

EPISCOPACY vs. PURITANISM.

Rev. James DeNormandie's Historical Sketches. No. 7.

[Boston Transcript.]

It has been customary to represent the Piscataqua settlement as made up of a class of settlers, in morality, very far below those of the Bay Colony; a representation which, as we have seen, grew out of the intense sectarian animosity existing in England and New England, just at that time, between the different religious parties. (One must always preserve the distinction, too little regarded, between the Bay Colony and the Pilgrim settlement at Plymouth.) As early as 1631, Thomas Dudley, afterwards governor of the Massachusetts, writing to the countess of Lincoln in England, says of some of the settlers there, "hearing of men of their own disposition, who were planted at Piscataway, went from us to them, whereby though our number was lessened, yet we accounted ourselves nothing weakened by their removeal." All the Puritan representations of the colony are in the same strain. It is almost universal for bigots in religion to account those of a different faith of a lower morality as well. These first impressions in regard to this colony were continued and repeated without investigation and without confirmation. There is nothing like a good story to give currency to an opinion—and even though it be but a flash of wit, or the opinion of a single mind, to fix a reputation upon a whole community. Many prevalent views have no other or better foundation. We find as early as the time of Cotton Mather a story which sets forth the impression or prejudice of the Bay in regard to this settlement, a story which has been often repeated, but which is rarely traced to its author, or understood as doubtless he meant it to be.

He says in his Magnalia (ed. 1702, p. 15), "There were more than a few attempts of the English to People and Improve the Parts of New England which were to the Northward of New Plymouth, but the Designs of those Attempts being aimed no higher than the Advancement of some Worldly Interests, a constant Series of Disasters has confounded them, until there was a plantation created upon the nobler Designs of Christianity, and that Plantation though it has had more Adversaries than perhaps any upon Earth, yet, having obtained help from God, it continues to this day. There have been very fine settlements in the northeast regions; but what is become of them? [Some how or other, by some help or other, they also seem to have continued to this day.] I have read that one of our ministers, once preaching to a congregation there, urged them to approve themselves a Religious People from this consideration, That otherwise they would contradict the main end of planting this wilderness, whereupon a well-known person then in the assembly, (which is a perfect translation of the New Testament 'church') cried out, 'Sir, you are mistaken; you think you are preaching to the people at the Bay, our main End is to catch Fish.' Truly 't were to have been wished that something more excellent had been the main end of the Settlement in that brave Country which we have, even long since the arrival of that more pious colony at the Bay, was seen dreadfully unsettled no less than twice at least, by the sword of the Heathen, after they had been replenished with many hundreds of People who had thriven to many Thousands of pounds and that all the force of the Bay too, to assist them in the maintaining of their settlement."

So far from conveying any idea of a lower morality, this story, to any one who has carefully investigated the history of the settlement, is a capital piece of irony upon the cant of Puritanism, and the person who replied to the minister evidently thought he was ignorant of the history of the settlement, and wanted to call his attention to the fact that the colony to which he was preaching was not banished or self-exiled for religious opinions, but was on the royal and Church side. Although there is no actual proof that it refers to this settlement, it has been attached to it by tradition, and admirably corresponds to the feelings existing between the two colonies.

Happily the same historians, who, in the prejudices of a heated religious period, have misrepresented the settlement of the Piscataqua, were men of sincerity, and not slow to set down the faults of their own people; and if any confidence is to be placed in the records of Winthrop, Bradford and others, they show a morality by no means above the average of the Piscataqua, and the sins of bestiality and sensuality by no means uncommon.

We have also as early as 1633, ten years after the settlement here, an incident in Winthrop of "One Cowper of Pascataquack going in December to an island upon the Lord's Day, to fetch some sack to be drank at the Great House, and he and a boy, coming back in a canoe, (both being drunk,) were driven to sea and never heard of after," which, according to the custom of the day, would doubtless be interpreted as the wrath of God, not against drunkenness, but against breaking the Sabbath which was regarded as a far more serious sin. While colonies vary very much in the purpose of their settlement, and in the character, plans and religious views of their leaders, the average settler is pretty much the same always. It is true, of both the Bay and the Piscataqua, that they had a very large number, during the early years, of settlers of the very highest moral and social standing—merchants and citizens of the best quality of England's culture; it is true that the religious views of the colonies differed; it is true that they were equally attached to their faith; it is true that some members of each partook of that coarse, wild and profane character which belongs to all new settlements; and it is true that the settlement here came so early under the sway of the Bay Colony, was subject to their worship and controlled by men of precisely the same character with themselves, that it was not possible for anything but prejudice to suggest or keep alive the tradition of a substantial difference, and if the Wheelwright deed be acknowledged a forgery, it will never be said again, that the Piscataqua was religiously of lower rank than the Bay, for here was a matter of early history, wherein the connivance, if nothing more, of the Bay would do credit to Butlerism.

In the following sketch I shall notice some of the customs, social and religious, which found an observance during the first part of our history, and which, being much the same in the various settlements, may give some idea of the social life in all.

One cannot fail to notice the expressions of friendship or religion which are found at the opening or close of business communications. The letters from one merchant to another seem incomplete without inquiries about health, family, or asking the blessing of God upon their enterprises. Of course it is possible for good manners to conceal the intention or disposition of dishonesty, just as the forms of religion may advance the schemes of hypocrisy; but it is not generally so, and these expressions, even though the common epistolary form of that day, hardly belong to a class of men utterly without the sentiment of religion, or abandoned to trade beyond all other settlers. Thus Thomas Eyre of the Laconia Company, writing to Gibbens, closes his letter with this sentence: "I commend you and your wife, who by thistime I hope is with you, to the protection of the Almighty." Mason, sending to Vaughan an invoice of goods shipped to the company, finishes the letter with "thus we commend you to God." Gibbens, writing back, says, "At large I will write, if God will by the next. Thus taking my leave, I commit your worship to Almighty God." Not less frequent are the expressions of friendship from the families of the proprietors to those of the factors—"with my kind love to you, wife and daughter"—and Mrs. Mason writes to her "loving friend" Ambrose Gibbens. While these expressions abound, there is no reason to suppose they are suggested by any other than business relationships. Nevertheless even at that day there was a spirit of over-reaching and dishonor in trade, which seems as old as trade itself, coming continually to the surface. Ambrose Gibbens says in a letter to Mason, "the merchants I shall be very cautyluous [cautious] how I deale with any of them while I live." In Massachusetts a woman is excommunicated from the Boston Church for charging mechanics, who worked on her husband's house, with extortion; and a man is fined £5 for taking upon him to cure the scurvy by a water of no value, which he sold at a very dear rate.

In matters of temperance early settlers are not apt to be the best examples,—yet there is nothing which shows so well as history the progress the temperance cause has made. The convivial habits of one hundred, two hundred years ago would not be endured for a moment anywhere. Any one who will take the trouble to look up the social life of the English or Scotch, or of our own land, beyond the present or last century, is amazed at the custom of intoxication or excessive drinking; and while among the greatest of the evils we have still to deal with, the change has been very marked, and the excited and unfounded statements that we are intemperate beyond all other people, or that proportionately the vice is greater in our day than in the past, are made in utter ignorance and the extremest party and fanatical zeal.

All these settlements were well supplied with aqua vity, as it is spelled—aqua vitæ, water of life being the common name of brandy, or the spirit of wine; it comes in all the inventories as a part of the goods; and sack, the name of a Spanish wine now called sherry, is not infrequently in the accounts. We find it ordered by the court of Exeter that "no wines or strong water shall be sold by retail to the English but by Thomas Wardle," from which it would appear that there were no restrictions upon the sale of liquor to the Indians—as the Arabs at the present day deem it all honorable to overreach the Christian infidels in any way; but in 1654 "Roger Shawe of Hampton is empowered and ordered to sell wine or any sort of strong liquors to the Indians as to their [his] judgment shall seem meet and necessary for their relief in just and urgent occasions and not otherwise." There is a record of the House of Deputies of Massachusetts in 1654, as follows: "Whereas it is judged most comely, convenient and conducible to the dispatch of public service that the deputies of the General Court should diet together, especially at dinner, it is therefore ordered that the deputies of the General Court the next ensuing year viz, 1655, shall all accordingly dine together and that Lieutenant Phillips, the keeper of said tavern, shall be paid for the same by the treasurer for the time being, by discounting the same in the custom of wine." In 1658 it is declared that "this court doth expect that all the inhabitants of Pascataqa doe attend the observance of our laws, in particular that concerning the selling of strong liquors and good order to be kept in ordinaries."

As early as 1637, the Legislature of the Bay Colony, perceiving the deadly effect of intemperance, passed the severest laws, and with probably no greater enforcement and no more beneficial effects than last year; but the best step in the temperance cause was when the governor, in 1630, believing from what he had seen of the custom of drinking healths in England, that it was contrary to religious obligation, "restrained it at his own table, and wished others to do the like, so as to grow by little and little to disuse."

The extent of the evil is shown by the efforts to suppress it; e. g., we find in 1634, at Roxbury, for drunkenness, a man was ordered to be disfranchised, and to wear about his neck, and so to hang upon his outward garment, the letter D made of red cloth, set upon white; to continue this for a year, and not to take it off at any time when he comes among company." With us, instead of being disfranchised, the drunkards are those in whom the politicians have the deepest interest. "Persons who keep houses of entertainment are forbidden to allow tippling after nine o'clock at night." In Londonderry, at the close of the last century, the evil was so great that at the installation of a clergyman a hogshead of rum was drank; and in one part of the house where the minister lived was a tavern where spirit was sold and drank on Sunday by members of the church; and so wide-spread was the custom that on a Fast Day, when the minister was supposed to be free to indulge in some special topic, he was rudely denounced for preaching upon temperance.

The use of tobacco, then comparatively novel—but a habit which has a fatal tendency to make its subjects ungentlemanly and rude, and to forget how disagreeable it may be to others—early became subject to legal restrictions. In 1646 we find, "Whereas there is great abuse in taking tobacco in a very uncivil manner in the streets, if any person or persons shall be found or seen doing so, hereafter he shall be subjected to punishment;" and again, "Any person or persons who shall be found smoking tobacco on the Lord's Day going to or coming from the meeting within two miles of the meetinghouse, he shall be fined." Within two miles of the meetinghouse was construed to have no bearing on such as had a mind to smoke in the meetinghouse, so the loud snapping of tobacco boxes, after loading the pipes, the clinking of flint and steel, followed by curling wreaths of smoke, were not infrequent in the house of worship.

Thus early, too, we find the practice widely prevalent among the students of Harvard. Captain John Underhill, who was a conspicuous figure in the early settlement, went so far as to say that "having long lain under a spirit of bondage, he could get no assurance, till at length, as he was taking a pipe of tobacco, the spirit set home upon him an absolute promise of free grace, with such assurance and joy, that he had never since doubted of his good estate, neither should he, whatever sins he might fall into," and that "as the Lord was pleased to counsel Saul while he was persecuting, so he might manifest himself to him, while making a moderate use of the good creature tobacco:" the only instance, I doubt not, since its discovery, wherein it has been a means of grace.

Some of the customs and morals or immoralities of these early times may be gathered from the regulations passed in the interests of good order and religion. It was ordered that "no young man that was neither married, nor hath any servant, and be no public officer, should keep house by himself without consent of the town where he first lived; and that no master of a family should give habitation or entertainment to any young man to sojourn in his family, but by the allowance of the inhabitants of the said town where he dwells;" this was that a strict watch might be kept over the ways of each person. It was ordered that Maverick, an Episcopal clergyman on Noddle's Island, move into Boston, and entertain no strangers longer than one night, out of fear that he might countenance and harbor the enemies of the Puritans, but the order as to his moving was countermanded at a later date.

At an important synod held at Newton, Mass., 1637, it was resolved, "though a few women might meet together for prayer and religious conversation, yet large companies of them, as sixty or more who convened weekly in Boston, taught by a particular one of their number, in doctrine and exposition of the Scriptures, were disorders." A man accused of swearing was to have his tongue put in a cleft stick. "A member of Harvard College being convicted of speaking blasphemous words concerning the Holy Ghost, is sentenced to be publicly whipped before all the scholars; suspended as to taking his degree of Bachelor; sit alone by himself in the hall, uncovered, at meals; during the pleasure of the president and fellows; and be in all things obedient, doing what exercise is appointed him by the president, or else be finally expelled the college."

In 1668, the wearing of long hair was condemned as sinful. The governor, deputy-governor and magistrates entered into an association to prevent the growing evil. "Forasmuch as the wearing of long hair, after the manner of ruffians and barbarous Indians, had begun to invade New England, contrary to the rule of God's word, which says it is a shame for a man to wear long hair, as also the commendable custom generally of all the godly of our nation, until within these few years; we, the magistrates, do declare and manifest our dislike and detestation against the using of such long hair, as against a thing uncivil and unmanly, whereby men do deform themselves, and offend sober and modest men, and do corrupt good manners."

In 1638, in Massachusetts, the court taking into consideration the extravagance that prevailed through the country as to costliness of attire and following new fashions, ministers, as the particular duty of their profession, were called upon to urge a reform in this respect on their congregations, "but," it is added, "little was done about it, for divers of the elders' wives were, in some measure, partners of the general disorder." What would a settler of 1638 think of the disorder now?

In 1662 the General Court require that the children whose parents neglect to educate them, shall have the particular attention of the selectmen where they live, so they shall learn to read and understand the principles of religion, as well as the capital laws. In 1643, "Ordered, that all parents and masters do duly endeavor, either of their own ability and labor, or by employing such schoolmasters or other help and means as the plantation doth afford or the family may conveniently furnish, that all the children and apprentices, as they grow capable, may, through God's blessing, obtain, at least, so much as to be able duly to read the Scriptures and other good and profitable printed books in the English tongue." In 1647, there is a long resolution in regard to the Bible in schools, so that the pupils may exercise greater vigilance against papacy, "it being one chief project of that old deluder, Satan, to keep men from the knowledge of the Scriptures, as in former times by keeping them in an unknown tongue, so in these later times by persuading from the use of tongues." The use of the Bible in schools was to make each one read it for himself, the cardinal Protestant idea; and the greatest object of education, to enable each to read it; whence utterly ignoring the original idea, and entirely wresting it from its purpose, by a long custom it has come to pass that some, not able to distinguish between a custom and a principle, insist upon the idiest form of reading a few verses of the Scriptures, as an essential part of our common-school system.

In another lecture we have referred to our old church being for a long time without any pews. The church at Hampton had, at first, but one pew, and that for the use of the minister's family, the rest of the house being furnished with seats for the accommodation of the people. Each man was obliged to build his own pew, keep it in repair, and maintain all the glass against it; and he must build on the spot assigned him. In the town of Stratham there was an exception where, by a vote of the town, "Mr. Andrew Wiggin shall have liberty to set in what seat he pleaseth in the meeting house," while the general law was, "That when the comeley have seated the meeting house, every person that is seated shall set in those seats, or pay five shillings per day for every day they set out of those seats in a disorderly manner to advance themselves higher in the meeting house." Persons were seated in church according to their rank or station in life or society. "Mr." was at that time a title of great distinction to which a very small proportion attained. Even in the begining of the present century it was usual in the Scotch Kirk for the minister to bow from the pulpit to the lords according to their rank, as they sat in the front seats; and there was often a rivalry entirely unbecoming the equality of souls before God as to who should have the first bow. In one parish the custom was given up, and as they could not judge themselves as to points of honor and descent, the minister was appointed to forbear bowing to any of the lairds from the pulpit for the time to come.

The distance persons walked for worship is incredible in our day. They came on foot from Rye, Newcastle and Greenland, to the Old South Church over the bridge, and it was no uncommon thing for a woman to walk six or eight miles, and sometimes carry an infant child.

Before the town of Bedford was set off, its inhabitants for some time attended worship at Londonderry. They performed the journey on foot, and generally carried one or two children, a distance of twelve miles.

At a regular parish meeting held June 4, 1765, it was voted, "That in consideration of the number, the distance they had to travel, and the dangers to be encounted in attendance upon public worship, the inhabitance of Greenland be permitted to enjoy their own regular instituted means of grace, and that £100 be paid yearly, out of the town stock, as their proportion for the support of the ministry during the maintenance of an able minister among them and no longer." In the want of a bell, a drum gave notice of the time of gathering for public worship. By an ancient law a penalty of £60 by way of a fine was attached to every town that was two months at a time not provided with a drum to call the people to meeting. There is an order of public worship in Boston, as follows: "It begins by ringing of a bell about nine o'clock or before." "The pastor prays a quarter of an hour. The teacher reads and explains a chapter. A psalm is dictated by one of the ruling elders and sung. The pastor preaches a sermon, and sometimes gives an exhortation without notes. The teacher closes with prayer and benediction. Services begin at two in the afternoon and proceed in the same order."

It was the custom, before watches and clocks were common, to measure the time of religious performances by an hour-glass, —and until a late day, in many pulpits could be seen the place for it to stand. So a painter represents Hugh Peters in a pulpit, before a large assembly, turning an hour-glass, with these words; "I know you are good fellows, stay and take another glass."

When a minister exchanged, the ruling elder said to him publicly, after the psalms was sung, "If this present brother hath any word of exhortation for the people at this time, in the name of God let him say on." Before departing in the afternoon, one of the deacons said, "Brethren and the congregation, as God hath prospered you, so freely offer." Then the magistrates and chief gentlemen first, and then the elders and all the congregation of men, and most of them that were not of the church, all single persons, widows, and women in absence of their husbands, went up one after another one way, and brought their offering of money or chattel-to the deacons' seat, and passed by another way to their seats.

Persons were appointed to have inspection of the audience during the public exercises, whose frequent rounds kept the children in order. The badge of their office was a pole with a knob on one end and a tuft of feathers on the other; with the one they rapped on the men's heads and with the other they brushed the ladies' faces when they caught them napping.

No Change.

An Advertiser dispatch says: The President evidently did not fully comprehend the political situation in New Hampshire when Congressman Small extracted from him a promise to remove Young and appoint Haley to the collectorship of the first district. Both sides have presented their respective claims, and it is finally decided that, in the absence of any charge against Young's official career, the rules of civil service afford him ample protection. Whenever any change is made the districts will probably be consolidated, and such action is already urged at the department. It has always been customary for each republican representative to control the patronage of his own district, but for some reason this case appears to be an exception.

The Triennial Festival.

The constant rehearsals of the Handel and Haydn Society show a determination to make the forthcoming performances of oratorio all that care and earnest effort can make them. The event will prove the crowning triumph of a season that has been more than usually prolific in musical entertainments. The fact that Miss Edith Wynne will sing at the Festival concerts, and Theodore Thomas' orchestra will assist, lend an additional interest to the affair. The sale of season tickets has been already very large, and the success, both pecuniary and artistic, of the Festival, seems assured. There was quite a rush for single tickets Tuesday, when their sale commenced. They may now be procured at the office of Music Hall every day, and those desiring seats had better be early in applying for them.

Readables.

In the United States Senate, Tuesday, a long discussion occurred on a motion to take action on the vetoed finance bill, in which a tendency was shown to avoid the consideration of the main question and in its wanderings the discussion turned upon the late Senator Sumner's displacement from the chairmanship of the committee on foreign relations, and some interesting things were said in regard to the famous "suppressed speech." A vote was finally taken on the bill, resulting in its rejection by a vote of 34 to 30—less than a two-thirds vote. In the House of Representatives a bill was passed appropriating $90,000 for the relief of the Louisiana sufferers.

The European and North American Railroad bridge at Mattawamkeag, Maine, was destroyed by fire Tuesday.

But few new details are received in regard to the Louisiana flood. At last accounts the Mississippi was reported to be stationary and the Ouachita slowly falling.

A bill permitting the trial of "Speer's Travelling Sidewalk" in New York City has been passed by the Legislature at Albany, and is in the hands of the Governor. It is an elevated, endless platform, designed to move up one side of the city and down the other. Skeptics smile at the idea, but some persons believe in it.

A Yokohama letter of March 26, confirms the previously reported loss of the French Steamship Company's steamer Nile. She left Hong Kong, March 12, and on the 20th became disabled and was blown ashore on the coast of Idsu. It is believed that she had about 150 persons on board, of whom only four are known to be saved. The vessel is a complete loss.

State News.

The snow-storm which raged in the vicinity of Concord on Saturday night and Sunday is said to be without a parallel for the past half-century, with the exception of two storms in 1841.

Daniel Sargent, who was so frightfully injured last week by a blasting accident at the stone quarry in Milford, died on Sunday night of his injuries.

The Dartmouth College students serenaded ex-Senator Patterson at Hanover Saturday evening, and presented him with a handsome gold-headed cane.

The fall of snow at Gorham, during the recent snow storm is stated to have been fully eighteen inches—the heaviest fall of the winter.

Four men were fishing in the Ammonoosuc at Lisbon, a few days ago, when their boat was upset and James Brown was drowned, after two of his companions had been in the water two hours trying to save him.

A Plucky School-Ma'am.

A few days since there was an occurrence on the Harlem extension railroad which an exchange thinks worthy of recounting and which we think worthy of reproduction. About 9 in the morning, a serious collision —a collision between a girl and a train of cars—was avoided in a very singular and daring way. The girl is a school teacher and she was on her way to school. The train was from Chatham, on its way to Rutland. Both met on the trestlework near Brainard's station. The girl stood still, while the alarmed engineer whistled down brakes and managed to stop the train only when his engine was within ten feet of the obstruction. The trestle-work is thirty-six feet high and bears only one course of ties, and only one track. "What do you mean—do you want to be killed?" inquired the engineer. "No," said the girl; "I'm going to school." "Well, go back until the train crosses the trestle," said the engineer. "I can't," she replied; "I'm late now." "Step aside, then." And she stepped aside, outside the track and on the edge of the ties. But the space was too narrow; the engine's wheels could not clear her expanded skirts. Her next plan was to sit down, with her legs dangling between the ties: but thus the hoops spread all the wider. Provoking delay for the engineer; humiliating posture for the schoolmarm. "Hold on," said she, "I'll fix it!" and then gathering up her limbs and her skirts, she stretched herself at full length upon the outer edge of the ties, seized underneath with one hand the string-piece to which the rail is spiked and coolly bade the train pass on? In a moment the train moved over the prostrate form without jar or jolt; and the next instant the girl was on her feet, hastening towards her expectant pupils, before whom she was determined to be "on time" though she disarranged a dozen railroad time-tables.

—A Philadelphia youth was recently married to a girl who had refused him eighteen times. He wishes now he hadn't asked her but seventeen.

Animated Machinery.

Our bodies are like time-pieces. When they run down we must wind them up; otherwise they will stop forever. What key will best perform this work of renovation? Experience has shown that it can be accomplished more rapidly and certainly by a course of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters than by any other article under the sun. That searching yet harmless agent seems to reach every spring and lever, the wheel, so to speak, of the living machine. The relaxed nerves are braced, the torpid liver is stirred, the weak stomach is strengthened, the disordered bowels are regulated, the lost appetite is restored, the clouded mind is brightened—in short the whole inert system is stimulated into healthy action. New life is put into every fibre, and physical regeneration ensues. This is the testimony of thousands. In every city, town and village of the union living proofs of its efficacy may be found.

"Discretion is the better part of valor;" but all are not discreet. When attacked by diseases of the kidneys or urinary organs, take the great diuretic, HELMBOLD'S BUCHU. It is warranted. Beware of worthless imitations. The genuine may be known by the private propriety stamp of H. T. Helmbold, on each bottle. For sale by all druggists.

Don't Temporise with Piles.—Ointments, lotions, electuaries and all manner of quack nostrums are a waste of time and money. The only absolutely infallible cure for these painful diseases is ANAKESIS, discovered by DR. SLOSSER. It has been pronounced by scientific men as the happiest discovery made in medicine for 200 years, it affords instant relief from pain in the worst cases and has cured more than 20,000 sufferers permanently. All doctors prescribe it. Price $1.00. Sold by Druggists everywhere. Depot, 46 Walker st., New York.

Blessings brighten as they take their flight.—If you have a good head of hair take care of it; once gone and we realize its loss far more than we appreciate its presence. The BEARINE is taking the place of all other hair dressings, because it is healthful to the hair and delightful to use.

Don't be Discouraged. Suppose you have "tried fifty remedies" and received no benefit, is there therefore "no balm in Gilead?" Verily there is. Your liver may be congested, your stomach half paralyzed, your nerves quivering, your muscles knotted with torture, your bowels constricted, your lungs diseased, your blood full of impurities—yet in one week after commencing a course of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS you will feel like a new creature. a29 4w

SPRING OPENING

— OF —

Bonnets, Hats, Flowers and Ribbons.

The Largest Stock,
The Latest Styles,
The Lowest Prices.

The beauty of Henderson's opening is you are not obliged to turn your purse inside out, and pull out the bottom dollars to pay for a

NEW BONNET.

It is a well known fact that HENDERSON sells everything in the Millinery line full 25 per cent. less than any other house in the city, and the question is often asked "How can he do it?" We answer: First. We are not dependent on our Millinery trade alone for a living. We do an extensive business in DRY and FANCY GOODS, and our Millinery is sold with our other goods at a cotton clothing profit, so that you are not obliged to pay us the fancy prices charged by dealers doing an exclusively millinery business.

Second. Our business in STRAW GOODS having increased so enormously (our sales in the summer of 1873 being nearly three hundred cases of Bonnets and Hats, the largest retail trade in the State,) that we buy entirely of manufacturers, thus making a saving in this way alone of fifteen per cent., which goes to the benefit of our customers.

Third. We Trim Hats free of charge; you all know that this one item saves you half a dollar. We have opened a larger stock than ever before, and keep the finest as well as cheaper grades of goods.

Hats, not trimmed,

From One Cent to One Dollar.

Hats, trimmed,

From 50 cts. to $10.00.

And five dollar Trimmed Hats will compare favorably with any ten dollar one in the city.

TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1616 to '20; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore; Smith's antiquated work at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Gerrish's island, &c.

The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in its palmy days, the Light-House at its original height, and a lively sea view, at about 1820—a true picture of days when the white sail ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the embalmed canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a devoted son of old "Strawberry Bank," so called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.

Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-office.

Prof. Gunning's Lecture.

The last lecture (on Darwinism) in Prof. Gunning's regular course was given on Tuesday evening, to an audience which filled Mechanics' Hall, and was as interesting as any of the preceding ones. We give below a synopsis of the Professor's remarks:

Some one has said that in that in the vestibule of the temple of Knowledge there sits and will forever sit a veiled sphinx putting a question to every man who would enter. And they say that this question no man can answer, although every man must attempt it. The question is this: "Suns, earths, animals, men,—how were they created. How did things come to be?"

In early times man attempted to answer only in the language of imagination. A Hindoo seer gave answer in a single stanza,

"Creative thought and passion in a cup
The meditating Brahm once hurled,
And when the seething foam had all dried up
The sediment was this bright world."

A Hebrew seer answered in a hymn of creation which has passed into the literature of every civilized people on the globe. "In the beginning God created the Heavens and the earth. And God said let there be light. And God said let the waters bring forth." The language implies secondary causes to outwork the creative will.

If we attempt to freight these words with a meaning not in the writer's mind, then to the old answers, even as old as human thought, the sphinx returns the challenge of her silent, searching gaze. What would she say to this? "The Power which transcends nature and man's power of knowing, works by the same method on either side of nature, organic or inorganic."

There lives in Tasmania a creature more ravenous than the wolf, more ferocious than the shark, more pitiless than the tiger. It would seem as if some malignity had gathered up every hint of evil in tooth and talon and by one creative stroke had dramatised them. Whence came the Tasmanian devil? Did it not come as the cyclone comes, come as an incident to the outworking of forces good themselves and good in the sum of their results? The sphinx is the impersonation of religious mystery; she will heed no irreligion and no cant. Would she not say that this answer is congenial to the religious sentiment? But sentiment will pass for little. We must look at the question through the cold light which is in the eye of science.

The speaker described two tendencies manifested everywhere in nature,—a tendency to run on forever in the same rut, to repeat forever the parent in the offspring,—and the other, a tendency to get out of the rut and to make the offspring differ from the parent. He showed how man takes advantage of the last tendency, puts his will into nature and becomes a creator. From a wild weed by the sea side he has created the cabbage; from a wild grass, the wheat; from a wild crab, the apple. This is mind acting on nature. Have we evidence that any force akin to this which man brings into nature has been acting or is acting? The world is not big enough, the speaker said, for every thing that needs it. But for war, for pestilence, for intoxicating drinks, for patent medicines, for general stupidity to sweep man prematurely into the grave, in five hundred years the thirty-five millions who people this land of ours could overrun the whole terraqueous globe and plant four men and women on every square yard of its surface. The progeny of one cod fish in the same time would fill the Atlantic ocean. Everything that lives must struggle for the room and means to live. Life is the war of each upon all. The ultimate question, as Carlyle has put it, is, "can I kill you or can you kill me?" What would result from this struggle? The speaker showed that from the play of the two tendencies he had described, in the struggle for life, varieties would spring up and become permanent. Varieties are incipient species. In the north of England, within a few years, grouse and hares and rabbits are known to have changed in size and intelligence. Their enemies, the foxes, were hunted almost to extermination and as foxes faded out hares, grouse and rabbits went down. The war on foxes was abandoned and as foxes began again their ravages these little beasts and birds came up into greater strength and cunning. The more cunning the foxes the more cunning the rabbit. The more cunning the bulls of Wall street the more cunning must be the bears, and the law reaches from the bulls and bears of Wall street clear up to foxes and geese.

We have here a genuine creative force; Darwin called it natural selection; Spencer had called it survival of the fittest. It is not the only force; an animal changes with its environment.

The speaker supposed that the ponds on one of the islands off our coast were gradually drying up. What would become of the frogs? The frog begins life a tadpole in stagnant water; it must either perish or its reproductive system must be revolutionized. Now the island of Guadaloupe has no stagnant water, but it used to have, as the dried basins attest. A short time ago frogs were discovered on this island and they were found to produce their young, not as tadpoles but as little frogs. We cannot doubt that with the change of environment a complete revolution has been wrought in the nature of the frog. If doubt were possible a late discovery in Wyoming would dispel it. The speaker drew a gill-bearing reptile found by Marsh on the mountain slopes of Wyoming. It was brought to New Haven. The speaker drew another reptile differing from the first in the form of body, head, limbs and teeth,—differing radically from the first in having no gills but true lungs. The second was the first changed by a change of climate!

The speaker took the audience down through the rock systems of Wyoming and showed a record of physical changes immeasurably greater than those which availed to change triton into amblystom. He drew a series of extinct animals imbedded in these rocks ahd showed that their structure was such as to have led Marsh to give them names signifying their parentage of living species. The farther back we went through these ruins the more general was the animal, till, in illustration, an animal was drawn which was a link between fish and reptile and bird and mammal.

The form of the older and lower types was expressed in geometric curves were drawn, passing from the simplest to the complex, and then the curves were wrought into heads which made a series from frog to man. We could pass in form from animal to man by a shorter route. The speaker drew the face of a lion whose bronze image stands guard over the Rockingham. He erased from the mouth down and by a few lines converted the lion into a man.

What is the significance of these transitional forms and what the relationship between man and the animal? "Having merely brought this question into court we will let it rest for one week.

A supplementary lecture, still further illustrating the points touched upon in the last one, will be given at the same place next Tuesday evening.

Health and Hygiene.

Dr. W. W. Hebbard, who lectures on the above subjects, commencing next week, is a fluent and eloquent speaker, well known to the public and deeply learned in the subject which he treats of. He has a large array of manikins, models and skeletons with which to illustrate his lectures. The success attending his efforts in professional life may be seen in the thousands of letters from his patients in all parts of the country. He has been a zealous student and has stored a wonderful amount of knowledge in his life-time researches. Few have been more cordially welcomed and sustained by the public than Dr. Hebbard. He invests the dryest topics with interest, conveying the most important truths in an attractive and understandable form. There is a growing interest among our citizens to listen to his course of lectures. Ex-Mayor Shaw of Biddeford, after listening to Dr. Hebbard's lectures in that city, made him a present of a hundred dollar gold watch-chain.

Laconics.

Poetry, piety and poker were all drawn upon by the author of the last toast given at the Odd Fellows' celebration at Dover on Monday—"Woman: God made the diamond and all the other precious jewels, and then went one better and made woman."

The Senate has confirmed Edward A. Bragden collector of customs for the district of York, Me.

C. E. Myers & Co. advertise a large assortment of ready made clothing for men and boys; also a good line of suitings, which they will make up to order.

Mr. Barnabee is considering the feasibility of organizing an opera company for lyceum engagements next season.

The last dance of the season, at Kittery, will be given in Trefethens' Hall on the evening of Friday next, May 1st. Turner's Quadrille Band will furnish the music; dancing to commence at half-past 8 o'clock. Sleighs may be ordered for any hour after midnight—nobody ever wants to leave a Kittery dance before midnight.

Schooner Fannie A. Bailey, of this port, recently ashore at the entrance to Portland harbor and afterward got off and towed up to that city, has been purchased by parties at that place.

William Simes, Esq. was chosen treasurer of the Louisiana Relief Committee, Wednesday forenoon. Contributions may be sent to him or any member of the committee.

Kearsarge S.F. E. Co., No. 3, give a ball in aid of the Louisiana sufferers this evening at Congress Hall. Tickets $1.

C. C. Jackson, Esq., had a narrow escape from being crushed by the morning train from Dover, Wednesday, at the Eastern depot. While talking with a friend on the Portland track, he heard a train coming, and thinking it was the Portland train moved to the other track. The engineer of the Dover train pulled the whistle and by-standers shouted. Mr. Jackson had just time to jump from before the engine, and saved his life when others thought it impossible.

Sch. Mary J. Adams, Capt. Frisbee, went ashore in the gale Sunday, off Yarmouth, Mass. Steam tugs and wrecking parties went to her assistance, and hope to get her afloat.

—"And so they go," one of the late Portland School Committee is reported to have said; "our great men are fast departing—first Greeley, then Chase and now Sumner—and I don't feel very well myself."

—Pittsfield, Mass., has a sensible young man, who made his house all ready, furnished it throughout with everything requisite for domestic comfort and use, and then led the future mistress of it to the best man, was quietly married in it, and began housekeeping instanter.

ATTENTION.
Keep Cool! Keep Cool!
SUMMER is coming! I want a piece of ICE; where can I get it? Why, just send a boy to Purkins', No. 30 South St., and you are sure of it. The Subscriber, having purchased the entire interest of the Portsmouth Ice Co., would take this opportunity to thank his old customers for their past patronage, and would solicit the continuance of the same as well as that of the public generally. Situated as I am, with a large Ice House on Mt. Vernon St., I am prepared to deliver ICE out from pure spring water, in any part of the city, on the shortest possible notice. By strict attention to the wants of the public and by selecting honest and accommodating drivers, I mean to merit and hope to receive a large share of the public patronage. Special attention given to delivering ICE to the Sick. Orders from Fishermen promptly attended to.
N. B. Hoping all misdemeanors of drivers will be reported to the subscriber before other steps are taken, I promise that all complaints will receive immediate attention. ORDER SLATE at R. M. Clark's provision store,—or orders may be left with the subscriber at No. 30 South St., or sent through the post-office. dawtf GEORGE A. PERKINS.

PEYSER & KENNEDY,
The liberal settlement of the Eastern Railroad Company for our losses for Damage by Fire and Water at the East Boston Freight Depot, enables us to throw a few cases more of FINE WOOLENS, DOESKINS, DIAGONALS, MELTONS, KERSEYS, CASSIMERES, and SILK AND WOOL MIXTURES, into the market at a low appraisal. The price is marked in plain figures on each piece, and in comparison with the quality will be found to be
ASTONISHINGLY LOW!
Ask your friends and neighbors who have availed themselves of this GREAT CHANCE,
or come and see for yourselves after examining other stocks, that this is no fancy-dream or fiction, but a palpable fact, that you can buy CLOTH FOR GARMENTS of all qualities at so low a figure that EVERYBODY can afford to clothe themselves. Those of a limited means will find it a comfort to their children and themselves without exhausting their stumps. We lose no money by it, assisting others to PRACTICE ECONOMY these hard times. Every sensible Man, Woman and Boy will at once see that we can sell any of our READY-MADE
DRESS UP
Custom Clothing!
AT LOW PRICES, when we have had the chance to make them up of fine First-Class Materials at half price. This is so plain to everybody that it would be disparaging to the intelligence of our customers to argue the point. Our assortment of Gentlemen's Fine Garments,
Business Suits, and Garments Suitable for Mechanics, Laborers and Farmers is extensive and varied and made up to wear, and those who buy of us will get their money's worth.
We sell no Bankrupt Stock or shop-worn, old faded goods. We do not wish to stock the sensibilities of our customers with fancy tales of dire distress of some (let us hope imaginary) unfortunate traders and his losses. We do not take stock in it. Our Stock and Goods are
NEW, NICE, WELL-MADE AND TRIMMED,
Cost us less than expected, and we sell them so cheap that our customers are cheerful and pleased at our success in business. We make a specialty of
BOYS' AND YOUTHS' SUITS
and guarantee a good fit, at prices from 6 to 15 Dollars, a suit—Coat, Vest and Pant
Fine Linen Bosom Shirts,
custom made, at low prices, and a complete assortment of
UNDERSHIRTS AND DRAWERS, AND GENTS' FURNISHING GOODS.
We Cut and Trim Garments at reasonable charges for customers who make up their goods, and Make Garments to Order at the price of cloth and work.
☞ A serviceable SUIT OF CLOTHES—Coat, double-breasted Vest, and Pants,—FOR $6.00, good style and well made, at Does Advertising Pay?

There is no instance on record of a well sustained system of judicious advertising failing of success.

[Robert Bonner.]

"My success is owing to my liberality in advertising."

[Nicholas Longworth.]

"I advertised my productions and made money."

[Stephen Girard.]

"Constant and persistent advertising is a sure prelude to wealth.

[A. T. Stewart.]

"He who invests one dollar in business should invest one dollar in advertising that business."

[P. T. Barnum.]

"Without the aid of advertisements I could have done nothing in my speculations. I have the most complete faith in printer's ink. Advertising is the royal road to business.

[Amos Lawrence.]

"Advertising has furnished me with a competence."

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA- DEBILITY- DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form, its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters appertaining thereto. Copies of claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.
No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.
All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.
TESTIMONIALS.
"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."
"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent-Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."
"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability as his past labors may be recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA,
FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.
This compound of the vegetable alteratives, Sarsaparilla, Dock, Stillingia and Mandrake, with iodides of Potassium and Iron makes a most effectual cure of a series of complaints which are very prevalent and obstinate. It purifies the blood, purges out the lurking humors in the system that undermine health and settle into troublesome disorders. Eruptions of the skin are the appearance on the surface of humors that should be expelled from the blood. Internal derangements are the determination of these same humors to some internal organ, or organs, whose action they derange, and whose substance they disease and destroy. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA expels these humors from the blood. When they are gone, the disorders they produce disappear, such as Ulcerations of the Liver, Stomach, Kidney, Lungs, Eruptions and Eruptive Diseases of the Skin, St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Ulcers and Sores, Rheumatism and Neuralgia, Pain in the Bones, Side and Head, Female Weakness, Sterility, Leucorrhœa arising from internal ulceration and uterine disease, Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Emaciation and General Debility. With their departure, health returns.

EPISCOPACY vs. PURITANISM.

Rev. James DeNormandie's Historical Sketches. No. 7.

[Concluded from yesterday.]

Music, in these early days as in the latter, was deemed a necessary part of worship, and had its attendant criticisms and disaffections. The custom was from the earliest days to deacon the hymns, the precentor or leader of psalmody reading the lines and all singing them, and so on to the end; but the singers wanted to break up the old habit of "lining" or "deaconing," and to have it all their own way. At Stratham the matter was settled by a compromise, the deacon, by vote of the town, to read half the time; but still he complained of the bass viol, saying, "They have got a fiddle in the church as big as a hog's trough;" while at Londonderry the preceutor and choir both kept on at the same time, one reading and the other singing, until the latter gained the victory and sang the reader down.

The observance of Sunday was strict and general, but hedged round by so minute and constant commands of the law, that it is questionable if its true, helpful keeping was ever so great as now. Those were good times for dull ministers, when every seat in the church was filled, without regard to weather or the difficulty of travelling, by the terror of the magistrate more than the fear or the love of the Lord, and they were serious times for such as some of you who would forsake the sanctuary for a walk or drive to the beach, or a sail to the Shoals, or the enjoyment of a cigar.

In October, 1668, the court ordered "that whatever person in that jurisdiction shall travel upon the Lord's day, either on horseback or on foote, or by boats from or out of their owne toune, to any unlawful assembly or meeting not allowed by law, are hereby declared to be propharners of the Sabbath and shall be proceeded against as the persons that prophane the Lord's day by doing servile worke."

In 1682 it was enacted "For prevention of the prophanation of the Lord's day, that whoever shall on the Lord's day be found to do unnecessary servile labor, travel, sports, or frequent ordinaries in time of public worship or idly straggle abroad, the person so offending shall pay a fine of ten shillings or be sat in the stocks an hour; and for discovery of such persons it is ordered that the constable with some other meet person whom he shall choose, shall in the time of public worship go forth to any suspected place within their precincts to find out any offender as above."

The rigid observance of Sunday came down to quite a late date. In the life of Jeremiah Mason, formerly of this city, we find the following anecdote: While living in Connecticut he was returning from college one vacation; he stopped over night by reason of a storm, pursuing his journey on Sunday morning. He had just passed a small meeting house, near meeting time, when he was accosted by a quiet-looking little man on a small nag, who said, "Are you travelling on the Lord's Day?" I told him my errand. He said he was a justice and it was his duty to stop me, and see that I went to meeting all day, and after sunset I might proceed. I told him I could not and would not stop. He said it was his duty to stop me. "How will you do it?" At this he drew his horse across the road and left no room fer me to pass. With that I wheeled my horse about, and rode back some paces and then faced him. He said "What do you mean to do?" "To come on," said Mason, meaning to take a flying leap over him. The justice said, "If you can promise me to go to meeting this afternoon, and can also solemnly say you think it is your duty to go on, I will allow you to pass." Telling him I never doubted it was my duty, I proceeded.

The restrictions of the Bay Colony, which of course all came in force here, were exceedingly severe and minute. It was ordered "to the end and the Sabbath may bee celebrated in a religious manner, that all that inhabite the plantation, both for the general and particular improvements, may surcease their labor every Saturday throughout the year at three of the clock in the afternoon, and that they spend the rest of the day in catechizing and preparacon for the Sabbath as the minister shall direct."

Whoever neglected to attend worship on Sabbath, Fast or Thanksgiving without sufficient cause was fined five shillings. For Fast, especially, this law would at the present time be a source of goodly income to the city treasury. If profanation of the Lord's day was done proudly and with a high hand against the authority of God, it was to be punished with death.

There is a record of an agreement with some Indians, who came under the jurisdiction of Massachusetts in 1664, wherein the following conversation takes place "Will you worship the only true God, who made heaven and earth, and not blaspheme?" "We do desire to reverence the God of the English and to speak well of him, because we do see he doeth better to the English than other gods do to others." "Will you refrain from working on the Sabbath?" "It is easy to us; we have not much to do any day, and we can well rest on that day." In 1680 it was ordered that a man be whipped for shooting at fowl on the Sabbath day. Those were fortunate days for the clergy, when any disrespect to them or to the officers was a matter of legal punishment; although a clergyman deserving respect, never had so much, if not enforced at least real, as at the present time. In 1682 it was enacted that "whosoever shall behave himself contemptously towards the word of God preached, or any minister thereof called, and faithfully dispensing the same in any congregation, either by manifest interrupting of him in his ministerial dispensations, or publicly charging him with teaching error, such offender shall pay a fine of £20, or sit two hours in the stocks." There is a story on record of a minister in Bedford, this State, who had a neighbor, with whom he was not on the best terms. One Saturday they came to sharp talk about their fences and cattle, which was heard by others who predicted the neighbor would not be seen any more at church, but the next Sunday he was punctually there. After dinner they said, "We thought you would not be at meeting to-day, after such a quarrel yesterday with the minister." "I'd have ye to know, I'd have ye to know," was the reply, "if I did quarrel with my neighbor yesterday, I did not quarrel with the gospel."

Games, sports of all kinds, at all times, met with little favor, but on Sunday particularly with the severest censure. It was one of the matters by which the Puritans were particularly distressed that King James permitted and encouraged dancing, archery, May games and May poles and any harmless recreation on Sundays after divine service. When a May pole was set up at a plantation afterwards called Braintree, in 1626, it was a serious annoyance to the settlers at New Plymouth, who called it "an iddle"—yea, they called it the "calfe of Horeb," and stood at defiance with the place, naming it Mount Dagon, threatening to make it a woful mount, and not a merry mount, and in 1628, Endicott causes the May pole to be cut down and rebukes them for their profaneness.

In 1631 the court orders all who have cards and dice in their houses to destroy them before the next session. In a proclamation of King Charles, in 1633, besides permission for these sports it is ordered that "women shall have leave to carry rushes to the church for decorating it, according to their old custom." It is only within very recent years that any flowers and decorations, and the observance of any days were permitted in the churches of the Puritan descendants, and these are still, by many, regarded with fear and trembling.

Even as early as 1638 some of the colonists began to be alarmed about the degeneracy in matters of religion, and a fast was observed by reason of prevalence of smallpox and fevers, and decay of religion in the churches, which was ascribed to the spread of Mrs. Hutchinson's views. In 1634 there was a discussion, at a lecture in Boston, about women's wearing veils. Cotton took the ground that, whenever such a custom is not indicative of female subjection, it does not come under apostolic command. Endicott took the other side, and in 1634 various regulations were passed against costly dress and compliance with unstable fashions, tending to injure the Commonwealth.

The settlement at Plymouth seems to have had greater privations in some respects than that of the Piscataqua,—for in 1623, in a state of famine, as described by Governor Winslow, when he had seen men stagger from faintness for want of food, Captain Miles Standish was sent here for food, where he was hospitably received and amply supplied, and in 1631, the very day before an appointed fast was to be observed a ship bearing provisions came in, and the fast was changed; days whose religious observance had then some meaning. "In the absence of bread they feasted themselves with fish. The women, once a day as the tide gave way, resorted to the mussell and clam banks, where they daily gathered their families' food, with much heavenly discourse of the provision Christ had formerly made for many thousands of his followers in the wilderness."

We have, however, abundant evidence from the correspondence between Mason and his agents here, that our own settlement was at times in great straits for provisions, and shared the privations which are the attendant of almost all early colonies. Separated from the friends and comforts of an old land, in dread of savage attacks, and doubtful about the bread of to-morrow, we cannot enter into their hardships while we enjoy the fruits of their sacrifices.

The cost of living and the pay of labor seem to our rates exceedingly trifling—for we find an agreement between an innkeeper and the deputies of the General Court, by which they were provided with breakfast, dinner and supper, with wine and beer between meals, with fire and beds, at the rate of three shillings per day, but such as only desire to pay for dinner with wine and beer betwixt meals; and by wine is intended a cup each man at dinner and supper and no more—but where would one get the three shillings or the eighteen pence?

Marriage, when it was celebrated, a rare event in the early settlement, was performed by a magistrate or by persons specially appointed for that purpose. Governor Hutchinson, in the "History of Massachusetts," says he believes there was no instance of marriage by a clergyman during their first charter. Gibbens writing to Mason says "a good husband with his wife to tend the cattle and to make butter and cheese will be profitable—for maids they are soone gonne in this countrie."

In 1680 there was set forth a code of Province Laws by the General Assembly in Portsmouth, wherein, as in the Bay Colony many of the Mosaic laws, especially those against sensuality, are reproduced in their severity; the one against witchcraft, as we shall see, was little needed in our settlement.

Here are two showing the relation of parents and children: "If any child or children above sixteen years old, shall curse or smite their natural father or mother, he or they shall be put to death, unless it can be sufficiently testified that the parents have been very unchristianly negligent of ye education of such children," etc.

"If any man have a rebellious or stubborn son of sufficient years and understanding, viz., sixteen years of age or upwards, which shall not obey ye voyce of his father and ye voyce of his mother, yet when they have chastened him will not hearken unto them, etc., such son shall be put to death, or otherwise severely punished." There is a law which severely punishes every one "who shall wittingly or willingly make or publish any lie which may be tending to ye damage or hurt of any particular person or with intent to deceive or abuse the people with false news or reports."

"For preventing deceit in trade ye all men may be on a certainty in matters of contracts and bargains, it is ordered that all contracts, agreements or covenants for any specia whatsoever shall be paid in the same specia bargained for, any law, usage or customs to the contrary notwithstanding"—and yet so wise have some of our legislators grown by two centuries, they have to maintain that deceit in trade is the best thing, and that certainty in matters of business or trade is the worst thing for a nation.

Thus I have tried to set before you some of the customs and laws which reveal the condition of our early settlers. Grown to a populous community, and with the lapse of many years, these customs of society and worship have all been changed; the sumptuary laws and the strict laws for the surveillance of individuals, the inspection of homes and punishment of profanity, or intemperance, or sensuality, or the breaking of the Sabbath, have become dead letters; but society endures; worship knows no failure, and schemes of reform of every kind fill the air, and enlist the prayers and sacrifices of all good wishers to humanity; and the dishonesties of trade, the sins of impiety, the decline of interests in religion, are common complaints and common fears. The severe oversight possible in a small colony is laid aside in a thickly settled neighborhood, where, even with the deepest sympathies or interests, one hardly knows the person living next him. The causes of danger or suffering of that early day have passed away with the resources of our vast land, extending through all zones, and the idea of individual opportunity of personal liberty and religious freedom, with which these colonies began, has widened beyond all conception of that day, and into a license which is big with dangers. No law of the State compels us to worship or marks the boundaries of virtue's path. It is all left to the individual conscience. A divine idea—we, Americans, are wont to boast,—and leading to divine things, when rightly received, rightly interpreted, and rightly understood. If each one of our society to-day uses his liberty for the best things, we are doubtless better off than when our ancestors were hedged about by so manifold restrictions; but if he does not, are not?

Louis Riel.

This now historical personage was educated at an ecclesiastical college of lower Canada, and has enjoyed the confidence of the hierarchy throughout. He was chosen by the bishop of St. Boniface, Red River, to set up a provisional government and prevent the Dominion of Canada from taking possession of the northwest territory. All the claims of the Church of Rome were complied with, such as large tracts of land for herself and the French half-breeds, over whom she possesses almost unlimited control, together with stipulations for schools and half education fund, and an arrangement which would give her representation in the local legislation based upon her own enumeration of the nomadic half-breeds, whether present or absent, alive or dead.

Riel did his part of the drama well. He chased out of the country the Dominion governor and Dominion surveyors, and sent ambassadors to treat with the Dominion government, which, being ruled by French Canadians, was ready enough to concede all such demands. While the farce of treating with Riel's ambassadors was going on in Ottawa, he was so far left to himself as to shoot, under the pretended forms of a court martial, a bold, outspoken Orange-man from Ontario, whom he had confined in irons for some time. The only excuse for this cold-blooded and atrociously-cruel murder, was to show the government at Ottawa that he was in earnest, and to frighten all other opponents in the Red River country into submission. This murder fired the Protestant heart of Ontario and all Canada, and though the Roman Catholics, and especially the French Canadians, justified and defended Riel, and insisted upon an amnesty in his behalf, the government durst never go any further in this line than to paralyze all efforts to bring him to justice. The new administration of Canada has the same difficulty—its French Canadian supporters all insisting upon amnesty for Reil, and its Protestant supporters insisting upon the law taking its course. The latter, with common sense and justice on their side, have carried the day, and, for the first time in the history of the Dominion, the Roman Catholic bishops have been unable to protect their protege. Riel has just been expelled as a fugitive from the House of Commons, to which he was elected by a French Roman Catholic half-breed constituency, under the shadow of the bishop's palace in Manitoba.

The trouble with him is, however, not yet over. He is likely to turn up again and again to claim the protection of the priests, with whose secret policy he is too well acquainted, and if he is arrested and tried, superhuman efforts will be made to clear him or to get him pardoned. He is, therefore, likely to be a skeleton in the closet of the present Dominion administration, as he was of the last.

Washington Correspondence.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 24.

I promised you some statistical information regarding the public improvements going on at the Capital of the Nation. Before doing so, however, I propose devoting one letter to considering the remote and approximate causes leading to this display of municipal and national spirit. To me the subject is one of great and increasing interest. My knowledge of the other great Capitals of the world is derived only from history and general reading; but these sources are not inadequate to enable one of ordinary intelligence to judge the relative position they bear to each other, and each in its turn to our own. That Washington has not in the past assumed the position its founder, confidently anticipated and amply planed for, is plain to all careful readers of our history. That it is the intention of her citizens at the present time, as well as of Congress, to atone for the past is equally evident. All honor to the noble spirit. As true sons of the Republic,—founded, reared and finally established through the best blood of her children,—we as a people, have not been wanting in a feeling of pride in our national Capital. But this feeling heretofore has been one of just and ennobling pride in a name and in an idea, rather than in anything real and substantial which the mind could grasp. Washington, dissociated from our thoughts of him in whose honor it was named, has suggested to us,—not a great city, but a great marble Capitol, massive public buildings, and "magnificent distances," and since the war, in particular, the existence and embodyment of a mighty power for good or evil.

It is hardly to be wondered at that the spirit of Eastern thrift and neatness, or Western activity and enterprise, when cities grow up as it were in a night, should make it the fashion to decry Washington. The slowness of growth that necessitated a half-century of time to gather a population of 50,000 at the national Capital has ever been a mysterious problem to Boston, to New York and Brooklyn, and to those mighty cities of the West, Chicago and St. Louis. Every visitor has said his worst of the city. Correspondents vied with each other in writing it down, while every bad thing in and about it was described in exaggerated outline and heightened color, inducing people generally to think that the city, considered as our representative city, was a disgrace to the nation, and ought to be abated as a nuisance.

The results of the war have changed all this. The disappearance of slavery, the infusion of Northern culture and Western enterprise, the prospective development of Southern resources, the increasing power and influence of the General Government, have had a marked effect on the Capital, and to-day it is pressing forward with gigantic strides towards the realization of the plans and visions of its founders.

Before looking into this question from a personal stand point, I had become somewhat imbued with the common feeling of indignation against the Board of Public Works here in Washington, of which (by virtue of his office) Gov. Shepard is chairman. The general belief throughout the country,—thanks to the demagogism of the opposition press,—is that this Board is made up of a party of plunderers whose hands are wrist deep into the national treasury, and who, leech-like, are holding on to the last. Such is not my belief now. That there may be minor instances of fraud in letting and sub-letting the hundreds of contracts incident to these vast improvements I cannot deny; there always have been, and always will be, frauds in expending large sums of money for public improvements; but that these breaches of trust can in any way be traced to the connivance of the administration officers, to the Board in general or Gov. Shepard, the evidence thus far has entirely failed to develope. Neither, as is generally supposed, is this expenditure of millions for beautifying the national Capital dependent upon an act of Congress, or the means derived mainly from the national treasury. That it was the intention of the early fathers to make the city of Washington the "only child of the Republic," whose ultimate greatness and grandeur was to depend solely upon the Government, there can be no doubt in the mind of any one who will look into the published correspondence and early legislation pointing to the location of a fixed national Capital. I hope to make this plain to your readers.

Previous to the year 1800 Congress was practically on wheels, and had held its sessions at Philadelphia, Baltimore, York, Princeton, Annapolis, Trenton and New York city. In October, 1874, after full debate, Congress, sitting then at Trenton, passed an ordinance creating a commission, with full power to lay out a district on the Dekeware river for the Federal city. The ordinance and the debate form an important link in the history of the location of the Capital, and illustrate the enlarged views thus early entertained, and which were subsequently carried out in the final location of the Capital on the Potomac river. The act for establishing a permanent seat of Government was approved July 16, 1790, and authorized the President to appoint three commissioners, who should under his direction have power

To purchase or accept such quantities of land * * as the President shall deem proper for the use of the United States, and according to such plans as the President shall approve, and also to provide suitable buildings for the accommodation of Congress, for the President, etc., etc., the same to be in readiness by the first Monday of December, 1800.

The language, as well as the spirit, shows clearly that the city was founded for the use of the United States. Its plan was to be formed by the United States Commissioner, and approved by the President, no interests being consulted except those of the United States; while its location in the midst of a virgin forest, taken in connection with the nature of the plan finally adopted, indicate beyond a doubt that it was to be literally the creation of the Government.

On the 29 of June, 1791, the limits of the city being fixed upon, the deed of conveyance by the original proprietors of the soil was executed; and in December, 1791, the plan of the city of Washington, as drafted by Major L'Enfant (a French architect) and Major Ellicott, and agreed upon by the commission, was submitted by our first President to Congress. This original plan is now on file in the office of Public Buildings and Grounds, and can, through the aid of a little influence, be examined by visitors to the city. I wish I could convey to your readers some adequate idea of the grandeur of this plan, and the imposing intention of its maker. Everywhere in it, the evidence is overwhelming that but one purpose animated the founders of the Capital, which was to make it a magnificent metropolis, and (as is equally apparent) at the Federal expense. The explanatory observation of the plan, besides making provision for the noble avenues and streets that now divide and intersect the city in a masterly manner, arranged and amply provided (through the sale of public lots) for the erection of grand and imposing edifices, public squares and parks in great abundance, magnificent fountains, equestrian statues, "A historic column (a mile from the 'Federal House,')" "A naval itinerary column, to stand as a ready monument to consecrate the progress and achievements of the Navy;" a national church "for public prayers, thanksgivings, funeral orations, etc., assigned to the special use of no particular sect or denomination, but equally open to all; and to be a proper shelter for such monuments as were voted by the late Continental Congress for those heroes who fell in the cause of liberty, and for such others as shall afterwards be decreed by the voice of a grateful nation,"—in short, to be the "Westminster Abby" of America. This spot is now occupied by the Patent Office. In addition to these, there were plans for a "grand cascade formed by the water from the source of the Tiber,"—this was to be at the base of the Capitol; "a grand avenue 400 feet in breadth and about a mile in length, bordered with gardens, ending in a slope from the houses on each side;" "a well-improved field to be known as the President's Park;" as well as noble provision for "spacious houses and gardens, such as may accommodate foreign ministers," etc. In concluding this letter let me present an extract from the Philadelphia Herald of the 4th of January, 1795:

"The Federal city, situated in the centre of the United States, in a temple erected to liberty, and towards this edifice will the wishes and expectation of all true friends of every country, be necessarily directed. The city of Washington, considered under such important points of view, could not be calculated on a small scale. Its extent, the disposition of its avenues and public squares should all correspond with the magnitude of the object for which it was intended, and we need only cast our eyes upon the situation and plan of the city to recognize in them the comprehensive genius of the President, (Gen. Washington) to whom the direction of the business has been committed by Congress." SMILAX.

The receipts of internal revenue for April will exceed those of last year by half a million. Thus far the falling off due to the panic has been to a considerable extent regained, and if the receipts for May and June are kept up to those of last year the full estimates by the committee of $100,000,000 for the year will be reached.

On the Indian appropriation bill Wednesday Speaker Blaine called Mr. Rainey from South Carolina to the chair in committee of the whole. This is the first time in the history of the government that a colored man has occupied the speaker's chair in the house of representatives. With a colored man in the chair a number of white members on the floor were speaking in favor of civil rights for Indians.

There seems to be much doubt whether the senate finance committee will report any compromise currency bill, and both sides are disposed to think that the chance of securing anything, beyond the withdrawing of $25,000,000 from the East, are very slight.

State News.

Manchester has raised $1000 for the Louisiana sufferers.

The candidates for admission to the New Hampshire conference of Methodist ministers in session at Manchester, were each asked if they used tobacco, and all gave a negative answer.

Henry L. Webb of Manchester, a student at Dartmouth College, fractured his leg on Saturday last, while playing foot ball.

The prospect of constructing the Exeter and Salisbury railroad, which, till recently, looked hopeful, has now a poor aspect, and will probably be given up entirely. Recently, the towns of Exeter, Epping and Kensington, have refused to aid the road by town loans, and it is not to be expected that individual subscriptions alone will be adequate to build the road.

Edward White, a Manchester lad, was accidentally shot in the forehead on Tuesday, but the motive power behind the ball was fortunately not sufficiently great to impel it through the skull. And the boy was not much hurt.

Animated Machinery.

Our bodies are like time-pieces. When they run down we must wind them up; otherwise they will stop forever. What key will best perform this work of renovation? Experience has shown that it can be accomplished more rapidly and certainly by a course of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters than by any other article under the sun. That searching yet harmless agent seems to reach every spring and lever, the wheel, so to speak, of the living machine. The relaxed nerves are braced, the torbid liver is stirred, the weak stomach is strengthened, the disordered bowels are regulated, the lost appetite is restored, the clouded mind is brightened—in short the whole inert system is stimulated into healthy action. New life is put into every fibre, and physical regeneration ensues. This is the testimony of thousands. In every city, town and village of the union living proofs of its efficacy may be found.

"Discretion is the better part of valor;" but all are not discreet. When attacked by diseases of the kidneys or urinary organs, take the great diuretic, HELMBOLD'S BUCHU. It is warranted. Beware of worthless imitations. The genuine may be known by the private propriety stamp of H. T. Helmbold, on each bottle. For sale by all druggists.

Don't Temporize with Piles.—Ointments, lotions, electuaries and all manner of quack nostrums are a waste of time and money. The only absolutely infallible cure for these painful diseases is ANAKESIS, discovered by DR. SILSBEE. It has been pronounced by scientific men as the happiest discovery made in medicine for 200 years, it affords immediate relief from pain in the worst cases and has cured more than 20,000 sufferers permanently. All doctors prescribe it. Price $1.00. Sold by Druggists everywhere. Depot, 40 Walker st., New York.

Blessings brighten as they take their flight.—If you have a good head of hair take care of it; once gone and we realize its loss far more than we appreciate its presence. The REAHINE is taking the place of all other hair dressings, because it is healthful to the hair and delightful to use.

Don't be Discouraged. Suppose you have "tried fifty remedies" and received no benefit, is there therefore "no balm in Gilead?" Verily there is. Your liver may be congested, your stomach half paralyzed, your nerves quivering, your muscles knotted with torture, your bowels constricted, your lungs diseased, your blood full of impurities—yet in one week after commencing a course of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS you will feel like a new creature. e29 4w

SUFFERERS from Scrofula and Scrofulous affections, clean up! Why wear your Pimples, Blotches, Ulcers, Sores? Why have your life twisted out of you by Dyspepsia, Rheumatism and Gout? Why suffer Syphilitic and Mercurial diseases to rot the bones in your body, or the flesh off your bones? Why let your sluggish blood drag, and scatter its distempers through your veins? AYER'S COMP. EXT OF SARSAPARILLA cures these complaints, and cleanses them out of the system. Use it faithfully, and you bring to society a healthier, cleaner, and far more acceptable member.—[Democrat, Baltimore, Md.]

DR. HEBBARD,

Professor of Physiology, Surgery, Hygiene, materia medica, author of various works, etc., etc., nothing need be said to the citizens of Portsmouth. His deep, high and broad teachings on the most important themes that can be discussed, his stirring appeals, his sweeping witticisms and "hits" and side-splitting stories which keep his hearers spell-bound and often convulsed with laughter, are well known everywhere.

TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1616 to '20; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore; Smith's antiquated kark at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Gerrish's island, &c.

The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in its palmy days, the Light-House at its original height, and a lively sea view, at about 1830—a true picture of days when the white sail ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the embalmed canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a devoted son of old "Strawberry Bank," so called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.

Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-office.

ANNOUNCE THEIR

SPRING OPENING

—OF—

Bonnets, Hats, Flowers and Ribbons.

The Largest Stock,
The Latest Styles,
The Lowest Prices.

The beauty of Henderson's opening is you are not obliged to turn your purse inside out, and pull out the bottom dollars to pay for a

NEW BONNET.

It is a well known fact that HENDERSON sells everything in the Millinery line full 25 per cent. less than any other house in the city, and the question is often asked "How can he do it?" We answer:

First. We are not dependent on our Millinery trade alone for a living. We do our entire business in DRY and FANCY GOODS, and our Millinery is sold with our other goods at a cotton cloth profit, so that you are not obliged to pay us the fancy prices charged by dealers doing an exclusively millinery business.

Second. Our business in STRAW GOODS having increased so enormously (our sales in the summer of 1873 being nearly three hundred cases of Bonnets and Hats, the largest retail trade in the State,) that we buy entirely of manufacturers, thus making a saving in this way alone of fifteen per cent., which goes to the benefit of our customers.

Third. We Trim Hats free of charge; you all know that this one item saves you half a dollar. We have opened a larger stock than ever before, and keep the finest as well as cheaper grades of goods.

Hats, not trimmed,

From One Cent to One Dollar.

Hats, trimmed,

From 50 cts. to $10.00.

And five dollar Trimmed Hats will compare favorably with any ten dollar one in the city.

SASH RIBBONS	25 cents per yard.
SILK TIES	10 cents each.
FRAMES	15 cents each.

Presto, Change!

Before the election, some folks professed to fear that our present Mayor would squander all the public funds. Now, forsooth, the same parties are crying out that he is too mean of them. What a change is there, my countrymen!

And in reference to the pauper discussion,—how modest in those who condemn, without examining, the action of the Overseers, to assume that they themselves have more knowledge, greater discretion or larger humanity than that Board.

JUSTICE.

Dr. Hebbard's Lectures.

The greatest study of mankind is man, and Dr. Hebbard's coming lectures contain the essence of twenty-five years or more of study and practice. The Doctor is a philanthropist and devotes these lectures to the education and advancement of the people, and the expense of the course is placed at so reasonable a rate as to be within the reach of all. He makes the subjects of which he treats, plain and comprehensible to even the unlearned hearers, giving the truths of physiology and medical science in plain language. There is no subject of greater importance to mankind than the study of the human frame, the laws of health and life. We hope to see ladies and gentlemen attending in large numbers, feeling confident they will be well repaid for their trouble. The Doctor has rare gifts and entertainments, and during his last series of lectures here, in 1868, created quite a sensation. He is a direct and forcible speaker, and makes many pungent points in a logical way, his good humor and happy illustrations inviting the respect of his audiences.

The Genealogical Society of New York has lately requested of Dr. Hebbard the permission of placing his name and portrait in their book entitled The Representative Men of Boston; and Austin College has complimented him with the honorary degree of LL. D.

Rubbish.

BOSTON, April 29.

Eds. Portsmouth Chronicle: The Journal says: A reprehensible custom is that of some store clerks, sweeping waste paper into the streets. Better burn your rubbish.

I am opposed to burning the old rubbish. I well remember at the age of eight years I was sent to the Spring Market in the morning, before school, for a lobster. On my way down Market street I noticed a heap of old rubbish, evidently just swept from one of the stores, and giving it a kick, a five dollar note on the Rockingham Bank came to light. When safely deposited in my pocket, I remember the first thought that was suggested to my mind,—"to whom does this money belong? Either to Dr. Kimball, Hill & Carr, or Jones & Son" —as it seemed to me they did all of the business and had all of the money in those days,—or it might be possible that it was some of the funds used for electioneering purposes the day previous, as I remember hearing father say that Esquire Jenness was chosen Moderator and he helped to elect him, adding that he left the stage at Newburyport in the hands of an extra to proceed to Boston, returning to town just in time (to the great surprise of the Whig drivers) and deposited his vote, he receiving three hearty cheers as he entered old Jefferson Hall.

There seemed to be a heavy weight of responsibility resting upon me, as five dollars to my mind was a big thing at that time; it felt heavy, as I was confident it was real money; I looked up first at one sign and then at the other, and finally concluded not to say anything about it, for if I did they might all speak at once and there would not be much left for me. So I hurried up on the lobster business, returned home and presented the five dollars to my mother, who said "you are a good boy, Albert; I shall send you to market for another lobster to-morrow." Boys; give the old rubbish a kick, is the advice of a RETIRED PORTSMOUTH BOY.

"La Tentation."

Wilkinson's company gave a very good representation of the drama the name of which heads this article, to quite a large audience which assembled at the Temple in spite of the storm, Wednesday evening. "La Tentation" is a triflingly different drama from "Led Astray," which has had long runs in Boston and New York the past winter. As played by the Wilkinson company, the plot is not quite as clear as it should be and the characters assume other names. One conversant with the play as performed in the large cities misses in "La Tentation" the only scene which makes "Dumesnil" endurable as "Major O'Hara." Mr. Walter Kelley as the easy going husband showed some exceedingly good acting, resembling in many respects that of Mr. Barron at the Boston Museum, falling short of it, however, in many effects. The duel scene was marred and lacked impressiveness from the failure of the pistol to discharge. Dollie Bidwell's assumption of "Camille" was a praiseworthy performance, showing more vigor and being less lackadaisical than Anne Clarke's "Armande." Mr. Harris' "Trevelyan" was a near approach to Mr. Crisp's author of "Astray," and was very creditable. Rees Davies played Achille, the same character under another name assumed by Stuart Robson in New York and William Warren in Boston. Robson's rendition is said to have been perfect, which can hardly seem possible, while Warren seemed as much out of place in it as a "comic singer," although he showed great tact in many portions. Mr. Davies played the part as acceptably as the circumstances could warrant, and Lillie Wilkinson personated the frivolous, thoughtless daughter of the sport-loving "Gontran" and the romantic, melancholy "Camille," in a very taking manner. The play of "La Tentation" is well worth seeing, and we give Mr. Wilkinson credit for putting it on the stage better than any of the companies now travelling.

Laconics.

Thursday was a damp, cold day.

Get your mittens and rubbers and go Maying. The trailing arbutus awaits the courageous individual who dares pluck it.

Mayor Miller has telegraphed to Hon. Peter Marcy of New Orleans, to draw on Hon. Wm. Simes, treasurer of the Louisiana Relief Committee, for $1000. It is hoped and expected the subscription will be doubled, or even more increased than that.

There is to be a "May Ball" at Kittery this evening, in Trefethen's Hall. At intermission the dancers will indulge in a game of snow ball. Turner's Quadrille Band will make the music.

The masquerade given by the Knights of Pythias at Congress Hall on the evening of April 29th was well attended, and great care having been exercised in the sale of tickets the company was unexceptionable. The music (by Turner's Band) was good enough for anybody to dance to, and the party enjoyed a general good time. None but masqueraders were allowed to join in the grand march, or the dances which preceded the general unmasking, which was all right and proper, and was readily acquiesced in by those of the company who were not masked. Another judicious arrangement was the having but three dances before unmasking, dancing in a mask being rather too hot to be kept up very long.

A thermometer exposed to the wind near Pearson's hot house on Broad street showed a temperature of twenty-six degrees above zero (six degrees below the freezing point) on Thursday morning at six o'clock. Not bad for the last day of April; but it is not the best this part of the country can do in the cold weather line, for we are informed that Mr. Acanthus Young of this city some years since had his hands badly frozen while helping pull a boat across the river to the navy yard, on the morning of the first day of May.

The Wolfeboro News has the following: "It is said that apple trees on the sea coast are never attacked by borers, and the reason is said to be that they do not relish the salt air and sea-weed manure. Will some of our Rockingham friends tell us if these things be so?" We do not know exactly now far from the sea-beach an apple tree must be to be off the "sea coast;" but we know that borers do most unpleasantly abound not far from salt water, for in our younger days we dug plenty of them from trees not half a mile from the Piscataqua, in orchards freely dressed with seaweed from Rye Beach. And a friend who once owned a farm at Sagamore Creek, within a half-mile of the ocean, says his trees were badly infested with borers. So we guess the statement that borers never attack trees on the sea shore is a romance.

Charles Main, Esq., is at home on a flying visit after two years' absence in California, and is looking as if the world used him nicely. Mr. and Mrs. Main leave for Europe in a few days in steamer Scotia.

There is to be a good, old-fashioned school exhibition at the Rye Town Hall on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, May 5th and 6th, in which all the schools in town will take part,—the whole to be under the management of the Supt. School Committee, Mr. G. H. Jenness.

THE NEW ENGLAND MONTHLY, a sixteen page magazine, has made its appearance. The reading matter is varied and interesting and is sufficiently attractive to make the magazine a welcome visitor in every home. The price is only 50 cents a year, and every subscriber receives a beautiful pair of chromos, "Awake and Asleep," which are far superior to the majority of premiums offered by higher priced publications. Agents are wanted to canvass for the magazine in every town, to whom cash commissions will be paid. Address NEW ENGLAND MONTHLY, Concord, N. H.

HON. JOHN P. HALE.

Funeral Ceremonies and Memorial Services

ON THE OCCASION OF THE DEATH OF

Hon. John P. Hale.

By Rev. Thomas W. Brown, of Dover:

IN MEMORIAM.

A Discourse commemorative of the Character & Career of HON. JOHN PARKER HALE. By Rev. George B. Spaulding, of Dover.

For Sale by Joseph H. Foster.

Portsmouth Chronicle.

—Wild coffee bushes are plentiful in Amador and other counties of California. The berries are known to the settlers as "cat berries," but are in every respect similar to the coffee of commerce. A Columbian consul, who is intimately acquainted with the cultivation of coffee in South America, is confident that the shrub is the genuine coffee plant, and capable of producing under cultivation a superior quality of coffee.

—A Kansas farmer, who offered to take a Methodist bishop from one town to another, fretted all the way for fear a certain bridge had been carried away by a late freshet. At last the bishop was so annoyed that he put an end to his companion's whining by saying: "My dear sir, I am an old man, but I never in my life went over a bridge until I got to it."

—An Iowa judge has decided that it is more of a sin to steal a horse than to elope with another man's wife, because there are 8,000,000 women in the United States and only 3,000,000 horses.

'73 REUNION.

THE "HISTORY OF THE RETURN OF THE SONS & DAUGHTERS OF PORTSMOUTH, JULY, 1873," is just published. It contains 96 pages, octavo, and is a thorough detail of everything relating to the three Festal Days.

The Reunion, July 4th, High School Reunion, 5th, The Praise Meeting, 6th;

and containing a

Verbatim Report

of every speech that was uttered at the Tent on the 4th and 5th, besides giving a full report of all the Reunion preliminary movements in Portsmouth, Boston and New York. Much of the matter of this work has never yet appeared in any form, and we think it will prove interesting to all who participated in the

Three Days' Jubilee.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.
R. H. EDDY,
SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,
For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs
NO. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON.
After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Research made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.
No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of Inventions.
All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.
TESTIMONIALS.
"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."
"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."
"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and skill on his part induces me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS,
For all the Purposes of a Family Physic
CURING
Costiveness, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Dysentery, Foul Stomach and Breath, Erysipelas, Headache, Piles, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Tetter, Tumors and Scaly Rheum, Worms, Gout, Neuralgia, as a Dinner Pill, and purifying the Blood, are the most congenial purgative yet perfected. Their effects abundantly show how much they excel all other Pills. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. They purge out the foul humors of the blood; they stimulate the sluggish or disordered organ into action, and they impart health and tone to the whole being. They cure not only the every-day complaints of everybody, but formidable and dangerous diseases. Most skillful physicians, most eminent clergymen, and our best citizens send certificates of cures performed, and of great benefits they have derived from these Pills. They are the safest and best physic for children, because mild as well as effectual. Being sugar-coated, they are easy to take; and being purely vegetable, they are entirely harmless.

Benny.

BY M. C. HARTLETT.

Everybody said Benny was a funny little fellow, and so he was.

Though he was not always a good boy, he had a host of friends. It was very strange. All the neighbors loved him, in spite of his depravity. Indeed, his mother sometimes thought they loved him the better for his faults. Of course she was mistaken there.

But Benny had one failing which the neighborhood deplored. He would run away. Many times in the course of a week was his devoted Bridget seen running hither and thither, calling at this house and that, ringing door-bells frantically, and anxiously exploring back-yards and alleys. At such times the suspense was harrowing; for, having the fear of gypsies continually before her eyes, she kept up a most heart-rending wailing and wringing of hands, never pausing in her search for an instant, until the "darlint" was restored to the bosom of his family.

One morning, having been found playing with a couple of small Irish boys some half-dozen squares from home, Benny's mother put him to bed for an hour, after which she allowed him to run about in the yard as he pleased, but expressly forbade his going outside the gate.

Benny felt that his lot was a very hard one. He had seen everything in the yard a great many times, and it was so nice to get out into the world, where he "could look at a good deal of horses, and—peoples—and lots of things."

Suddenly he heard the children reciting in the school-house opposite. He had been to school once—had been pulled in by an officious monitor, who saw him looking through the fence and mistook him for a primary scholar. He had kicked and screamed, and even bitten his assailant, but was finally mastered, and carried, sobbing, to the teacher's desk. She had dismissed him with a few soothing apologetic words, and reprimanded his tormentor severely. Benny had made up his mind that he would never go to that school; but upon this dreary afternoon he began to think it would be rather pleasant than otherwise to see the teacher's face again. He wondered if she would know him.

But he wouldn't go outside the gate; oh, no! he would get over the fence.

When Benny opened the school-room door, the children looked very much pleased. The teacher gave him a seat on the platform beside her, and he listened to the recitations with the dignity of an experienced "committee-man."

But he soon became tired of words which he could not understand; and his truant eyes, wandering about the room, encountered a pair of bold, black ones, belonging to a large boy who sat nearly in front of him. Benny knew the boy's name very well. He had heard the teacher call him "Brenthoff."

Sure of the visitor's attention, Brenthoff drew his face up into what appeared to Benny a very hard knot that could never be untied. His eyes were closed entirely, and no feature but his nose seemed distinguishable. Benny had never seen such a nose as that in all his life before.

As he looked, the knot was untied, the face was smoothed out for half a second, then "all screwed up" again. Never was there a boy who could "do so many things with his nose" as that Brenthoff boy.

For a while Benny gazed as if fascinated; then suddenly suspecting that Brenthoff was making himself hideous for his annoyance rather than his amusement, he scowled at him fiercely.

His scowl was received with a derisive smile; then the contortions went on, each one more alarmingly ugly than the last, until it really seemed as if no human countenance could survive such a series of grotesque gymnastics.

Benny couldn't stand it any longer. "Stop!" cried he, speaking up very loud, "don't let you see me do that no more."

He had intended to speak forcibly—just as his mother spoke sometimes. He never felt like laughing when she said that. How strange, then, that the whole school, with one accord, should burst out laughing at him.

His lips quivered. "That Brenthoff boy—he keeps making up his face to me," said he, indignantly.

The Brenthoff boy was duly reproved, but Benny's enjoyment was at an end. He walked out of the school-house, in the most dignified manner, nowise mollified by the kiss which the teacher bestowed upon him at parting.

He found mamma in her little sewing-room. "Want to pull out these bastings for me?" said she, handing him a little garment which her machine had just finished.

Yes, Benny did want to. His fat fingers were busy among the white threads for half an hour.

"Why, what a face!" exclaimed mamma, who looked at him occasionally to see how his work was progressing.

"Was it an awful funny one?"

"It was a very ugly one. Did you ever see anybody look like that?"

"Yes, I did. That,"—he suddenly stopped. "I did one day," he continued, after a pause.

"Did you like it?"

"No, I don't."

Many times that afternoon did mamma see her son's countenance take on all manner of unwonted expressions. She was surprised, but thought best to say no more about the matter.

And many times was Benny upon the point of betraying himself by some indignant remark about "that Brenthoff boy." He could not forget him for a moment.

He took his place at the tea-table as usual. He looked into his shining tray with a new interest, making up "just a little few" faces to see how he looked with his nose turned up.

"Eat your supper, Benny," said his father.

He took a bite of biscuit and a little milk, then paused, seemingly lost in thought.

"What are you thinking of?" inquired his mother.

"If that Brenthoff boy's nose wasn't kinder round at one corner, it would be square," replied Benny, speaking very slowly and deliberately, as if some problem were upon the point of being solved.

"What?"

Benny repeated his assertion, adding triumphantly, "I looked up it."

"Looked up what?" asked Aunt Priscilla, who had not been paying strict attention.

"Up that Brenthoff boy's nose."

"O, Benny, Benny, Benny," laughed papa, "what shall we do with you?"

"I couldn't help it," replied the little fellow, earnestly. "He turned it up all sorts of ways,—so—and so—and so—" giving a few feeble illustrations with his small pug, which quite upset the gravity of the family circle.

Suddenly mamma became very grave. "Where did you see the Brenthoff boy?" she inquired, seriously.

Benny crimsoned with the sudden recollection. "I didn't go out the gate."

"Where did you go?"

"Just over the fence and across the street to the teacher's part. That's all where I went."

Papa rose and left the table, regardless of mamma's appealing look. "Discipline must be maintained." He was sensible of that, but it must be done by her, not by him. He would as soon think of disciplining a kitten as the scrap of humanity who sat in his high chair, regarding his mother with a comically anxious expression upon his chubby face.

"You must come with me, Benny." And Benny was put to bed in disgrace for the second time since morning.

"I am very sorry," said mamma, who could not help pitying her disconsolate little son, "but you must be a good boy. Aunt Priscilla doesn't love naughty little boys."

Aunt Priscilla was a relative who had just arrived, and with whom Benny was not at all acquainted.

"Do she love good boys?"

"Yes."

Mamma knelt down beside him, and drew the little face close up to hers. "God loves good boys," said she, very seriously. "He is sorry when they are naughty."

"Does He care when they get over the fence?"

"Yes, if mother tells them not to."

"I won't do it any other day. I'll tell Him so. God! God!" he shouted, at the top of his voice, "I won't never get over the fence again. I'll go out the gate like—a—good—boy!"

The last few words were fairly screamed. Poor mamma, completely taken by surprise, was powerless to stop him. When he had finished, he looked at her with an air of intense satisfaction.

"Now I guess He's glad."

"He will be glad if you mind, mamma. Lie down, now, and go to sleep."

But Benny wasn't quite ready to go to sleep. He watched his mother as she "made the gas burn small," and busied herself for a few moments about the room. She stooped to give him one more kiss before going down stairs, when the little voice said, half-scornfully, half-inquiringly:—

"Aunt Priscilla! Aunt Priscilla! what's she for?"

"What's anybody for?" said mamma, not knowing exactly what to say.

"To eat dinner."

Benny's idea of the "chief end of man" was certainly not an exalted one.

"What's God for, mamma?"

"To take care of the little girls and boys, and the papas and mammas, too."

"I don't want him to take care of that Brenthoff boy."

"O, yes, you do. He would die if God didn't take care of him."

"I want him to be deaded."

"Why Benny Blake?"

"I do. What does God make naughty boys for?"

"What did he make you for?" inquired mamma.

"Cause I told him to."

She was fain to exclaim, with papa, "O, Benny, Benny, Benny, what shall we do with you?" Her boy seemed to her a mere baby, and yet his mind could by no means be compared to the sheet of pure white paper of which some have so eloquently spoken. No; it was rather like a sheet sprinkled o'er with all sorts of quaint designs and queer characters. A sheet upon which had already fallen many a blot, to be wiped out by the pitying angel's tear.

"Ah!" she thought, with a sigh, "how can I always know my duty?"

And as she thought, all at once she seemed again to hear Benny's childish question, "What's God for, mamma?"

"O thou of little faith," she whispered softly to herself. Then she bent tenderly over the bed.

"Good-night, Benny."

But Benny was asleep.

Daily Chronicle.

SATURDAY, MAY 2, 1874.

The Internal Collectorship.

President Grant's refusal to carry out the wishes of Congressman Small to remove Collector Andrew H. Young is in accord with the best judgment of the leading republicans of this Congressional district. It has been understood that the collectorship is not so profitable of late as it was during the first four years of its establishment, but Mr. Young had too much pride to have it taken from him without an effort, especially as there was no general desire that the contemplated change should be made. Mr. Young is an efficient officer, of incorruptible integrity, and with the civil service rules in vogue could not well be removed without cause. Congressman Small has thus far met with defeat in his attempts at superceding officials, because he did not take sufficient forethought before acting. The Congressman is a genial, pleasant person, with a kindly heart and a desire to do well by his friends. Without sufficient experience in Washington life, he took his seat in Congress resolved to do or die for his friends. His advisers have been more selfish than wise, and Mr. Small has thus far found that official life has more stumbling blocks than roses. He first declared that all who had held positions for eight years at the navy yard should make way for other men—but this position was soon abandoned, and Mr. Small was next found hunting up a candidate to oust Postmaster Colbath of Dover, whom a majority of the people of that city desired to remain in office. The Postmaster pluckily gave fight and Mr. Small finding himself beaten, yielded. In filling the Great Falls vacancy, Mr. Small failed to consult the leading men who were entitled to consideration, and alienated friends and produced an angry state of feeling which contributed toward democratic success at the election.

At the same time, our baffled Congressman was battling with all his ingenuity the reappointment of Major Daniel J. Vaughan to the Pension Agency, a man who deserved better of his country than any other official in the district, supported as he was by nearly every leading republican and receiving hearty wishes for success from his political opponents. The President settled the matter for Major Vaughan, thanks to his sagacity and ideas of justice—and straightway Congressman Small took the war-path for Collector Young's scalp. The trouble with our friend, the Congressman, is that he has undertaken too much, or rather that his friends have asked too much of him. There have been other men in Congress before him, and they succeeded by being just. They were strong because they recognized the claims of others and did not yield to the advice of selfish partizans who had nothing to lose and everything to gain. Congressman Small should have respected the wishes of the voters who sent him to Congress had he desired a retention of their confidence.

The Arkansas Troubles.

A Little Rock dispatch of the 30th ult. says General King White, who has charge of Baxter's forces at Pine Bluffs, hearing that a party of Brooks' men were assembled at New Gascon, in Jefferson county, committing depredations, moved a column of 200 men down to that point for the purpose of dispersing them. A despatch to General Newton from Pine Bluffs says that General White sent forward a flag of truce to order the men to disperse, but they fired on the party and a regular battle ensued, in which nine of the Brooks party were killed and twenty wounded. The remainder were taken prisoners, disarmed and sent home. General White reports seven of his own command wounded, and three horses were killed.

Readables.

News is received that the Nova Scotia schooner Etta, laden with coffee, for Baltimore from Pernambuco, was run into and sunk, and only one passenger is known to have been saved.

The dead bodies of a family of six persons were found in the ruins of the house which they occupied, near Pittsburg, Pa., and which was burned. There is reason to believe that they were first murdered and the house fired to conceal the crime.

Advices from Spain state that fighting has been resumed before Bilboa, and that some advanced positions of the Carlists have been taken by the republicans.

The late secret sessions of the District investigating committee at Washington has resulted in throwing considerable light on the mystery of the DeGolyer contract, and hasseriously implicated Colonel Moore, (a business partner of Governor Shepard,) whom the evidence thus far shows to have been guilty of accepting a bribe to use his influence toward securing the contract.

A Sunderland, Vt., boy named Foster was holding a cow by a rope which he had carelessly tied around his body, the other day, when the cow suddenly started, throwing the boy upon the ground, breaking his neck and dashing his brains out.

It is decided to sell all the Maine State lands in Sept. next, about 100,000 acres, and close up the business of the land office.

Peter Jannsen, the Swede murderer, pleaded guilty to the charge of murder of his brother countrymen at Bartlett, and has been sentenced to twenty years in the Maine State prison.

The Senate has passed the bill increasing the paymasters in the army to the number of six.

Joe Waltz, the New York murderer, sentenced to be hanged at Catskill, killed his keeper, Charles Ernst, in his cell, by striking him on the head with a piece of iron, smashing in the skull. During the past week Officer Ernst guarded Waltz in his cell, in order that he should commit no injury to himself. The prisoner manifested a stolid indifference as to his horrible deed. The excitement at Catskill was intense, and at least 2000 people collected around the jail, threatening to break down the door and lynch the prisoner. He was hanged on Friday.

The New York Orangemen have resolved not to parade on the 12th of July this year, as they have vindicated their right to parade and have no wish to stir up strife when nothing is to be gained by it for any worthy object. This action stamps the Orangemen as wise and considerate, as their obstinate determination to parade so long as their right to do so was denied had before proved their courage and devotion to principle.

The Cunard steamer Atlas had a rough time of it on her last passage from Boston to Queestown, having been boarded by a sea which did a good deal of damage and swept overboard the third mate and a seaman, who were drowned. The Atlas then had to run before the gale for several hours before she could get a chance to heave to.

The schooner Anne E. Martin, of Philadelphia, from Baltimore for Boston, was abandoned at sea, sinking, as the crew said. The crew were rescued by the pilot boat Enchantress. Subsequently the steamer Isaac Bell, from Richmond, arrived in New York with the schooner in tow, having picked her up abandoned, with her sails, spars, etc., in good order, and leaking only slightly.

Four men were killed near Altoona, Penn., while walking on the track, April 29th.

Steamship Mediator, of Lorillard's New York and Philadelphia line, was badly damaged by fire April 29th, at the latter place. She was valued at $150,000, and her cargo at as much more.

A man and two women were burned to death in an incendiary fire at Hautzville, Penn., on the morning of April 29th.

Jesse H. Pomeroy, the boy who stands charged with the murder of the Millin child at Dorchester, has been fully committed to await the action of the grand jury. The men who turned such a wild beast loose to prey on infantile feebleness are as guilty as he.

The public debt was decreased $2,900,000 in April.

Three engineers of the New York & Canada Railroad were drowned by the upsetting of a boat near Fort Henry, N. Y., on Thursday afternoon.

Animated Machinery.

Our bodies are like time-pieces. When they run down we must wind them up; otherwise they will stop forever. What key will best perform this work of renovation? Experience has shown that it can be accomplished more rapidly and certainly by a course of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters than by any other article under the sun. That searching yet harmless agent seems to reach every spring and lever, the wheel, so to speak, of the living machine. The relaxed nerves are braced, the torpid liver is stirred, the weak stomach is strengthened, the disordered bowels are regulated, the lost appetite is restored, the clouded mind is brightened—in short the whole inert system is stimulated into healthy action. New life is put into every fibre, and physical regeneration ensues. This is the testimony of thousands. In every city, town and village of the union living proofs of its efficacy may be found.

"Discretion is the better part of valor;" but all are not discreet. Men attacked by diseases of the kidneys or urinary organs, take the great diuretic, HELMBOLD'S BUCHU, It is warrented. Beware of worthless imitations. The genuine may be known by the private propriety stamp of H. T. Helmbold, on each bottle. For sale by all druggists.

SUFFERERS from Scrofula and Scrofulous affections, clean up! Why wear your Pimples, Blotches, Ulcers, Sores? Why have your life twisted out of you by Dyspepsia, Rheumatism and Gout? Why suffer Syphilitic and Mercurial diseases to rot the bones in your body, or the flesh off your bones? Why let your sluggish blood drag, and scatter its distempers through your veins? AYER'S COMP. EXT OF SARSAPARILLA cures these complaints, and cleanses them out of the system. Use it faithfully, and you bring to society a healthier, cleaner, and far more acceptable member.—[Democrat, Baltimore, Md.]

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will cure a Cough in one-half the time necessary to cure it with any other medicine, and it does it, not by drying it up, but by removing the cause—subduing the irritation, and healing the affected parts. For all cases of Laryngitis, Hoarseness, Suppression or Loss of Voice, Bronchitis, Severe Chronic or Lingering Coughs, it will be found to surpass any medicine that has ever before been offered to the public. Sold by Druggists. 7 20

Don't Temporise with Piles.—Ointments, lotions, electuaries and all manner of quack nostrums are a waste of time and money. The only absolutely infallible cure for these painful diseases is ANAKESIS, discovered by DR. SILBEE. It has been pronounced by scientific men as the happiest discovery made in medicine for 200 years, it affords instant relief from pain in the worst cases and has cured more than 20,000 sufferers permanently. All doctors prescribe it. Price $1.00. Sold by Druggists everywhere. Depot, 46 Walker st., New York.

Blessings brighten as they take their flight.—If you have a good head of hair take care of it; once gone and we realize its loss far more than we appreciate its presence. The BEARINE is taking the place of all other hair dressings, because it is healthful to the hair and delightful to use.

Don't be Discouraged. Suppose you have "tried fifty remedies" and received no benefit, is there therefore "no balm in Gilead?" Verily there is. Your liver may be congested, your stomach half paralyzed, your nerves quivering, your muscles knotted with torture, your bowels constricted, your lungs diseased, your blood full of impurities—yet in one week after commencing a course of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS you will feel like a new creature. a23 4w

To The Public.

[Portsmouth Journal.]

Our attention has been called to two articles published in the CHRONICLE, which would be unworthy our notice did they not have a tendency to injuriously affect the poor people who are to a greater or less extent dependent upon the bounty of their more fortunate fellow citizens for the means of living. One of the articles alluded to refers to the out of door pensioners whose pittance has been denied them by the new Mayor, as "pretenders and swindlers."

Now the names and places of residence of every person aided in part or wholly by the City is on record in the Overseers' book in charge of Hon. M. Bufford. Every pound of food or stick of fuel issued by the Overseers is charged to the person (or family) to whom it was granted. We invite all who are interested in the matter to examine the books and see how many of the recipients of aid are deserving of the choice epithets so liberally bestowed upon them.

The amount of all supplies furnished to persons not having a legal settlement in the City was collected from the County by the City Clerk, who was also clerk of the board of Overseers. The two years of experience we have had as Overseers has trught us that it is better and cheaper to aid a family struggling with poverty to the amount of two dollars' worth of bread, meat and fuel per week during the cold weather, than to force them from their humble homes to a life of utter pauperism at the City Farm or the Brentwood Almshouse. Some whole families were helped through last winter who probably will be able to help themselves another winter. One widow with five small children appealed last year for assistance; her circumstances were inquired into, and it was found that she was a respectable industrious woman who went out to her day's work every day. When a home at Brentwood was suggested to her she wept and said she would rather follow her little ones to the grave than have them grow up in an almshouse. We applauded the brave-spirited woman and gave her the usual supplies, which with the contribution of private parties and her own untiring industry kept her little flock in comparative comfort, enabling the larger children to attend the public schools. Thus two dollars a week judiciously applied kept six people from a life of hopeless pauperism. It would have cost the County at least $2.50 per week for each one of the six, an aggregate of $15.00—two-fifths or $6 of which would have been taxed to our City. We think it is better to pay a distressed family $2 per week for a short time than to be taxed $6 per week for an indefinite period. The list of out-door pensioners contains the names of two or three aged and infirm men, all the rest being aged females or widows with children to care for. There are some insane people who are under treatment at the Concord Asylum.

The Board of Overseers met with Mayor Marvin regularly once a week to attend to all applications for help, and no name was added to the supply list without a thorough investigation. The widow of a soldier has the income from about $800 held in trust for her five children. The soldier's mother, widow and children have "managed to get along nicely all winter with city aid ($2 per week) without trenching upon her $800."

Sickness and death have caused a considerable expense, which was unavoidable. In some instances families which have gained only temporary residence here have been obliged through sickness and accidents to ask for assistance in defraying the attendant expenses.

We were often assisted in the discharge of our duties to the poor, the sick and dead by benevolent individuals and charitable societies; and although we may possibly have given to persons who had no legal claim upon the bounty of the city, we know we did not give to any who did not actually need all they got.

The winter which has just passed was a very hard one. Poverty and disease afflicted many people who had never known want before. We have been accused of a lack of economy, by men who should know better—but thank God no one has said that we neglected the sick or turned a deaf ear to the poor.

A. A. PAYNE,
JOHN STOKELL, } Overseers,
JAMES W. NUTTER, } 1873—4.

The Poor Champions.

To the Editors of the Chronicle: Gentlemen: A card, I might say a canard, published in the Journal, signed by the Ex-Overseers of the Poor, is not worth replying to on my own account; but for the vindication of the official position which I have the honor to occupy, and am trying to fill, I ask space for a brief rejoinder to the late Poor Overseers.

With whatever the CHRONICLE may have published, "tending to injuriously affect the poor," or otherwise, I of course have nothing to do, having sometime since resigned to you all control of the paper; but I have rarely met an article of similar length, which contained more misstatements and falsehoods than this manifesto from the Overseers referred to. I shall notice but one, however.

They say (and there is too much "they say" in all such matters), the old Overseers say that somebody's "pittance has been denied them by the new Mayor." A pitiable statement indeed, and so absurdly false that it should not need any correction to any intelligent citizen—since the Mayor as chairman of the Overseers, has but one vote and no veto, in a board of four, and so could not do, and has not attempted to do, anything except by vote of the board—and that in all cases after he and they have personally visited every applicant, and endeavored to inform themselves of all the circumstances, and do justice in the premises. Any needy person or other citizen, may not only solicit, but demand of the Overseers, relief in any case; and not only must they consider it on their oath and their consciences, but they are liable under law for any neglect or refusal.

Talk is cheap; it is easier to condemn than examine; and the very modest assumption of the late board, that they were more discreet and humane than the present one, with the County Commissioners thrown in, is refreshing.

General statements, and especially indefinite rumors, are not easy to meet, even if it were worth while to attempt this; and the present Overseers need no defence by me. So far as I know, they have faithfully endeavored to do their duty, and patiently investigated every application made to them. If they have failed in sympathy or assistance in any deserving case, I am not aware of it; and I am sure any business brought to their notice, will receive prompt and repectful attention.

Yours truly, FRANK W. MILLER,
Chairman of Overseers.

PORTSMOUTH, May 1st.

City Affairs.

In Board of Mayor and Aldermen, Thursday evening; Petition of Miss Clapham for loan of old school chairs, was referred to the Committee on School Houses, with power to act.

A communication from the Chief Engineer recomending the construction of a new engine house near the Hanover street reservoir, the purchase of one thousand feet hose, and that some means be taken to procure water from the South Millpond near the foot of Whidden street, was referred to Committee on Fire Dept.

The School Committees' estimate for the year 1874 was received and referred to the Finance Committee.

The bill of the State Reform School for board of boys was referred to the Committee on Accounts.

The subject of the culvert in Vaughan street at the corner of Hanover, was referred to Committee on Streets with power.

The petition of the Kearsarge Fife and Drum Band for aid towards providing uniforms for the members, was referred to the Finance Committee.

The Committee on Streets, to whom was referred a petition of C. H. Mendum, reported that Wibird street is in an indictable condition.

Voted, that the Mayor be requested to direct the Street Commissioner to repair Wibird street at the point complained of by Mr. Mendum.

The Board resumed the consideration of the bill entitled "an ordinance establishing the salaries of the Assistant Marshals," and it was passed.

The Mayor vetoed said bill.

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the claim of Harry J. Freeman, made a partial report, and further time was allowed them.

Laconics.

Dr. W. W. Hebbard's lectures open at Congress Hall next Monday evening, when all will have an opportunity of listening to this celebrated speaker and of examining his cabinet of anatomical wonders. Dr. Hebbard has met with great success in the lecture field and is the author of several literary works, among them a book of meritorious poems entitled "Idle Whiles," and a work which absorbs much of the speculation, intuition, metaphysics and romance of the literature of the times, entitled "Will it Come?" At the close of his lectures in some of the large cities, meetings of citizens have passed resolutions warmly commending the Doctor's course. He has many testimonials of value from persons whom he has been instrumental in relieving of painful or obstinate, and in some cases supposed incurable diseases.

The new summer hotel at Newcastle is to be named Wentworth Hall. It is situated opposite the Governor Wentworth mansion at Little Harbor, celebrated in history and song.

The proprietors of the hotels at the Shoals are considering the feasibility of employing the vessels that will lay the new ocean telegraph to Rye beach to extend a line from the mainland to the Shoals.

There will be a Sunday School exhibition at the Methodist church next week, probably Thursday evening.

The men employed in the Dept. of Construction and Repair at the navy yard are now working on half time.

Miss Mary E. Haley has been engaged as the soprano of the Unitarian church choir for the ensuing year. The pastor's salary is $3500.

Prof. Metcalf has abandoned the Conservatory of Music here.

Chief Engineer Edward Farmer is detached from the Ticonderoga, and ordered as inspector of machinery at this yard.

Work on the forts at Jerry's Point and Gerrish's Island, was resumed on Monday, April 27, thirty men being employed on the former and forty on the latter.

The Ball given by Kearsarge Engine Company in aid of the Louisiana sufferers, Thursday evening in Congress Hall, was a complete success, one of the most pleasant parties of of the season being in attendance. Harlow's Band generously tendered their services without charge, and the proprietors of the hall only asked that it be cleaned and the lights paid for. Mr. Wm. A. Plaisted and other job printers threw in their bills for work and material, and the local daily papers both advertised the Ball gratuitously. The receipts amounted to $90, and the expense of cleaning and lighting the Hall to $5; and on Friday the company forwarded $85 to the relief committee at New Orleans. The Kearsarges are entitled to credit for the manner in which they carried out their scheme and the prompt forwarding of the sum realized; and they and those who assisted them in the good work can enjoy the pleasant reflection that some poor man or family in the inundated district will thank God for timely help and breath a prayer for the welfare of the helpers, even though they are unknown to the beneficiaries.

Pleasure seekers have not suffered from a dearth of amusements in this city and vicinity during the past week. On Tuesday evening Prof. Gunning gave one of his intensely interesting illustrated lectures on geology, at Mechanic's Hall; on Wednesday evening Charlie Wilkinson's dramatic company, with Dollie Bidwell and Lillie Wilkinson, gave a good performance at the Temple, and the Knights of Pythias had a very successful Ball in Congress Hall; on Thursday evening Kearsarge S. F. E. Co., No. 3, had a good time in Congress Hall and netted $85 for the Louisiana sufferers by flood, and a number of Portsmouth people went to a May-eve Ball in the Town Hall at Rye; and on Friday (May day) evening there was a Ball in Trefethen's Hall at Kittery, which also was well attended by dancers from this city. All these entertainments were pleasurable and well patronized.

Mrs. Carlyle Ireland, of Boston, will hold test circles at No. 10 1-2 Daniel street on Sunday afternoon and evening. Admission 25 cents.

ATTENTION.
Keep Cool! Keep Cool!
SUMMER is coming! I want a piece of ICE; where can I get it? Why, just send a boy to Perkins', No. 30 South St., and you are sure of it. The Subscriber, having purchased the entire interest of the Portsmouth Ice Co., would take this opportunity to thank his old customers for their past patronage, and would solicit the continuance of the same as well as that of the public generally. Situated as I am, with a large Ice House on Mt. Vernon St., I am prepared to deliver ICE cut from pure spring water, in any part of the city, on the shortest possible notice. By strict attention to the wants of the public and by selecting honest and accommodating drivers, I mean to merit and hope to receive a large share of the public patronage. Special attention given to delivering ICE to the sick. Orders from Fishermen promptly attended to.

N. B. Hoping all misdemeanors of drivers will be reported to the subscriber before other steps are taken, I promise that all complaints will receive immediate attention. ORDER SLATE at H. M. Clark's provision store,—or orders may be left with the subscriber at No. 30 South St., or sent through the post-office. dawtf GEORGE A. PERKINS.

PEYSER & KENNEDY,
The liberal settlement of the Eastern Railroad Company for our losses for Damage by Fire and Water at the East Boston Freight Depot, enables us to throw a few cases more of FINE WOOLENS, DOESKINS, DIAGONALS, MELTONS, KERSEYS, CASSIMERES, and SILK AND WOOL MIXTURES, into the market at a low appraisal. The price is marked in plain figures on each piece, and in comparison with the quality will be found to be
ASTONISHINGLY LOW!
Ask your friends and neighbors who have availed themselves of this GREAT CHANCE,
or come and see for yourselves after examining other stocks, that this is no fancy-dream or fiction, but a palpable fact, that you can buy CLOTH FOR GARMENTS of all qualities at so low a figure that EVERYBODY can afford to clothe themselves. Those of a limited means will find it a comfort to their children and themselves without exhausting their stamps. We lose no money by it, assisting others to PRACTICE ECONOMY these hard times. Every sensible Man, Woman and Boy will at once see that we can sell any of our READY-MADE
DRESS UP
Custom Clothing!
AT LOW PRICES, when we have had the chance to make them up of fine Furnishing Materials at half price. This is so plain to everybody that it would be disparaging to the intelligence of our customers to argue the point. Our assortment of Gentlemen's Fine Garments,
Business Suits, and Garments Suitable for Mechanics, Laborers and Farmers is extensive and varied and made up to wear, and those who buy of us will get their money's worth.
We sell no Bankrupt Stock or shop-worn, old failed goods. We do not wish to shock the sensibilities of our customers with fancy tales of dire distress of some (let us hope imaginary) unfortunate trader and his losses. We do not take stock in it. Our Stock and Goods are
NEW, NICE, WELL-MADE AND TRIMMED,
Cost us less than expected, and we sell them so cheap that our customers are cheerful and pleased at our success in business. We make a specialty of
BOYS' AND YOUTHS' SUITS
and guarantee a good fit, at prices from 6 to 15 Dollars, a suit—Coat, Vest and Pant
Fine Linen Bosom Shirts,
custom made, at low prices, and a complete assortment of
UNDERSHIRTS AND DRAWERS, AND GENTS' FURNISHING GOODS.
We Cut and Trim Garments at reasonable charges for customers who make up their goods, and Make Garments to Order at the price of cloth and work.

HENDERSON & CO.,
ANNOUNCE THEIR SPRING OPENING
— OF —
Bonnets, Hats, Flowers and Ribbons.
The Largest Stock,
The Latest Styles,
The Lowest Prices.
The beauty of Henderson's opening is you are not obliged to turn your purse inside out, and pull out the bottom dollars to pay for a
NEW BONNET.
It is a well known fact that HENDERSON sells everything in the Millinery line full 25 per cent. less than any other house in the city, and the question is often asked "How can he do it?" We answer:
First. We are not dependent on our Millinery trade alone for a living. We do an extensive business in DRY and FANCY GOODS, and our Millinery is sold with our other goods at a cotton cloth profit, so that you are not obliged to pay us the fancy prices charged by dealers doing an exclusively millinery business.
Second. Our business in STRAW GOODS having increased so enormously (our sales in the summer of 1873 being nearly three hundred cases of Bonnets and Hats, the largest retail trade in the State,) that we buy entirely of manufacturers, thus making a saving in this way alone of fifteen per cent., which goes to the benefit of our customers.
Third. We Trim Hats free of charge; you all know that this one item saves you half a dollar. We have opened a larger stock than ever before, and keep the finest as well as cheaper grades of goods.
Hats, not trimmed,
From One Cent to One Dollar.
Hats, trimmed,
From 50 cts. to $10.00.
And five dollar Trimmed Hats will compare favorably with any ten dollar one in the city.
SASH RIBBONS. . . . . 25 cents per yard.
SILK TIES . . . . . 20 cents each.
FRAMES . . . . . 15 cents each.

HERE THEY ARE COMPLETED AND
FOR SALE.
TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1616 to '20; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore; Smith's antiquated bark at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Gerrish's island, &c.
The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in its palmy days, the Light-House at its original height, and a lively sea view, at about 1820—a true picture of days when the white sail ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the embalmed canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a devoted son of old "Strawberry Bank," so called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.
Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-office.

How Dry I Am.

[Truckee Republican.]

On a sleeping car the other night, one lady exclaimed, in a slow and solemn voice, "Oh, how dry I am!" There was a moment's pause, and again rang out, "Oh, how dry I am!" Another moment passed and the dozing sleepers were once more startled by the sepulchral information, "Oh, how dry I am!" "Won't somebody get that woman a drink?" howled an old gentleman, who being rheumatic, and occupying an upper berth, could not do it himself. The demand was complied with, and the grateful sound of gurgling water was soon heard. Then there was a moment of silence, and following it came the solemn tones, "Oh, how dry I was!" There appeared to be no doubt about it by the occupants of the car, and if the truth could have been known, they were unselfishly glad that she had found relief; and they composed themselves afresh for sleep. Then the voice again smote the air, "Oh, how dry I was!" Everybody started, and every eye was distended. "Oh, how dry I was!" repeated the grateful woman. "Then dry up!" screamed the gallant gentleman in the upper berth. She did.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA- DEBILITY- DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

NO. 78 STATE ST., OPPOSITE RILEY-ST., BOSTON,

After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.

No Agency is in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.

All necessary fees, journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are bereaved in Inventors.

TESTIMONIALS.

"Regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their application in a form to secure for them as early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.
EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents."

"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend ALL inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases, and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS,

For all the Purposes of a Family Physic

CURING

Costiveness, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Dysentery, Foul Stomach and Breath, Dysentery, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Tetter, Tumors and Salt Rheum, Worms, Gout, Neuralgia, as a Dinner Pill, and purifying the Blood, are the most congenial purgative yet perfected. Their effects abundantly show how much they excel all other Pills. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. They purge out the foul humors of the blood; they stimulate the sluggish or disordered organ into action, and they impart health and tone to the whole being. They cure not only the every-day complaints of everybody, but formidable and dangerous diseases. Most skillful physicians, most eminent clergymen, and our best citizens send certificates of cures performed, and of great benefits they have derived from these Pills. They are the safest and best physic for children, because mild as well as effectual. Being sugar-coated, they are easy to take; and being purely vegetable, they are entirely harmless.

The Tichborne Estates.

The Claimant has not lost much in being deprived of the Tichborne estates, if all that is stated regarding them be true. He would have come into a barren inheritance, and is likely to live in a far better and an infinitely less embarrassing style whither he has gone than he could have done in the baronial halls for which he made so desperate a struggle. It seems that the estate will be lost in litigation by reason of the expenses attendant upon the recent trials. The trustees of the estate have had to bear the brunt of the legal proceedings, the costs of which amount to over $200,000, which is more than the value of the property. The Doughty trustees, who had charge of a portion of the property, and who were not involved in the suit for ejectment, expressed their willingness to agree to bear a certain proportion of the expense; but, as the agent of the estate insisted that they should pay more than a fair proportion, they now refuse to pay anything. The result will be, either that the estate will be sold, or that the trustees of the two estates of the infant heirs will enter into a prolonged litigation. Arthur Orton can, therefore, if he cherishes any animosity towards the Tichborne family, hug to his heart the consolation that, if he could not have the estates, his adversaries are in an equally unenviable position. Certainly he is in jail, but even here he has an advantage, since the paternal government has kindly given him a roof over his head, while the Tichbornes are not so desirably situated. There seems to be something radically wrong in that law which permits an impostor to legally destroy those he attempts to plunder, by putting them to a ruinous expense in order that they may defend their own against his rascally machinations. The moral of the affair seems to be that when a scoundrel cannot gain possession of an estate that is not his own, he can succeed in making it impossible for its rightful owners to keep it.

Death of a Modoc Baby.

The pathos of savage sorrow shows with sad and picturesque clearness when set off by the surroundings of civilization. A letter to the Advance from "Saints' Rest," Oregon, describes a scene witnessed there in the family of "Steamboat Frank," one of the few survivers of the Modoc race.

A baby died while they were here. It was sick when Capt. Wilkinson first saw it, and some kindness to it won the confidence of its parents, Steamboat Frank and his wife. The captain confessed that he himself became attached to the little creature, which, in spite of sickness and Modoc ancestry, was a bright child. If I dared assert such a thing of any one wearing army blue, I should say his voice trembled and his eyes moistened when he told us about it. At all events he made the rest of us wink very fast. He said no mother could be more devoted to a child than that Modoc mother was. He never knew of her sleeping night or day while it lived, and the father shared her cares and anxiety. One day the captain heard, through the door leading from his office to their room, a single sharp sob. He knew then the baby was dead, and going to them, he found Steamboat Frank rolling in mute agony upon the bed, with the little lifeless form clasped tightly to his heart, while the mother crouched, weeping, beside him for a few moments, and, then drawing her blanket over her head, and folding her empty arms upon her breast, she sat silent and motionless for hours. When the captain expressed his sympathy for them, and asked them if he should talk to God and tell him how heavy their hearts were, they eagerly assented and seemed comforted. The question of burial came up, and they were bewildered, helpless. Of late they have burned their dead, not knowing how else to secure their graves from desecration. The captain told them if they wished, it should be buried just as he would bury one of his own children. So Mr. Squier bought a neat coffin, and had a grave dug where they could find it again when they are settled and have established a burial-place for their tribe; then with the captain he went to the grave, and together they gave the little heathen baby a Christian burial, and so the first Modoc grave was made in the land of their exile.

An Incident of the Nashville Flood.

[Union and American, April 18.]

Between 5 and 6 o'clock last evening, an exciting scene was witnessed in the backwater south of Broad, between Cherry and College streets. In order to make our readers familiar with the whole story, we will commence at the beginning. A colored man, whose name we don't know and never expect to know, because we have never seen him before and never expect to see him again, after mature deliberation, no doubt, determined to have chicken for supper, and proceeded to his coop, where he selected one of the fattest with the intention of wringing its neck. He was accompanied to that coop by his little son, and to better enable the old man to fasten the door of the coop, in order to save the remainder of his chickens for a Sunday dinner, he gave the fowl to the little fellow to hold; but that chicken, which was a rooster, did not hold worth a cent, but suddenly escaped from the firm grasp of the youngster, and flew into the back-water. This is a convenient place to drop that chicken, and we will close the first chapter with the inference that the aforesaid chicken had gone for good.

Not so, however, for as soon as that chicken had touched water, a little black dog made a bound from the street above, and a moment later was struggling with the mad waves and making for that chicken. The dog pushed forward, reached in due course of time that chicken, and seized it by the neck. The chicken weighed nearly as much as the dog, and in struggling to be released from the grasp of the dog, the latter was frequently pulled under water, and there was every reason to believe that dog and chicken would go down to a watery grave. So ends chapter two.

A large crowd had by this time collected on the streets, and great interest was manifested as to the fate of the dog that so persistently refused to relinquish the prize he held between his teeth. In the crowd was a little boy who wept bitterly for his dog. His cries pierced the heart of a colored man named John Allen, whose sympathies by this time were aroused in behalf of the boy and his dog. Without saying a word he doffed stockings and shoes, coat and pants, and plunged into the water, and was soon swimming in the direction of the dog. Up to this good moment, the boy had been the hero of the occasion, but now all eyes were turned on John as he neared a couple of planks lashed together, and tied to a fence midway between the two streets. He mounted his raft, and with a pole pushed out and was soon alongside of the dog and the chicken. He reached out his hand, rescued the chicken from the mouth of the dog, helped the latter on the planks, and, amid the cheers of the vast concourse of people, the man, the dog and the chicken were moving toward the shore.

We cannot close this narrative without informing our readers of the fact that the aforesaid dog is of the feminine gender, and bears the very beautiful name of Fanny. She belongs to Tom Coughlin, and is said to be one of the best ratters in the city. The owner obtained her from a Texas Ranger during the war, and not long since refused to sell her for $100 in gold.

Jesse Pomeroy.

[Boston Advertiser.]

This wretched youth stands committed for trial on the charge of murder. He has the same right to a fair trial that is accorded to the most abandoned felon. The evidence against him is terrible, and is of a kind that not only destroys sympathy with the accused but weakens confidence in the protecting power of the law. None the less is it his right, and for the interests of justice, that the evidence should be weighed impartially, and the well-established forms of trial be observed in letter and spirit.

Since the commission of the murder, it has not been uncommon to hear threats of summary punishment in cases like this, without waiting for the slow process of the courts and the chance of acquital or of pardon. These threats do not come from the ignorant and vicious, but from parents, by no means thoughtless of consequences, whose households these repeated instances of child-torturing have filled with an awful terror. For example, one of these, the father of six children, the oldest not yet ten years old, writes to us to say that, having lived to middle age without being a law-breaker, and being generally willing to abide by the judgment of those set in authority, even when he differed in opinion from their reasons and decisions, he now finds himself possessed by a wholly different spirit. After restating the circumstances as they have appeared at the inquest, the former conviction of Pomeroy for nameless cruelties, and his early discharge, the writer says:—

"Now it becomes a serious question with me what is my plain and evident duty, should I meet this boy a few months hence prowling about City Point, looking for more children of tender age to kill! I find myself in the horrible belief that it will be my bounden duty, as a Christian man, having six children to protect, to cut him down wherever I find him,—for this reason: The law has been tried and failed; it is manifestly some one's duty to protect the helpless innocents who toddle about the seashore in the confidence of youth and innocence; if not the law's, whose, then, but the father's? It was not my child who, two years ago, was tortured and emasculated in the yacht in front of my house, but a neighbor's; but it might have been mine, for one of mine of the same age was there half an hour before. Supposing it had been mine, and I had identified his assailant, it seems to me that had I discovered him again in his old haunts a week or so ago I could have no option but to stop his career at once and finally. Thus I should have saved one innocent life. I expect to find him about again in less than two years from now, and it is my present belief that without any feeling of revenge, or any feeling but sorrow, his appearance at large will justify every parent, having children who may be tormented and murdered, in taking his life, and that I should do it."

If the writer, who declares his uncomfortable conviction with such manifest sincerity, were justified in his distrust of all legal protection, he would have no alternative but to appeal to that first law of nature—the right of self-defence. But as society is organized we must trust to the courts for justice. To leave it to any man's discretion to take the law into his own hands would be the beginning of utter lawlessness; and the worst men in the community would be the first to take advantage of such a precedent. How far the right of self-defence can be carried without wrong-doing is a question of casuistry the right itself is one which in a law-respecting and law-abiding community every man who exercises it must expect to do so at his own peril. With cases like this one, it is manifestly the business of the courts alone to deal; and society would gain nothing, while hazarding a great deal, by allowing any person to interfere with the regular course of proceedings.

And this leads to another consideration—the obligation of the courts and officers of justice to see that the laws are enforced. The facility with which their judgments are often set aside, upon false pleas of humanity, is alike fatal to the confidence of the innocent and the fears of the guilty. We had a score or more protests against a communication printed on the 27th instant, under the title "A Mad Dog." Without accepting entirely the spirit of that communication, the community may well consider whether the conclusion to which it sought to bring the public mind is not the only just and merciful one. If the boy now charged with the murder of the child Horace F. Millan be found guilty of the crime, it would certainly be a false sentiment that would seek to save him from the penalty of the law. In the coolness with which he replied, when told that there was "damaging" evidence against him: "Oh, you can't prove anything;" in the terror he afterward manifested when he found that proof was forthcoming; in his suggestion that he should be "put somewhere where he could not do such things;" and in the caution with which later, probably by the advice of counsel, he denied all knowledge of the affair, there seems nothing to denote insanity, and, though there may be "no doubt that he is the victim of a terrible mania," it is impossible to see why there should be exemption on that score.

The love of torturing whatever is helpless is early developed in many boys, and this is simply a most horrible manifestation of the power of the passion when indulged without restraint. The boy Pomeroy, having suffered once for a similar crime, knew well what he was doing, and that it was what the law was bound to punish if it could be proved against him. So far he was sane; he may have no conscience, but it is clear that he is not a fool. The degree of absolute responsibility for such loss of the power of self-control, no human tribunal is called upon to determine; but the accountability to the laws that are made for the protection of the innocent remains. And it must be insisted on that "mania" is often guilt,—the criminal habit having become all-powerful, its victim, through his weak and wicked subjection to it, makes himself answerable for its consequences, whatever they may be. This may seem a hard saying, but unless its truth be acknowledged, there can be neither justice nor mercy, and crime will abound yet more and more.

such men or boys continue to point unloaded firearms at their associates "in fun," and occasionally to shoot somebody, also in fun, unless such dangerous folly is made by law to appear as criminal as it actually is. The worst thing about this facetious style of murder is that there is no defence against it; if a man sees an enemy pointing a gun or pistol at him he knows just what to do,—either to run away or try to kill his assailant; but when a friend points an "unloaded" weapon at him he can only hope it may really be unloaded, as to run away would bring down ridicule on his cowardice and to attempt to kill his dangerous "friend" would ruin his reputation as a peaceable man and render him amenable to the law besides. Men who are thoroughly conversant with the use of firearms rarely point them at anything they do not intend to hit if they can; knowing the deadly nature of the weapons they handle, they are correspondingly careful in their use.

thing and then feel like the late Horace Greeley, as it were, and are sure that "the way to resume is to resume;" but if we suffer reflection to work, doubts will cloud this simple theory. Having no clear conception of the subject we generally write from the promptings of the moment; and having no fixed principles on finance, only to get all the money we can and keep it, our readers may look for any kind of doctrine, or for different kinds. We are not quite sure that we are alone in our financial muddle. In fact it looks as if several of our statesmen have been tarred with the same stick. If we understand ourselves just now we are in favor of the inflation bill just passed and shall cheerfully pocket our part of the swag if any comes this way; although last week we were honestly opposed to inflation. We shall endeavor to be honest in our views, whatever they may be; and the rather, as honesty is thought to be the best of policy.

State News.

J. C. Perkins of Nashua was quite seriously bitten by his horse on Monday.

A fire broke out about 11 o'clock Friday morning, in a two-story building on the corner of Main and Pleasant streets, Concord, owned by H. W. Parker and occupied by W. J. Fernald, upholsterer and furniture dealer. The building was badly damaged with a loss of about $1500; insured for $1200. Fernald's loss was about $2000; insured for $2400. A building adjoining, owned and occupied by Franklin Evans, grocery dealer, was almost entirely destroyed. The stock was partially removed. Loss about $1500; no insurance. A building adjoining on the west, used as a storehouse, was damaged to the extent of about $100. The latter building was owned by Franklin Evans. The cause of the fire is unknown.

The dwelling house, barn and outbuildings of Alden Hills, in Hudson, were entirely destroyed by fire about 10 o'clock Friday night. Ten head of cattle, two valuable horses and several swine perished in the flames. Loss about $5000; insured in the Merchants and Farmers' office for $3000. The fire was the work of an incendiary.

James Brown, recently drowned while fishing in the river at Lisbon, was drunk at the time, and overturned the boat in which he was, with three companions. The others reached shore in safety, but Brown was unable to hold on until the boat was pushed ashore.

A Frightful Disaster.

The North China Herald of February 26 records a terrible accident as having taken place at Hong Kong on the 13th to the mail steamer Wan Loong, which plied between that port and Canton. The vessel started with two or three hundred passengers on board, and got clear of her moorings all right, but in taking a turn to avoid a German yacht lying near she gave a roll inwards in the circle she was describing. On her upper decks were a large number of Chinese, and at the sway they all ran to the other side, a movement which at once brought the vessel over. The dead weight at the low side kept her from righting herself again, and her slanting attitude prevented those on the top from getting to the high side. So the vessel went right over, and at once sank. Just before she went down a wild cry arose from those on board. Boats were immediately dispatched to the rescue of the engulfed passengers, and a large number were saved, but still it is feared that a hundred, if not more, were drowned, including at least one European.

A Patent Rat-Trap.

The local editor of the Burlington (Iowa) Hawkeye says a man has invented a patent rat-trap that does not require any bait, and will fetch a rat every time it reaches for him. It operates on the principle of a stomach-pump—the inventor is a "retired physician, the sands of whose life have nearly," &c.,—and the trap is placed at the mouth of the rat-hole. When it is wound up and the suction begins the rat comes. He may hold on to the ground with his teeth, and hump his back and paw dirt, and weep, and yell for the police all he wants, he comes out of that hole backward, is dragged into a back compartment, where a steel glove drags his hide off and lays it aside for a kid glove manufacturer, while the carcass is pushed into a little furnace and incremated.

A Funny Financier.

A Sensible Movement.

An exchange says: "The Ohio legislature has introduced a bill fixing a fine of from five to fifty dollars for pointing say kind of firearms at a person, loaded or unloaded."

If the Ohio legislature passes that bill it will have done one wise act, at least. The shooting of unoffending persons by their friends, with "unloaded" weapons, is terribly common and can be checked in but two ways—either by furnishing with common sense (a hard job to do) the persons who so recklessly tamper with the lives of others, or by severe legislative enactments. There have been three cases of playful yet fatal shooting with unloaded firearms in New England within a few weeks past; a divinity student at Wilbraham, Mass., killed his intimate friend, a man at Lawrence, Mass., killed a boy against when he had no dislike, and a man in Parsonsfield, Me., killed his own daughter,—all done in sport, and with unloaded weapons. So long as men or boys exist who can find pleasure in causing uneasiness or terror in others, so long will

The Mississippi Flood.

A dispatch from Memphis, Friday, says: From Cairo to this port steamers cannot make landing on the west bank, except at wharf boats, and yet, with the exception of at Osceols, no serious damage to the planting interests has resulted from the Louisiana line up. There are no levees on the Arkansas side except local ones, and a large portion of the country is subject to inundation and is sparsely settled, as is the case opposite here, where the river spreads out to the highlands. Near Madison, a distance of over 40 miles, the St. Francis valley is generally a foot above the overflow and the planters are waiting for dry weather to begin planting. The White River valley is inundated up to Indian Bay, but for reasons already given the damage is slight. Ten thousand dollars will probably cover the loss on stock, &c. The Arkansas valley is overflowed up to Arkansasport, but the damage is light, and $15,000 will probably cover it. From the mouth of the Arkansas down is where the greatest damage has resulted, and where destitution undoubtedly exists among all classes, but particularly among the laborers and their families. Large portions of Tallahatchie and Yallobusha bottoms have been overflowed for some time. From Milliken's bend, twenty-five miles above Vicksburg, is where the greatest damage has been done, and where the greatest destitution and suffering prevail. A lady from near Napoleon, whose husband was one of the wealthiest planters in that section, arrived today, and states that she left the family and plantation hands, numbering eighty, without food. All would have starved a few days since but for food furnished by the officers of the steamer City of Vicksburg.

Animated Machinery.

Our bodies are like time-pieces. When they run down we must wind them up; otherwise they will stop forever. What key will best perform this work of renovation? Experience has shown that it can be accomplished more rapidly and certainly by a course of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters than by any other article under the sun. That searching yet harmless agent seems to reach every spring and lever, the wheel, so to speak, of the living machine. The relaxed nerves are braced, the torpid liver is stirred, the weak stomach is strengthened, the disordered bowels are regulated, the lost appetite is restored, the clouded mind is brightened—in short the whole inert system is stimulated into healthy action. New life is put into every fibre, and physical regeneration ensues. This is the testimony of thousands. In every city, town and village of the union living proofs of its efficacy may be found.

"Discretion is the better part of valor;" but all are not discreet. When attacked by diseases of the kidneys or urinary organs, take the great diuretic, HELMBOLD'S BUCHU. It is warrented. Beware of worthless imitations. The genuine may be known by the private propriety stamp of H. T. Helmbold, on each bottle. For sale by all druggists.

SUFFERERS from Scrofula and Scrofulous affections, clean up! Why wear your Pimples, Blotches, Ulcers, Sores? Why have your life twisted out of you by Dyspepsia, Rheumatism and Gout? Why suffer Syphilitic and Mercurial diseases to rot the bones in your body, or the flesh off your bones? Why let your sluggish blood drag, and scatter its distempers through your veins? AYER'S COMP. EXT OF SARSAPARILLA cures these complaints, and cleanses them out of the system. Use it faithfully, and you bring to society a healthier, cleaner, and far more acceptable member.—[Democrat, Baltimore, Md.]

Don't Temporise with Piles.—Ointments, lotions, electuaries and all manner of quack nostrums are a waste of time and money. The only absolutely infallible cure for these painful diseases is ANAKESIS, discovered by DR. SILSBEE. It has been pronounced by scientific men as the happiest discovery made in medicine for 200 years, it affords instant relief from pain in the worst cases and has cured more than 20,000 sufferers permanently. All doctors prescribe it. Price $1.00. Sold by Druggists everywhere. Depot, 46 Walker st., New York.

Blessings brighten as they take their flight.—If you have a good head of hair take care of it; once gone and we realize its loss far more than we appreciate its presence. The BEARINE is taking the place of all other hair dressings, because it is healthful to the hair and delightful to use.

Don't be Discouraged. Suppose you have "tried fifty remedies" and received no benefit, is there therefore "no balm in Gilead?" Verily there is. Your liver and stomach are out of rack, your stomach half paralyzed, your nerves quivering, your muscles knotted with torture, your bowels constricted, your lungs diseased, your blood full of impurities—yet in one week after commencing a course of DR. Amusements.

THE GREATEST EVENT!

And the BEST ever known in Portsmouth, is approaching. The most important information, blended with increasing amusement, is to be given

At Congress Hall,

Monday Evening, May 4.

Halls have been crowded in the large cities with the elite and ton, to see

HEBBARD'S COLOSSAL $10,000

ILLUSTRATED CABINET OF MAN.

Imported from Dr. Auzou of Paris.

For the high standing of this famous exhibition of Manikins, Models-de-Femme,

Skeletons, Skulls,
Dried and Embalmed Human Bodies,
Faces, Heads, Ears, Eyes,
Maps and Drawings of the Classical Figures and Statues of

APPOLLO, the God of Love; MINERVA, the God dess of Wisdom; DIANA, the Goddess of the Chase; HERCULES, the Laocoon, &c.,

The Manager and Agent of

takes pleasure in referring to the leading papers and the eminent men of the principal cities of the Union. To see one figure, is worth the price of one admission, at least. As to this orator,

AN EMBALMED EUNUCH,

6000 YEARS OLD!

DR. HEBBARD,

Professor of Physiology, Surgery, Hygiene, materia medica, author of various works, etc., etc., nothing need be said to the citizens of Portsmouth. His deep, high and broad teachings on the most important themes that can be discussed, his stirring appeals, his sweeping witticisms and "hits" and side-splitting stories which keep his hearers spell-bound and often convulsed with laughter, are well known everywhere.

"Heads, Faces & Forms,

Or how to read people like a book," is the title of Dr. W. W. Hebbard's opening lecture at Congress Hall, this evening. The Doctor has placed his extensive cabinet of manikins, etc., in position and Congress Hall now resembles a miniature museum. We hope it will be filled to-night by an interested audience. The subjects of Doctor Hebbard's discourses are those with which our people should be well acquainted, inasmuch as upon them to a great extent depend the life, health and happiness of all. But it is to be regretted that of them there is a too general ignorance coupled with carelessness much to be deplored. The Portlanders resolved "that Dr. Hebbard is an eloquent, able and worthy lecturer, a scientific and proficient physician, a public benefactor and a friend of humanity." Go and hear him.

The Rice Will.

The executor of the will of Arabella Rice has filed a bill in equity against the trustees of the Rice fund for a public library in Kittery, to have a construction put upon the clause in the will relating to the legacy, certain legal questions having arisen which might affect the interest of residuary legatees resident abroad. William H. Hackett for the trustees, and C. W. Woodman of Dover for the residuary legatees.

The board of trustees appointed by the executor of the late Miss Rice are Daniel Austin, Ephraim C. Spinney and John Wentworth of Kittery, and Ex-Gov. Ichabod Goodwin and Wm. H. Y. Hackett of this city, William H. Hackett, Esq., being treasurer of the Board. In case the decision is made in favor of the trustees, the fund, $30,000, will be made immediately available, in accordance with the provisions contained in the will of the testatrix.

The Overseers of the Poor.

"Bartering his vocal wit for sums of gold,
He casts himself into the saintlike mould;
Groans, sighs and prays, while godliness is gain;
The loudest bagpipe of the squeaking train."

We copied from the Journal, in Saturday's CHRONICLE, a lengthy card from last year's Overseers of the Poor, that our readers might have both sides of the story,—though we fail to see how any word of ours was calculated to injure any honest or worthy person, poor or rich. The allusion to the CHRONICLE is as unjust as that to the Mayor, who is of age and has already spoken for himself.

We have examined the list referred to, of "every person aided in part or wholly by the city,"—though we confess we are not clear as to what this language means, nor the term "utter pauperism" used further along.

It being the business of the present Overseers to attend to the poor, we shall not interfere with it, nor pass upon the list, as to who are pretenders and swindlers, if any. But in the report of the late Board we find payment made to the Overseers themselves for goods sold to the city, to the amount of $3214. A very pretty plum. The law of New Hampshire forbids County Commissioners to sell anything to the County, as in Boston and other cities Aldermen are prohibited from selling goods to the cities. Many people have long freely expressed the opinion, that no storekeeper should ever occupy the position of Overseer or Commissioner—and certainly none but honest men should.

Among the bills we find, in pursuing the investigation of Hon. M. Bufford's records, as recommended by the late Board,—from one of the Overseers is one for 613 1-2 lbs. turkeys at Thanksgiving for out-door pensioners, at 23 cts. per lb., while everybody knows the retail price here was only 18 to 20 cts., if paupers must have turkeys. Is it to be wondered at, that the late Overseers' "experience has taught them that it is better and cheaper to supply outside aid to families struggling with poverty, than to send them to the Almshouses?"

Then there is a bill of $14.80 for superfluous toys and candy for the children's Christmas tree—many of the children being of parents able to buy their own toys. The funeral of a stranger and an alien cost $32.50, and of his child $23.50, and two other children $38,—much more than necessary for decent Christian burial; and the parties were County charges.

Whether the very disinterested policy thus announced by the Overseers, of encouraging the destitute to struggle with their sad and hopeless fate in their apologies for homes, and not go to the Almshouses, is wiser than the opposite course of the Commissioners, as referred to, we need not decide; but since the care of the County poor is vested by law in the Commissioners, it would seem unnecessary that the city should bear much of this burden, from any false sentiment. A leading reason given by the Commissioners for refusing outside aid except in emergencies, is that any reasonable amount which can be allowed is insufficient to materially aid struggling families, and the rest even of the poorhouse is much better than such struggles. Besides, drinkers can be kept from liquors there; and children made clean, disciplined and taught, or good homes readily found for them in families.

We do not care to follow all the statements of the card. We were told by good authority, in reply to our inquiries, that many were helped who did not need it, or should not have had it from the city; and certainly turkies at 23 cents would not seem to be "actually needed," nor costly burials. Charity is commendable, and furnishing luxuries to the poor we account charitable; but being charitable with others' means we do not greatly admire. Boss Tweed gave $50,000 to the Chicago sufferers; but unfortunately he stole the money from the New York treasury, and was hardly entitled to canonization for his "charity."

The old Board closes by virtually admonishing the new one to "stand by, for we are holier than thou;" but the public have not yet any evidence, so far as we are aware, that the present incumbents are not as intent on helping the poor, (if not themselves,) as those who have gone before, but still keep "after" them.

Compulsory Pilotage.

A good move in the right direction is the recent presentation to Congress of a memorial in opposition to compulsory pilotage, extensively signed by parties interested in navigation and commerce. All who have any knowledge of the expenses incurred in sailing our coasting vessels are aware that it is almost impossible to realize a reasonable profit on the money invested. Port charges are among the heaviest items of expense, and anything tending to their reduction is of importance to ship owners; and a most important step in that direction would be the entire abolition of compulsory pilotage, which is an unjust and oppresive tax on the coast-navigation interest, often compelling the ship-master and owner to pay roundly for what he does not want and which is wholly useless to him.

I was surprised, recently, at a set of laws published in the Portsmouth Journal by the Commissioners of Pilotage,—which laws, if it was attempted to enforce them, would keep the local courts in pretty constant employment to settle the disputes that would arise, as few masters of vessels would submit to them until they had tested their rights at law. Take this rule for instance:

Every vessel inward bound (except fishing vessels provided for,) shall receive the first pilot holding a commission that may offer his services and shall be holden to pay such pilot the regular fees for pilotage, whether his services be accepted or not.

Is it likely that any jury would decide in favor of a pilot claiming compensation under that rule? I think not. Here is another:

Any vessel refusing a pilot, and afterwards employing a steamboat to tow them in or out of the river or harbor, thereby avoiding the payment of the pilotage, shall be liable to the full payment of pilot fees.

I had always supposed the master of a vessel accepted or refused a pilot, and employed steam to tow "them" in or out; and this making "any vessel" responsible for the acts of her captain is hardly fair. But though muddily worded, the sentence is plain enough as to its meaning,—it says to the coasting skipper "You shall adopt our idea as to what you had better do, or shall pay for it anyway, whe ther you adopt it or not." From what I know of the characteristics of our coasting captains, I judge that provision to be excellently-well adapted to the prompt stirring up of a muss. Suppose a vessel is unwieldy, slow in stays and hard to steer, and the master, unwilling to risk his craft in the strong tide of our river under sail alone, takes steam; he must still pay pilotage, though a pilot is absolutely useless to him, and the master of a steam tug must be duly licensed as a pilot by the U. S. government. Thus the captain of our only tug is a qualified pilot and has passed an examination as such,—which I think only one other pilot on the river ever did, and that took place before the first Board of Commissioners appointed in the State.

But there is one view of this compulsory-pilotage question in which the public are directly interested. Every increase to navigation expenses adds to the cost of the goods freighted, and the extra expense must finally be borne by the consumers. The necessary coal for local use will be brought to this port as heretofore, no matter how oppressive or unreasonable the port charges are,—the difference will come out of the pockets of the coal burners; but every measure which tends to increase the cost of carrying goods tends to drive freight to ports where the rules are more liberal, and these new pilot laws thus tend to diminish the importation of coal intended for inland cities, a very important part of our city's trade, of late years. Hoping that no attempts will be made to enforce these laws or any others which threaten to drive business from our city, I remain, yours truly. HANDLEAD.

Laconics.

Schooner L. & D. Fisk, Kendrick master, bound from this port to Richmond, got under weigh Friday to proceed on her voyage, but managed to run into Church Point first and afterward into Adams & Broughton's lumber wharf. The wharf was considerably damaged, and the schooner was brought up; but the vessel not being seriously harmed proceeded to sea on Saturday in tow of steamer Clara Batemen.

The Times doesn't want any more weather. It says: "Some of our cotemporaries are hunting up their old records to find a parallel to the present Spring. For our part we don't want any parallel nor any more of this."

In our notice of the death of the late Mr. William Varrell we stated that he was the oldest member of the Mechanics' Association, having joined in 1825. This statement was correct so far as the date of Mr. Varrell's membership is concerned, but he was not the oldest member of the Association, Mr. Lewis Bruce having joined in 1812 and Mr. Ebenezer Lord in 1815.

J. B. Burleigh's mammoth art distribution will take place on Tuesday evening, May 12. A few tickets remain unsold.

The Mirror says Manchester wants another train to Portsmouth daily. Portsmouth seconds the motion.

The firm of Geo. Tompson & Co. will not continue grist grinding, finding it unprofitable. The mills are to be removed to Jones' brewery for use there.

Portsmouth harbor has eleven pilots.

An unknown man who was lying lengthwise of the track near Kennebunk, Saturday, was killed by a passenger train on the P. S. & P. R. R. He was probably intoxicated.

The charming actress, Kate Reignolds, is to appear here on the 12th inst., with the Boston Comedy Company. The comedy, "Leap Year," and the farce, "Perfection," will be produced.

A freight train ran off the track at Sawyer's Mills on the P. & D. R. R., Friday.

Medical Inspector Samuel F. Coues, U. S. N., is relieved from duty on the Colorado, and ordered to this navy yard.

Ex-Gov. Goodwin's portrait by Billings is on exhibition at J. H. Foster's book-store. Hon. John P. Hale's portrait by Tenney is also to be placed there for a few days.

We note the reappearance of our old friend John Pender, Esq., who has been doing Washington for a time; also Dr. A. P. Stevens, who has been spending a few weeks at the Capital, and returns, we are glad to say, with improved health.

The gentleman from Texas wishes us to state distinctly that he is not responsible any longer for the continuance of this kind of weather.

A little son of James Verney fell overboard at the foot of Pray street, Friday forenoon, and was rescued as he was going down the third time by a boy who happened to be standing near.

Dr. Preston is responsible for the statement that on the 4th of July, 1844, snow covered the ground at Boar's Head.

Sunday was a delightful day, warm and Spring-like, and we are almost tempted to announce the arrival of Spring, "for good" this time; but there has been so much fooling with the weather that we don't think it worth while to give any more prophecies just at present.

The funeral of Mr. Wm. Varrell will occur this afternoon at 3 o'clock. Members of the Mechanics' Association and of the Order of Odd Fellows are invited to attend without further notice. The latter will meet at Odd Fellows' Hall at half past two P. M.

—Miss Craker, of Baraboo, Wis., has been awarded $1,000 damages for having been kissed by a railroad conductor, not that she loved kissing less, but money more. And she is tickled to death, too, to think that she got both.

The Literal Boy in the Blue-Coat School.

Among the scholars when Lamb and Coleridge attended school was a poor clergyman's son by the name of Simon Jennings. On account of his dismal and gloomy nature, his playmates had nicknamed him Pontius Pilate. One morning he went up to the master, Dr. Boyer, and said in his usual whispering manner, "Please, doctor the boys call me Pontius Pilate." If there was one thing old Boyer hated more than a false quantity in Greek and Latin, it was the practicing of nicknaming. Rushing down among the scholars from his pedestal of state, with cane in hand, he cried, with his usual voice of thunder, "Listen, boys; the next time I hear any of you say 'Pontius Pilate,' I'll cane you as long as the cane will last. You are to say 'Simon Jennings,' and not 'Pontius Pilate.' Remember that, if you value your hides." Having said this, Jupiter Tonans remounted Olympus, the clouds still hanging on his brow. Next day, when the same class were reciting the Catechism, a boy of a remarkable dull and literal turn of mind had to repeat the creed. He had got as far as "suffered under," and was about popping out the next word, when Boyer's prohibition unluckily flashed upon his obtuse mind. After a moments's hesitation he blurted out, "Suffered under Simon Jennings, cruci———." The rest of the word was never uttered, for Boyer had already sprung like a tiger upon him, and the cane was decending upon his unfortunate shoulders like a Norwegian hailstorm or an Alpine avalanche. When the irate doctor had discharged his cane storm upon him, "What do you mean, you booby, by such blasphemy?" "I only did as you told me," replied the simple-minded Christ-Churchain. "Did as I told you?" roared old Boyer, now wound up to something above the boiling point; "what do you mean?" As he said this he instinctively grasped his cane more furiously. "Yes, doctor, you said we were always to call Pontius Pilate Simon Jennings. Didn't he, Sam?" appealed the unfortunate culprit to Coleridge, who was next to him. Sam said naught; but old Boyer, who saw what a dunce he had to deal with, cried, "Boy, you are a fool! Where are your brains?" Poor Dr. Boyer for a second time was floored; for the scholar said, with an earnestness which proved its truth, but to the intense horror of the learned potentate, "In my stomach, sir." The doctor always respected that boy's stupidity ever after as though half afraid that a stray blow might be unpleasant.

PEYSER & KENNEDY,

The liberal settlement of the Eastern Railroad Company for our losses for Damage by Fire and Water at the East Boston Freight Depot, enables us to throw a few cases more of

FINE WOOLENS, DOESKINS,
DIAGONALS, MELTONS,
KERSEYS, CASSIMERES, and
SILK AND WOOL MIXTURES,

into the market at a low appraisal. The price is marked in plain figures on each piece, and in comparison with the quality will be found to be

ASTONISHINGLY LOW!

Ask your friends and neighbors who have availed themselves of this

GREAT CHANCE,

or come and see for yourselves after examining other stocks, that this is no fancy-dream or fiction, but a palpable fact, that you can buy CLOTHING OR GARMENTS of all qualities at so low a figure that EVERYBODY can afford to clothe themselves. Those of a limited means will find it a comfort to their children and themselves without exhausting their stamps. We lose no money by it, assisting others to PRACTICE ECONOMY these hard times. Every sensible Man, Woman and Boy will at once see that we can sell any of our READY-MADE

DRESS UP

Custom Clothing!

AT LOW PRICES, when we have had the chance to make them up of fine First-Class Materials at half price. This is so plain so everybody that it would be disparaging to the intelligence of our customers to argue the point. Our assortment of

Gentlemen's Fine Garments,

Business Suits, and Garments Suitable for Mechanics, Laborers and Farmers.

is extensive and varied and made up to wear, and those who buy of us will get their money's worth.

We sell no Bankrupt Stock or shop-worn, old faded goods. We do not wish to shock the sensibilities of our customers with fancy tales of dire distress of some (let us hope imaginary) unfortunate trader and his losses. We do not take stock in it. Our Stock and Goods are

NEW, NICE, WELL-MADE AND TRIMMED,

Cost us less than expected, and we sell them so cheap that our customers are cheerful and pleased at our success in business. We make a specialty of

BOYS' AND YOUTHS' SUITS

and guarantee a good fit, at prices from 6 to 15 Dollars, a suit—Coat, Vest and Pant

Fine Linen Bosom Shirts,

custom made, at low prices, and a complete assortment of

HENDERSON & CO.,

ANNOUNCE THEIR

SPRING OPENING

—OF—

Bonnets, Hats, Flowers and Ribbons.

The Largest Stock,
The Latest Styles,
The Lowest Prices.

The beauty of Henderson's opening is you are not obliged to turn your purse inside out, and pull out the bottom dollars to pay for a

NEW BONNET.

It is a well known fact that HENDERSON sells everything in the Millinery line full 25 per cent. less than any other house in the city, and the question is often asked "How can he do it?" We answer:

First. We are not dependent on our Millinery trade alone for a living. We do an extensive business in DRY and FANCY GOODS, and our Millinery is sold with our other goods at a cotton cloth profit, so that you are not obliged to pay us the fancy prices charged by dealers doing an exclusively millinery business.

Second. Our business in STRAW GOODS having increased so enormously (our sales in the summer of 1873 being nearly three hundred cases of Bonnets and Hats, the largest retail trade in the State,) that we buy entirely of manufacturers, thus making a saving in this way alone of fifteen per cent., which goes to the benefit of our customers.

Third. We Trim Hats free of charge; you all know that this one item saves you half a dollar. We have opened a larger stock than ever before, and keep the finest as well as cheaper grades of goods.

Hats, not trimmed,

From One Cent to One Dollar.

Hats, trimmed,

From 50 cts. to $10.00.

And five dollar Trimmed Hats will compare favorably with any ten dollar one in the city.

HERE THEY ARE COMPLETED AND FOR SALE.

TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1615 to '20; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore; Smith's antiquated bark at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Gerrish's Island, &c.

The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in its palmy days, the Light-House at its original height, and a lively sea view, at about 1850—a true picture of days when the white sail ships were growing into the Pisca-qua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the enchanted canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a devoted son of old "Strawberry Bank," so called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.

Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-office.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA- DEBILITY- DROPSY AND HUMORS,

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an ailment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been cheated by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.
R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,
For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs
No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,
After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.
No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.
All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.
TESTIMONIALS.
"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."
"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."
"MR. R. H. EDDY has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every one. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be certain of the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS,
For all the Purposes of a Family Physic
CURING
Costiveness, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Dysentery, Foul Stomach and Breath, Erysipelas, Headache, Piles, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Dillionsness, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Tetter, Tumors and Salt Rheum, Worms, Gout, Neuralgia, as a Dinner Pill, and purifying the Blood, are the most congenial purgative yet perfected. Their effects abundantly show how much they excel all other Pills. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. They purge out the foul humors of the blood; they stimulate the sluggish or disordered organ into action, and they impart health and tone to the whole being. They cure not only the every-day complaints of everybody, but formidable and dangerous diseases. Most skillful physicians, most eminent clergymen, and our best citizens send certificates of cures performed, and of great benefits they have derived from these Pills. They are the safest and best physic for children, because mild as well as effectual. Being sugar-coated, they are easy to take, and being purely vegetable, they are entirely harmless.

The Little Rough Dog.

[N. Y. Ledger.]

"In Scotland it is yet a superstitious principle that the wraith, or messenger of death, appears in the resemblance of one in danger immediately preceding dissolution. This ominous form, purely of a spiritual nature, seems to testify that the extinction of life approaches. It was wont to be exhibited as a little rough dog, when it could be pacified by the death of any other being, 'if crossed and conjured in time.'"—Brown's Superstitions of the Highlands.

"You are too superstitious, Jennie," said Donald Lynn.

The woman he spoke to—his wife—put her rounded hand upon his arm and looked up into his face, with a tear in her eye and a smile on her lip.

"Ah, you men folk!" she said, "It's easy for you to talk that way. You are stronger than we poor bodies, that bide at home and hae but just ourselves to talk to the lang day; and then, Donald, your kin never had the second sight, and you never heard the fearsome stories I've listened to until my blood ran cauld, for you are English bred, though your father was a Scotchman; and I can't forget that your mither bade me na be a fule when I cried 'God bless us' at the winding sheet in the candle.

"Oh, Donald, dear! I had an auntie was wiled away into the sea by a water-kelpie, and my own grandmother sitting in the house-place. I mind the time weel; heard a tramp, tramp, tramp of feet coming, and she lookit up, and it was a funeral—men in black, two and two—and when the bearers passed they lowered the body, and she saw grandfather's face. That day he was killed by a stroke of lightning. And my sister Jean herself saw a spark of fire over her bairn's cradle the night God took it fra her, and—"

"Jennie, for Heaven's sake, stop," cried Donald, half angry, half laughing, "and tell me whether you've seen my funeral, or a spark over my head, or a water-kelpie in the pond beyond, or what is it ails you this morning. Time flies, and I'm loth to leave you so unhappy."

"Oh, bless the Lord, I've seen no evil sight yet," said Jennie; "but it's ill mocking at such things, and the wind wailed so last night that it minded me o' the banshee, and I'm sad without kenning why, and there is no luck in that, Donald. Bide at hame, dearie, don't go to the town to-day. I dread its a presentiment I have."

"Jennie," said Donald, "its nothing of the kind. Drive away these fancies. I must go to the market town to-day, and I must be off now, or be too late. Kiss me, and tell me what I shall bring you home."

"Just your ain sel, darling," said Jennie. "Your ain sel, safe and well, and not angry at me for troubling your English ears with my Scotch fancies."

"Angry!" laughed Donald, "Who could be angry with you, Jennie?"

"Oh, you never believe what I tell you," said Jennie," and I was going to tell you ane ither thing. No one likes to be thought a fule. I don't believe without tokens. There's name in the house but me—my house I mean, where mither and father and the rest of my kinsfolk bides—but have seen the wee rough doggie."

"The little rough dog. Surely he's no ghost?" cried Donald.

"What he is nane can say," said Jennie, solemnly. "But he comes before a death, and sits in the chair of one that is to die. There is only one way to save him and that is for another one to die for him; and few men will die for another. Ask them all, Donald, they'll tell you it is true."

"No doubt of it, Jennie," laughed Donald, "and now good-by until I come back again. Don't stay here alone. Go and see a neighbor, or have one come and spend the day with you. There's Glegg's daughter, a wholesome girl with nothing foolish about her. She'll laugh your low spirits away in half an hour."

Then he kissed his wife and ran out to the wagon in which Jack the farm man sat waiting for him, and the great heavily laden thing creaked and groaned away down the road, leaving a fragrance of fresh vegetables and ripe apples behind it. Jennie did not watch it quite out of sight, for that was not "lucky," but she listened as long as she could to the creaking wheels, and then went about her household duties, trying her best to drive away the low spirits that possessed her quite unaccountably, for, as she said to herself, she was, or ought to be, the happiest woman in Christendom.

The house was soon tidy and the morning's work done. Certain good things were prepared for Donald's supper, and then Jennie, with her knitting in her hand, sat in her little cottage porch waiting for her husband.

She had dressed herself in a simple, pretty gown that he loved to see her wear, and had braided her glossy brown hair about her head, and pinned a new-blown rose in it; but her heart was not quite at rest. She could not smile until he came safely back to her.

"Then," said Jennie to herself, "I'll let him laugh all this away, if he can. Perhaps, after all, I am foolish to believe all these things. He kens saw much mair than I do about everything else, that perhaps he's right about this. Only grannie was a wise auld body too."

"It's na descorable to be wise," said Jennie, after a pause, "and God keep me fra the second sight. Perhaps, now I live in England, I'm rid of all these things. They never did come to the English, I am tauld."

She was in a more comfortable frame of mind now. Reasoning with herself had done her good. Day was drawing to a close; the light lingered yet upon the distant hills, but within the cottage kitchen, shaded as it was by its wide porch, the shadows had gathered thickly.

It was nearly time for Donald to return. The fire was lighted on the hearth, and the red light flickered upon the walls, and swept in a broad flood over the hearth. The kettle sung cheerily. Something that smelled very delicious simmered in a little pan. The tins upon the dresser reflected the firelight on the burnished sides; and now that Jennie, moving lightly about, spread a snowy cloth of coarse but well-bleached linen, and set upon it the blue cups and saucers that had been the wedding gift of her old grannie, the place assumed an aspect of homely comfort that would have banished the most dismal ghost that ever walked.

"It's a' ready for him now," said Jennie, as she brewed the tea in a quaint, squat, little brown tea-pot, that reminded one of a goblin with one arm akimbo; 'and send him soon. God bless him!"

She sat down on a little stool before the blaze as she spoke. The light glinted in her eyes and in the ripples of her hair. Her lips parted in a smile.

"If it's no' the wind amongst the trees of the park, I hear the wagon wheels now," she said. "Ah, what a fule I've been to have so much dread on me to-day. He's coming home to me noo, my Donald is."

As she spoke, her eyes turned upon the door, and with a smothered cry she started to her feet, and stood glaring at the object that stood there. It was the little rough dog, that had been the forerunner of every death in her family—the little rough dog, that had been seen by one and all her kinspeople, save herself. Now it had come to her.

It advanced. What its color was she could not tell in that light. It looked black to her, but it entered and came towards the ingle side.

Now, if it did as that wraith had always done before, it would take its seat upon the chair of the one who was doomed to death.

On the right stood her little, low sewing-chair. On the left, Donald's solid old chair of carved wood—an heirloom handed down to him from his great-great-grand-father. Which would he choose?

There were only two places for the "wee rough doggie." Only one to die out of that small household.

"Ah! heaven send that he takes mine," said Jennie to herself. "Heaven send, since one of us must go, it's me, not my Donald."

But as she uttered this prayer, the phantom dog sprang into Donald's great arm chair, and sat there for a moment, seeming to look full into Jennie's face with his horrible eyes.

She stood trembling in every limb, but strong in a certain way. Too strong to faint or cry out, until she had done all she could for the one she loved.

"If any will die for him he may be saved," she said to herself, remembering what had been told her. Then she stretched out her hands toward the phantom dog.

"Gang awa!" she screamed. "Ye came for a life, and I'll gie ye ane, but not my Donald's. I'll gie ye my ain. Gang awa! gang awa!"

Jennie instantly ran to a little corner cupboard. Groping in it with trembling hand she found a little bottle; it was full of laudanum which Donald had bought for an aching tooth. She clasped it tight in one hand and with the other seized a bit of charred wood from the fire-place and wrote these words upon the white-washed wall:

"DONALD DARLING—When you come home I shall be dead. The rough wee doggie appeared to me. He sat in your chair. One of us must die, and better that than live to be your widow. Good-by.

YOUR JENNIE."

Then she swallowed the laudanum and knelt down before her husband's chair and hid her face there.

The great wagon lumbered up the road and stopped at the gate of the farm-house.

Donald Lynn threw the reins to his hired man, and pulling a little parcel from under the seat, jumped down and ran lightly into the house. At his heels ran a little rough dog, yelping and jumping upon him.

"Jennie!" cried Donald; "Jennie, my lass, where are you? I've brought you a bonny blue gown, and something you'll like better—something to keep you company! Here's Grip, my old dog, that I had when I was a boy, Jennie. I've begged him of mother, and he'll drive the ghosts away for you finely. He ran ahead of me, the little beggar! He knows the house well; I used to bring him over while I was fitting it up for you. Jennie—what, asleep? Jennie!"

He bent over his wife, who knelt with her head in the great carved chair. He strove to raise her; she fell heavily forward again.

"My God! what is this?" he cried. "Jack! Jack! A light! a light. Something horrible has happened!"

A moment more, and Jack had a lit a candle, and the two men had laid the woman on the long settle at the end of the room. In vain they tried to rouse her. In vain Donald showered kisses on her pallid lips. She neither moved nor answered.

"Ride for the doctor, Jack," said Donald, at last, turning his wet face toward his hired man. "I doubt it is no use though. I doubt she's gone."

And as he spoke, both men saw for the first time, the black writing on the white wall, and read at the same instant.

"The rough wee doggie has appeared to me. He sat in your chair. One of us must die; and better that than live to be your widow."

"Grip ran ahead of us, master," cried Jack. "It was him missus saw."

"'She has given her life for mine," cried Donald. "Oh, my noble Jennie, would I lay dead beside you."

He lifted his wife in his arms, rocking to and fro as a mother does with her ailing babe, and so Jack left him as he galloped away for the doctor. So he found him, when he returned, half-mad and nearly dead with grief. But this is not a tragedy. The doctor soon discovered that Jennie was not dead, only stupefied. She had not found laudanum enough in the bottle to kill her outright, and through his skill, under God's mercy, she finally recovered, and took her place in the little household once more. And when all came to, the occurrences of that day—which neither Donald nor Jennie can bear to remember—brought good to both, for they cured the young wife of all her folly. With the little rough dog frisking about the kitchen, she cannot put faith in a phantom in his shape; and as for coffins in the coals and shrouds in the candles, wraiths and kelpies and shrieking banshees, she will have none of them; for she knows as well as Donald does that her superstition nearly parted them, and that had there been but a little more of that black poison in the bottle she emptied for his sake, Donald would have been a lonely man and she a habitant of the world of shadows to-day, instead of the buxom, blooming, living woman who makes his home so happy.

Antecedents of the Pomeroy Family.

In an article in the Boston Globe we find the following concerning the family of the Pomeroy boy, charged with the late murder of a child in Dorchester.

The ancestry of both the father and the mother of the boy derives from the vicinity of the Canadian border, the mother of the boy being a native of Eastport, Me., and the grandfather on the Pomeroy side having come from some town not far distant from Eastport. The boy gets his name from his grandfather, whose name is Jesse Pomeroy, and who is yet living in New York, where he carries on the ship building business on North River. He is about 70 years of age. More than forty years ago, he first appeared in this vicinity in the town of Hingham, where he engaged in his trade of ship carpentry. He boarded with an estimable lady of that town, whose daughter, also spoken of as a very worthy and amiable person, he afterwards married. The couple afterwards lived in Charlestown, where Thomas, the father of the boy now under arrest, was born.

The union was not a happy one, and as the current report has it the fault was with the man, not the woman. In some subsequent divorce proceedings it appeared that Pomeroy ill-treated his wife in various harsh ways. The woman afterwards died and he married again in New York, this time a woman who is said to be equal to the emergency and maintains her position as mistress of the situation. Thomas Pomeroy, the father of the boy under arrest, was born in Charlestown. He is now forty years or more of age.

He married Ruth A. Snowman of Eastport, Me., but after a while the couple separated. Pomeroy, as has been previously stated, came to Boston and engaged in work at the market. While living in Charlestown he was a stoker in the Navy Yard and attended the fires of the boiler used in pumping out the dry dock. Mrs. Pomeroy retired to South Boston, and established business as a dressmaker. The boy was left to drift pretty much at his own will. Contrary to the previous statements there is plenty of evidence to show that the reading of dime novels and narratives of bloody tragedies among the Indians and others constituted a good share of the boy's mental nourishment, and herein he was not restricted, but commended rather for his studious literary disposition. The mother of the boy is spoken of as an acute woman, and she certainly managed well in getting the boy out of the Reform School. It is a usage to which years have given sanction, and which seems to have an inherent fitness, that when an effort is made to secure the release of a party under punishment for crime, the person making the prosecution shall be notified before action is taken by the authorities. The custom was honored in the breach, this time, and the city marshal of Chelsea, who made the complaints under which the Pomeroy boy was sentenced, was not informed of any movement for the discharge of the culprit. The first knowledge that he had that the boy was at large was in reading the accounts in the papers of his arrest, last week, at South Boston.

Temperance Lectures.

RAYMOND, May 2d.

The "Woman's Movement," "Woman's Crusade," etc., are terms that abound in the papers and startle the attention as earnest multitudes read on to see what comes of the faithful and persevering efforts of bands of ladies, publicly and in places where bad liquors are sold, or if doors are shut against them in the streets near, singing songs of devotion, offering prayer to him who rules in the heavens, and lifting voices of entreaty to men engaged in the traffic to cease their destructive work.

In Raymond there has been nothing of this yet, but perhaps a step that may be initiatory to something still more effective. On the evening of April 30, Miss Emma B. Kelly gave a good temperance lecture. She is young, but well educated, and has given attention to Rhetoric and Elocution, so that there is a grace and finish to her style of delivery at once pleasing and effective. Good judges think her well calculated to do good in the cause in which her heart feels a deep interest. Statements are made that are to the point, arguments that are convincing, and entreaties that are forcible. Friends of temperance in any town in this County can have the benefit of her lectures after a proper time by applying to the undersigned. She is of Franklin, and is sustained by voluntary contributions.

The notorious Mrs. Clem, the Indiana murderess as she is popularly known, has finally succeeded in regaining her liberty. The case is one of the most remarkable on record. The indictment charged Mrs. Nancy C. Clem with the murder of Jacob Young, in September, 1868. Mrs. Clem has had four trials, has been twice convicted of murder in the second degree and sentenced to life imprisonment, and has spent four years in jail, two of which were in prison. The case came up a fifth time in the Criminal Court of Boone county, Indiana, when the Prosecuting Attorney of that county moved a noll prosequi to the indictment on the grounds that Marion county and the State were indisposed to assist in the prosecution; that the State was unable to get witnesses without great expense; and that Boone county was under no obligations whatever to prosecute Marion county criminals without a guaranty that the expenses would be refunded. The motion was granted, and the unsatisfactory finale consummated.

At Cincinnati, last week, Mr. Jefferson's eldest son, Mr. Charles B. Jefferson, acted the sailor, Hendrick Vedder, in the last act of "Rip Van Wrinkle." The Gazette says: "He bears a striking resemblance to his father, and in the little piece of acting he had to do he does no discredit to his parentage."

The supposed murderer of the Hamnet family, in Homestead, Penn., has confessed the deed and been arrested.

Seven persons were killed and three fatally wounded by a boiler explosion in Shawangunk, N. Y., on Saturday.

The senate finance committee has virtually completed a new currency bill. Its provisions are understood to be free banking with 50 per cent. retirement of greenbacks, the retirement to begin at the present volume of the currency, 5 per cent. of the reserve to be kept in the Treasury for the purposes of redemption, and specie payment to be resumed in 1879.

At Burlington, Vt., Sunday, a shocking fratricide occurred. Two brothers, William and George Buchanan, had an altercation in which the latter stabbed the former seven times with a jack-knife. William died from the wounds in forty-five minutes. The difficulty was caused by opprobrious epithets applied to the murderer's wife by the deceased, who was thereupon assaulted by his brother in his sleeping room. The murderer undoubtedly committed the fatal deed in a fit of ungovernable rage. Both parties are young men.

James Davis, an insane man, 30 years old, murdered his father on Saturday in Stetson, Maine, by cutting his head nearly off with an axe. He was taken into custody, and when asked why he did it, replied, "Washington ordered me to do it." He was released from the asylum a short time since, having been pronounced cured.

More crevasses in the Mississippi levees are reported.

State News.

Previous to the adoption of a resolution in the recent Methodist conference declaring it to be the duty of temperance men to "vote only for men known to be on the right side of the line in this 'irrepressible conflict' between license and prohibition," Rev. James Pike spoke against trying to instruct members how to vote, and closed by saying that he presumed he should have his picture drawn in the Prohibition Herald as better men than he had been traduced in its columns.

A mill at Hillsboro' has had to suspend on account of the belts underneath being under water.

Nearly or quite 100,000 pounds of maple sugar has been made in Campton this Spring.

While some workmen were making an excavation to procure gravel for grading purposes in the rear of the brick block on Maine street in Newmarket, a few days since, they exhumed the body of a human skeleton, evidently that of a full grown person, and in a good state of preservation.

A meeting of the executive committee of the State Pharmaceutical Association, which was formed some time since by the druggists of the State, was held at Manchester, on Thursday. Messrs. Thatcher of of Portsmouth, Foster of Concord and Tufts of Dover were appointed a committee to revise the constitution. Messrs. Foster and Eastman of Concord and Gerrish of Manchester were appointed to petition the next Legislature for a charter for the Association.

The Laconia Democrat says that Mrs. Alonzo Sargent was attacked by a tame coon belonging to her on Saturday last. Her left arm was lacerated in a shocking manner from wrist to shoulder. Fears are entertained that the poisonous nature of the coon's teeth may make it serious. The militia collected and put a head on his cognomen, whose corpse weighed 50 pounds.

On Saturday Mr. Nathaniel Perkins, of Manchester, 56 years of age, fell from his piazza a distance of fifteen feet, struck upon the sidewalk, badly fracturing his skull and otherwise injuring him about the body. He was taken up insensible and has remained so since.

Miss Mary E. Woodman, formerly of East Concord, about a year since went to Liverpool, with an uncle who is a sea captain, and from thence she sailed without friends or acquaintances to Oporto, Portugal, where she opened a select school and gave instruction in English, French and music. Her school is now patronized by some of the first families in Oporto. Her success shows what a brave young girl can do when she goes to work in earnest.

Charles Ingall, of Hooksett, who is employed in shifting on the Concord Railroad, at Manchester, fell from a pile of wood, on Saturday forenoon, and crushed his head so badly that he cannot recover.

Eaton & Ayer, manufactures of bobbins at Nashua, have just received an order for a lot of bobbins from Scotland.

John Abbot of Bradford, the brakeman who was injured in the head Monday morning died of his injuries on Wednesday.

A child of Rev. Mr. Roland of Amherst was killed in four minutes, on Thursday night, by a dose of poison bought of a peddler for rhubarb.

There are in the State thirty-seven lodges of Odd Fellows with a total membership of 5087, an increase of nearly 400 during the year 1873.

A cremation society is proposed, with head-quarters in Concord.

The towns of Tilton and Northfield think they have a fire-bug, and they offer $600 for his arrest.

—The Portland Press says that five years ago a gentleman in that city scratched his name on a nickel coin, and sent it on its travels. Eighteen months after, that piece came into the possession of a Lowell acquaintance, who marked his name upon it. Two years later it turned up in Pennsylvania, and came into the hands of a former chum of the Portlander. Recognizing the name, he inscribed his also on the coin. One day recently the man who started this piece of money on its travels was making a purchase in a Lowell store, when the identical nickel which left his pocket five years before was handed to him in change.

Animated Machinery.

Our bodies are like time-pieces. When they run down we must wind them up; otherwise they will stop forever. What key will best perform this work of renovation? Experience has shown that it can be accomplished more rapidly and certainly by a course of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters than by any other article under the sun. That searching yet harmless agent seems to reach every spring and lever, the wheel, so to speak, of the living machine. The relaxed nerves are braced, the torbid liver is stirred, the weak stomach is strengthened, the disordered bowels are regulated, the lost appetite is restored, the clouded mind is brightened—in short the whole inert system is stimulated into healthy action. New life is put into every fibre, and physical regeneration ensues. This is the testimony of thousands. In every city, town and village of the union living proofs of its efficacy may be found.

"Discretion is the better part of valor;" but all are not discreet. When attacked by diseases of the kidneys or urinary organs, take the great diuretic, HELMBOLD'S BUCHU. It is warranted. Beware of worthless imitations. The genuine may be known by the private propriety stamp of H. T. Helmbold, on each bottle. For sale by all druggists.

SUFFERERS from Scrofula and Scrofulous affections, clean up! Why wear your Pimples, Blotches, Ulcers, Sores? Why have your life twisted out of you by Dyspepsia, Rheumatism and Gout? Why suffer Syphilitic and Mercurial diseases to rot the bones in your body, or the flesh off your bones? Why let your sluggish blood drag, and scatter its distempers through your veins? AYER'S COMP. EXT OF SARSAPARILLA cures these complaints, and cleanses them out of the system. Use it faithfully, and you bring to society a healthier, cleaner, and far more acceptable member.—[Democrat, Baltimore, Md.]

Don't Temporise with Piles.—Ointments, lotions, electuaries and all manner of quack nostrums are a waste of time and money. The only absolutely infallible cure for these painful diseases is ANAKESIS, discovered by DR. SILSBEE. It has been pronounced by scientific men as the happiest discovery made in medicine for 200 years, it affords instant relief from pain in the worst cases and has cured more than 30,000 sufferers permanently. All doctors prescribe it. Price $1.00. Sold by Druggists everywhere. Depot, 46 Walker st., New York.

Blessings brighten as they take their flight.—If you have a good head of hair take care of it; once gone and we realize its loss far more than we appreciate its presence. The BEARINE is taking the place of all other hair dressings, because it is healthful to the hair and delightful to use.

Don't be Discouraged. Suppose you have "tried fifty remedies" and received no benefit, is there therefore "no balm in Gilead?" Verily there is. Your liver may be congested, your stomach half paralyzed, your nerves quivering, your muscles knotted with torture, your bowels constricted, your lungs diseased, your blood full of impurities—yet in one week after commencing a course of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS you will feel like a new creature. a29 4w

Will commence promptly at 8 o'clock this evening, in Mechanics' Hall, and will probably be the most interesting of the course. It is said that late discoveries by Wyman and others of ancient skulls in Florida, and a very ancient California skull, have an important bearing on the Darwinian theory and place the question in a new light. This subject will be delineated to-night by Prof. Gunning, with lecture and blackboard illustrations.

The Boston Transcript says "the city of New York is now feeling the pauperizing effect of its ill-directed charity last winter." Fourteen thousand people feed at the public soup houses.—The taxpayers and Overseers of the Poor of Portsmouth, also, and the victims themselves, must suffer similarly from mistaken charity of former officials here.

To the regular trips of the steamer "Emerald," as previously announced, one more has just been added,—the steamer will hereafter until further notice leave the navy yard for this city at 2 o'clock, P. M.; returning, will leave this side at half-past two.

Capt. Rand, of steamer Clara Batemen, was on Saturday evening the recipient of a splendid silver pitcher and salver, bearing the following inscription: "Presented to Capt. Rand, Steamer Clara Batemen, by his friends at the Appledore."

Dr. Stevens desires us to say that for the present he will receive his patients from 9 A. M. to 1 P. M., only.

Mr. John P. Lyman, who died on Sunday, was the son of Isaac Lyman, Esq., a lawyer of York, Me. He was for many years a large dealer in iron and steel, was at one time a Director in the Portsmouth Bank (whose charter expired in 1841,) and at the time of his death was a Trustee in the Portsmouth Savings Bank. He was for many years a Superintendent of the South Parish Sunday School. He married a sister of Rev. Dr. Peabody, who survives him, and he leaves a son and two daughters.

The full length portrait of Hon. John P. Hale painted by Mr. U. D. Tenny is now on exhibition in Foster's book store.

Mr. James Miller has been appointed foreman moulder at the navy yard, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Mr. Thomas S. White.

Schooner Mary J. Adams, of this port, before reported ashore near Yarmouth, Mass., has been got off and towed into Hyannis.

Messrs. Tufts & Leonard, 212 Washington street, Boston, announce the opening of their new Boston hat store in our paper today. The senior partner has a host of friends in this vicinity, and both are well and favorably known in Boston and vicinity. With a fine new store and a stock entirely new they offer to young men a choice of all that is newest, choicest and most stylish. Call on them when in Boston, whether you wish to purchase or not.

An Original Idea at Last.

The many people in this State who imagine the Concord Monitor to be always and in everything but a faint echo of the "respectable Boston papers," and that nothing ever appears in its columns which does not originate on Beacon Hill, are hereby notified that an original idea has at last found its way into that paper,—the idea that the CHRONICLE originated an article credited to another paper,—the only original idea we remember to have seen in the Monitor since the present management took charge of it. We reproduce the Monitor's crushing paragraph, as follows:

Our attention has been called to a scurrilous fling at the Monitor contained in a late number of the Portsmouth CHRONICLE, which is credited by that delectable sheet to the Biddeford, (Me.,) Journal. As we do not exchange with the Journal we have no means of knowing whether the fling originated with it; but as we have always supposed the editor of that paper to be a gentleman in spite of his patronymic, and as the statement credited to him implies what is probably false, viz: that he has access to files of our paper, we shall, until otherwise assured by himself, believe that this paragraph originated in Portsmouth.

We glory in showing fair play to everybody, and when we attack what any one has said we give our readers what he said, —not merely our strictures upon it. Then we are always careful to credit any paper from which we borrow information or ideas and never seek to blame other papers for our expressed opinions,—we neither ask other papers to share with us their glory or to shield us from censure. All this must be utterly incomprehensible to the Monitor man,—who talks of a "scurrilous fling" which we pretended to copy from the Biddeford Journal but in reality wrote ourselves, but does not give the "scurrilous" paragraph, so we print it once more:

The Concord, N. H., Monitor, which has had the Boston Advertiser and Beacon Hill on the brain, like other papers which have an itching to rub themselves against some of the cod-fish aristocracy to make themselves respectable, has been taken in hand by the plucky Portsmouth CHRONICLE, and shown to be so ridiculous that its friends have thrown up the sponge and cried "quits."

The Monitor man "believes that this paragraph originated in Portsmouth." It matters little what he believes, unless his faith puts more force into his pen than that article has yet exhibited; but he may confidently believe that our editorial expressions "originate in Portsmouth" and not in the sanctum of any Boston (or other) paper, however "respectable" and "leading" it may be. He has "always supposed the editor" of the Biddeford Journal "to be a gentleman;" so have we, and we still suppose so; but our Concord monitor can rest easy, in perfect confidence that nobody will make such remarks about him.

Did Not Go to the Ball.

[Oakland (Cal.) News]

This young fellow had a soul above buttons, and he scorned the idea of wearing the conventional costume of the bal masque. But what should he wear? His brain seized upon the query, and shortly an idea was evolved. He chose the character of a monkey. The eventful evening was at hand; he went to his hotel and donned his disguise. Being a wealthy young man, or economical, it's all the same, he concluded to walk. His first achievement was to frighten a chambermaid nearly to death, and in the next hall his appearance gave a small child a fit. Reaching the street door, he boldly went forth clad in his snug-fitting suit, and playfully swinging his caudal appendage; but he had not proceeded far, when a little dog ran out and barked at him. This called out another dog, and soon another joined their ranks in the pursuit of the strange animal. Finally a bull-dog put in an appearance, and then the young man and his courage both took flight. The dogs had the best of it from the outset, and they soon ran their quarry to earth; in other words, the monkey-man concluded that the better part of valor would be to climb a high board fence. He did that, and for two long hours he sat there in the cold night wind, before he was released from his unpleasant position by people passing within hailing distance.

Hon. John P. Hale.

By Rev. Thomas W. Brown, of Dover

IN MEMORIAM.

A Discourse commemorative of the Character & Career of HON. JOHN PARKER HALE. By Rev. George B. Spaulding, of Dover.

For Sale by Joseph H. Foster.

Portsmouth Chronicle.

—A henpecked man is of opinion that a kind word will always go further than a flat-iron.

—Four years ago John Larch of Alabama disappeared from home, leaving the following note on the river's brink: "Farewell, Susan! you have driven me to the grave!" by which he meant that he was going to Cincinnati to live with another young woman. All of which being proved, John now resides in a place much drier than the river.

—The New York Tribune says the occupants of a Second Avenue car were much amused a few evenings since by a colloquy that passed between the conductor and an inebriated passenger. "Come," said the conductor, "here's your five cents. Get off." Get off? what for?" "Well, because you're full." "Full! full of what?" "Full of whisky." "Whisky! what's that?" "Well, you're drunk." "Drunk! drunk! what's that?" The argument continued until the conductor dropped the five cents down the inebriate's back, and forcibly ejected him. As the car started the passengers were terrified to perceive their late companion following and flourishing a revolver. Fortunately he tripped on a stone, and was last seen stretched at full length in the mud.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN HAIR RENEWER!

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.

Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever. It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color. It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff; and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.

By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.

As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.

Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE,

FOR THE WHISKERS.

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

DYSPEPSIA DEBILITY. DROPSY AND HUMORS.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

Makes The Weak Strong.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid accretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Rumors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building upon an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

AMERICAN & FOREIGN PATENTS.
R. H. EDDY,
SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,
For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs
No. 76 STATE ST., OPPOSITE KILBY ST., BOSTON,
After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Researches made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.
No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.
All models; for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.
TESTIMONIALS.
"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."
"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of getting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."
"Mr. R. H. Eddy has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS,
For all the Purposes of a Family Physic
CURING
Costiveness, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Dysentery, Foul Stomach and Breath, Erysipelas, Headache, Piles, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Tetter, Tumors and Salt Rheum, Worms, Gout, Neuralgia, as a Dinner Pill, and purifying the Blood, are the most consonial purgative yet perfected. Their effects abundantly show how much they excel all other Pills. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. They purge out the foul humors of the blood; they stimulate the sluggish or disordered organ into action, and they impart health and tone to the whole being. They cure not only the every-day complaints of everybody, but formidable and dangerous diseases. Most skillful physicians, most eminent clergymen, and our best citizens send certificates of cures performed, and of great benefits they have derived from these Pills. They are the safest and best physic for children, because mild as well as effectual. Being sugar-coated, they are easy to take; and being purely vegetable, they are entirely harmless.

PROPOSALS FOR MATERIALS TO BE SUPPLIED TO THE NAVY YARDS UNDER THE COGNIZANCE OF THE BUREAU OF CONSTRUCTION AND REPAIR.

NAVY DEPARTMENT,
BUREAU OF CONSTRUCTION AND REPAIR,
Washington, D. C., April 6, 1874.

SEALED PROPOSALS to furnish Timber and other materials for the Navy for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1875, will be received at this Bureau until 12 o'clock, M. of Thursday, May 7, 1874, at which time the bids will be opened.

The proposals must be addressed to the "Chief of the Bureau of Construction and Repair, Navy Department, Washington," and must be endorsed "Proposals for Timber &c., for the Navy," that they may be distinguished from ordinary business letters.

To prevent confusion, and facilitate the opening of the bids, parties bidding for supplies at several yards will enclose their bids in separate envelopes for each yard, endorsed with the name of the yard for which the bid is made.

Printed schedules for such classes as parties deal in and intend to bid for, together with instructions to bidders, giving the forms of proposal, for guarantee, and of certificate of guarantors, with printed forms of offer, will be furnished to such persons as desire to bid, on application to the Commandants of the respective Navy Yards, and those of all the yards on application to the Bureau.

The Commandant of each Navy Yard and the purchasing Paymaster for each station will have a copy of the schedules of the other yards, for examination only, in order that persons who intend to bid may judge whether it is desirable to make application for any of the classes of those yards.

The proposals must be for the whole of a class, but the Department reserves the right to reduce the whole class should the interest of the Government require it, before the execution of the contract. All applications for information, or for the schedules of samples, must be made to the Commandants of the respective yards.

Bids or offers will be received only from parties who are bona fide dealers in, or manufacturers of, the articles they offer to furnish. The guarantors must be certified by the Collector of Internal Revenue for the district in which they reside.

The contract will be awarded to the person who makes the lowest bid and gives the guarantee required by law, the Navy Department, however, reserving the right to reject the lowest bid, or any which it may deem exhorbitant.

Under the provisions of the second section of the act approved March 3, 1863, the offer of any person who, as principal or surety, has been a defaulter in any previous contract with the Navy Department will not be received.

Sureties in the full amount will be required to sign the contract, and their responsibility must be certified to the satisfaction of the Navy Department.

As additional security twenty per centum will be withheld from the amount of the bills until the contracts shall have been completed and eighty per centum of the amount of each bill, approved in triplicate by the Commandant of the respective yards, will be paid by the Paymaster of the station designated in the contract, or, if none is specified, by the Paymaster nearest the yard where the goods are delivered, within ten days after the warrant for the same shall have been passed by the Secretary of the Treasury.

The classes of this Bureau are numbered and designated as follows:

No. 1, White Oak Logs; No 13, White Pine Plank, Boards; No. 15, White Ash, Elm, Beech; No. 16, White Ash Oars; No. 18, Black Walnut, Mahogany, Maple, Cherry; No. 22, Cypress, Cedar; No. 23, Black Spruce; No. 24, White Oak Staves and Headings; No. 25, Lignumvitæ; No. 33, Wrought Iron, round and square; No. 33, Wrought Iron, flat; No. 34, Iron, plate; No. 35, Steel; No. 37, Iron Bolts; No. 38, Iron Wrought Nails; No. 39, Iron Cut Nails; No. 42, Lead, pipe, sheet; No. 43, Zinc; No. 44, Tin; No. 48, Locks, Hinges, Bolts, of brass and iron; No. 49, Screws of brass and iron; No. 50, Files; No. 51, Augers; No. 52, Tools for ship carpenters; No. 55, Tools for use in yard and shops; No. 54, Hardware; No. 56, White Lead; No. 57, Zinc Paints; No. 58, Colored Paints, Dryers; No. 59, Linseed Oil; No. 60, Varnish, Spirits Turpentine; No. 61, Sperm and Lard Oil; No. 64, Tallow, Soap; No. 65, Fish Oil; No. 68, Glass; No. 69, Brushes; No. 70, Dry Goods for upholstering; No. 71, Stationery; No. 72, Crucibles; No. 73, Ship Chandlery; No. 74, Acids; No. 75, Resin, Pitch, Crude Turpentine; No. 77, Belting, Packing; No. 78, Leather, pumps, rigging, lacing; No. 80, Anthracite Coal; No. 81, Semi-Bituminous Coal; No. 87, Bituminous Coal; No. 88, Charcoal; No. 89, Wood.

Permanence of Pottery.

[New Quarterly Review.]

Pottery owes nothing of its beauty of its serviceableness to its material, for that is but the dust beneath our feet, and everything to the hand that fashions it, and to the mind that directs the hand; so is it that it comes to have so purely human an interest. It is a bit of man's work with no adventitious aid whatever. If the form is beautiful, or quaint, or ugly, or commonplace, it is that the plastic clay has followed and exactly produced the conception in the maker's mind; it is formless, without coherence, and all but colorless; it takes the form, and the consistency, and color that are ideal with a man who transforms the gray earth into a piece of pottery, and, when he has done this, his handiwork lasts forever.

Coins rust with time, statues of marble and bronze crumble or are corroded, inscriptions are obliterated, stone walls fall to the earth, and the pyramids themselves are slowly disappearing; every monument that mankind have thought most lasting yields to time except the work of the potter. The most frail of man's productions is yet the most permanent. The glorious tints on the Majolica ware are still as bright as when they were drawn from the kiln, while the pictures of Raphael and Leonardo, painted in the same generation, are already fading. We have perfect specimens of the Greek pottery which can not be of later date than a thousand years before the Christian era. Glazed mural tiles have been discovered among the ruins of Babylonian palaces, still bright enough to decorate a king's chamber; and in the catacombs of Egypt are found glazed figures of Ra, the sun god, of Anubis, and of the Scarabæus, as pure and brilliant in color as the latest productions of Deck or Minton.

A Temperance Story.

[Louisville Commercial.]

There lives in the vicinity of Jeffersonville a big fat man. We never saw him on a pair of hay-scales, but we judge he would pull down about two hundred and fifty. The old gentleman is in the habit of coming to the city occasionally, and sometimes gets more aboard than he is able to carry conveniently. He had a favorite horse which he usually brought to town, but on one occasion he broke from his hitchings, went home and left his owner at a tavern. The family of the old man has been busy of late trying to induce him to give up his love for beer. To this end prayers were offered up and importunities were made, but they seemed to have little effect. A few days ago he was coming to the city, and he ordered that his horse should be left in the stable, and the old family mare put to the buggy. Climbing in, the old gentleman pursued his way quietly until he arrived at the first saloon on his route. Here he made an effort to halt, but the old mare declined to respond to the pull of the lines. When urged to halt she tried to kick the front part of the buggy out. She was permitted to have her own way, but when an effort was made to halt her at the next drinking place she again revolted against authority, and wouldn't stop,—and during his entire trip he was unable to induce the old mare to wait until he could get a drink. She would stop anywhere except at a place where spirits were sold. Being of a superstitious turn of mind the old gentleman thought he saw a warning in the actions of the old mare, and he has resolved to give up drinking. There is rejoicing in the family of the fat man at the happy turn of circumstances. The mare has probably caught the temperance fever.

Remarks of Senator Wadleigh.

During the Sumner eulogies in the House of Representatives, Mr. Wadleigh said that representing in part upon this floor a State contiguous to Massachusetts and a people closely allied to hers by many ties, I cannot refrain from briefly expressing upon this occasion the profound sorrow that bowed their hearts when they heard that Charles Sumner was no more. In common with the people of the whole country they recognized his eminent public services, and even when disagreeing with him never lost their faith in his honesty of purpose and unfaltering devotion to the cause to which his life was given. But New Hampshire has other reasons peculiar to herself for cherishing his memory. Seven years before he came here to occupy the seat of Daniel Webster, John P. Hale appealed from the decision of his party to the voters of New Hampshire upon the question of slavery extension. Almost single-handed and alone against a party unequaled in discipline and ignorant of defeat, among a people nearly as steadfast and unchanging as their granite hills, he won one of the greatest victories ever recorded in our political annals, kindling by his eloquence the love of liberty and hatred of oppression that lie at the core of humanity. He was borne into the Senate upon a popular torrent which burst through the crust of a party like lava from the heart of a mountain. Here for four years he stood, the isolated and ostracized representative of a principle stronger than all parties and destined to triumph over them all. In 1851 Massachusetts, as if to pay the debt she owed for the men who marched from the Granite State to die at Bunker Hill, placed Charles Sumner at the side of John P. Hale. It was the reinforcement of a forlorn hope and revived the drooping spirits of the opponents of slavery. What followed is known to all and will never be forgotten. Linked to the emancipation of four millions of slaves the memory of such men is as imperishable as the stars, and after this marble pile shall have crumbled into dust and every existing political organization shall have been destroyed by all-devouring time, Sumner's incorruptible honesty and steadfast devotion to the cause of human freedom will be gratefully remembered, for these make one of the names on fame's eternal bead roll worthy to be filled.

The Arkansas War.

A special from Little Rock on Monday says that Judges Searle and Bennett of the supreme court were arrested on the arrival of the Memphis train at Arkenta, opposite Little Rock, by Captain Williams, acting under orders of Governor Baxter. The judges refused to be arrested without proper authority, whereupon Captain Williams made a signal and a band of armed men entered the car with cocked revolvers, and Searle and Bennett were forcibly taken from the train, and up to the time the despatch was written they had not been heard of in Little Rock. The supreme court was to convene in Little Rock. Judge Stephenson, also of the supreme court, was on the train, but it seems that his presence was not known, else he too would have been arrested. The affair created great excitement in Brooks' camp. A despatch has been received by the Secretary of War, from Shersff Oliver of Pulaski county, asking aid of the United States troops to serve writs of habeas corpus for Judges Searle and Bennett, arrested by the order of Baxter. He expresses the fear if the writs are not served at once the judges will be assassinated.

The Mississippi Flood.

There is no abatement in the crevasse overflow. Edgar Frasend, manager of Bull River plantation, Assumption parish, says: "In this section of the parish there is a population of about 1000, white and black, destitute of the first necessaries of life, living on rafts and houstetops, with no transportation of any kind, and the nearest land twenty miles distant. All their cattle and horses are drowned, and the water is still rising six inches in twenty-four hours."

Mrs. S. A. Briggs, writing from Hesperia plantation, Madison parish, says: "Permit me to call your attention to the sufferings of the freedmen on my plantation, 110 in number. We are submerged. Merchants not extending credit, provisions exhausted and stock destroyed. Women and children come to me and I am without means to help them or myself."

Brashear City has an average of three feet of water, near five feet in front of the town, and but three acres of dry ground in the place. Good are stored in the railroad depot, and the space not so occupied is used for a public market. Avoca plantation on Bayou Bœuf has 600 acres of cane and corn under water. On Bayou Bœuf from Brashear to the railroad, fifteen plantations are under water. Five plantations are overflowed at Chene except a few small islets occupied by swampers. At Schoefer's three plantations are similarly situated, and 20 families are in distress and ask assistance to transport them to high lands. They are now living on rats. On Sweet bay fifteen families are flooded out; on Black lake, sixteen families, and on Laurs, sixteen families. All the front and a portion of the business part of Charleston are under water. The market-house, jail, shipyards, cooper-shops, warehouses and wharves at Franklin are submerged, the water extending to the base of O'Neill's hotel. The front of Pattersonville and the business portion of Centreville are under water. On Bayou Teche, on forty plantations, 15,000 acres of cane and corn are entirely destroyed and 3500 acres submerged. From the Teche, down, upon fifteen plantations 5000 acres of cane and corn are destroyed.

The Mississippi at Cairo is eight feet below the water of 1867, when it reached the top of the levee. At Memphis it is one foot below high water mark of the same year, but it is above the danger mark. At Vicksburg it is seven feet below the high water mark of 1862, but above the danger level. At New Orleans it is seventeen inches below the high water of 1871.

The captain of the steamer George W. Cheek confirms the reports of the planters along the river above Napoleon, that the negroes who have been driven from their homes by the overflow refuse all offers of employment from the planters, who wish to hire them, saying the government is to furnish them rations and they do not want work.

Advices from Prentiss, Miss., state that the levees broke on Saturday night, one and a half miles below that place, and at Glencoe, 60 miles below, while another crevasse is hourly expected at Pride's. The water is pouring through the crevasse at Catfish Point, which is now 150 yards wide. A private levee at Walnut Bend, Arkansas, is broken, inundating Fall's, Farquherson's and other rich plantations, the two named having over 1100 acres planted. Appeals come from below Napoleon for more supplies for the sufferers. The relief committee is busily engaged filling orders.

The New Orleans relief committee report to the governor that they have distributed 40,000 rations daily, and in their judgment 50,000 daily for sixty days will be required to relieve the pressing wants.

Readables.

Barque Charles Forbes, Capt. Bradford, from New York for Portland with coal, was abandoned near George's Bank on Friday, her cargo having shifted, and the schooner leaking at the time. The fishing schooner Montana fell in with the derelict vessel and succeeded in getting her into Halifax.

Steamship agents assert that the recent ocean disasters have caused a falling off in travel of from thirty to fifty per cent.

Jack Kane, of Burlington, Vt., on Monday pointed a gun at Catharine Hills, "in fun." It was a capital joke, but would have been still better had not the gun "accidentally" fired itself off and lodged two charges of shot in Catharine's head and neck.

Barque Alfred, Capt. Burt, from Philadelphia for St. John, was hove down in a gale on the 25th ult., and the masts were cut away to right her, but she would not come up, as the cargo (coal) had shifted. The crew were taken off by a pilot boat and afterward transferred to a steamer, the pilot boat being then engaged in an attempt to get the abandoned vessel into port.

A lodger at the Portland station on Saturday night was a seaman who had just returned from a thirty months cruise on Friday and been paid off with $400 at the Navy Yard, all of which he had spent in one day.

Hon. Dexter Richards of Newport has given $1500 for a Congregational parsonage.

The Nashua Telegraph says that Col. John B. Dame, of the stage line beyond Greenfield, reports that on the last day of April his sleigh got snow bound in Stoddard, when harnesses were snapped like piping cord, and he was obliged to call on the farmers to pull him out with ox teams. The oldest inhabitant of the Contoocook Valley does not remember so backward a season in that part of the State. In fact, in many places the snow is even with the fences and shows no signs of melting. In Francestown, May Day, twenty couples in single teams enjoyed a sleigh ride to Greenfield, Lyndeboro', and thence to New Boston, which is something never before heard of at so late a day in spring.

Free Fight of the Biddeford City Fathers.

[Special to Portland Press.]

The regular monthly meeting of the Biddeford City Council was held Monday evening. Everything passed off harmoniously in the meeting though the democratic members introduced some insulting orders which were laid upon the table in some cases and not noticed in others. The annual appropriation bill was passed and some other business attended to. After the adjournment of the Council Edwin Stone approached Councilman Andrews in the Council room and accused him of making a false record while temporary clerk at a recent meeting. Mr. Andrews denied any intention of fraud, but accused Stone of being the author of an order introduced to appoint a committee to investigate the action of Mr. Andrews. Mr. Stone called Andrews a liar, Mr. Andrews replying, "you are another," Stone squared off and dealt Andrews a stinging blow in the face, just grazing his nose. Andrews objected to such a proceeding and collared Stone, backed him against the wall and bumped his head in a lively manner. Ex-Mayor Wedgewood then made a dive for Andrews, and then commenced a free fight which throws New York and Arkansas into the shade. A Councilman tried to pull the usually affable Wedgewood off, but he struck out right and left. A democratic Councilman from Ward 4 struck a republican from Ward 7 in the face, and in return got a blow which sent him spinning against the folding doors of the Aldermen's room. At this juncture of affairs reinforcements arrived and at least twenty were engaged in the disgraceful fight. A democratic Councilman from Ward 6, McIntosh, I think, struck out and some one struck back sending his beaver twirling across the hallway. A legal gentleman was about to grab a chair to make therewith the most telling argument of his life upon somebody, when Councilmen Haines and Allen wrenched it from him and succeeded in pacifying him. Such hunching and choking, kicking and pulling would have done credit to a row in North street, Boston, or a genuine Bowery knock down. Respectable democratic spectators stood in astonishment at the disgraceful and outrageous proceeding. Had not some of Andrew's friends pulled him off from Stone, the latter would have received more than the light scratches he did. A lawyer had his shirt badly disarranged and several others went home to their dear wives with disorders in their dress and scratches upon their phiz not made by their two year old darling.

At ten o'clock the riotous ones had been all taken in tow and safely escorted away, and soon quietness reigned supreme. It is the only topic of discussion at the hotels tonight, and that such a disgraceful and uncalled for scrimmage should have brought upon the city such disgrace, is regretted by all.

To Astonish a Hog.

[Plutarch.]

The eyes of the hog are so formed and disposed of in the head, that it is always looking upon the lowest objects, and can in no manner contemplate things elevated and lofty. It can not look upward unless thrown back with its feet upward. Although this animal is addicted to the most discordant squealing and grunting, yet as soon as it is laid on its back it is immediately silent, so great is its astonishment at the heavens, to the sight of which it is unaccustomed, and which causes such fear that it is unable to cry.

—The maple sugar season has lasted four weeks, this season, instead of two, as usual, and a double crop of toothaches is expected.

—It is merely a local pride. When New Orleans proudly shows Quebec a shirt-front stained with fresh strawberry juice, the latter triumphantly exhibits to New Orleans a sore on the side of the nose, made by a mosquito of this year's growth.

—A new firm, under the style of Hart & Akin, has been formed in Philadelphia for the purpose of pursuing the coal and wood business. Next winter there will be many a heart aching at the prices for coal and wood, which these gentlemen will feel compelled to charge.

—Sylvanus thinks it would be a good thing to say, when the Governor blows up and calls you as obstinate as a mule, "Like enough, when you have an ass for your father." Sylvanus does not mean to try this himself. He has no occasion. Any boy that wants it may have it.

—A new way of proposing marriage is noted by the New York Mail. A gentleman attending a recent church fair fell in love, as may have happened before, with a fair girl in the floral temple. He bought a $10 basket of flowers, and handing her a $50 bill, said: "If you don't give me the exact change, I'll marry you." The blushing maiden handed him $30 (she was probably confused), and he remarked: "I thought so!" Cards will be out early next week!

—The pride of mankind is great. A night or two ago a family living on Seventh street, New York, was awakened by unusual noises in the house, and on turning out saw the eldest hopeful rushing about in his suspenders, brandishing a new Wesson, and shouting, "There is a man in the house." A long search failed to show any foundation for the young man's warlike demonstration, when he mildly informed the breathless and exhausted tribe that it was his birthday. He was twenty-one.

The Foremost Tonic of the Age.

A new path to health was provided for the sick, a new shield against disease was secured to the healthy, when Hostetter's Stomach Bitters became the standard tonic of America. For nearly a quarter of a century this powerful and genial antidote to disease and disorder which produces it, has been on its sanitary march, building up the feeble, helping nature to fight down every variety of ailment, soothing pain, promoting digestion, regulating the secretions, increasing the nervous vigor of the system, cheering the spirits, arresting premature decay, and not only prolonging life, but adding value to it by putting thousands of invalids in a condition to enjoy it. No volume ever published would be large enough to contain a history of the cases of dyspepsia, constipation, biliousness, intermittent fever, nervous debility, and mental and physical prostration cured by this great vegetable invigorant, which not only restores health, but protects it from danger in the most unhealthy districts.

"War to the Knife!"—We have declared war against counterfeiters, and we mean to fight it out. When diseases of the kidneys or of the procreative organs prostrate you, take HELMBOLD'S BUCHU. The Logan-Sykes Couple.

[Correspondence Chicago Times.]

Olive Logan, who left the coulisses on account of her deafness, afterward took to lecturing. She was for some time the wife of Henry A. Delille; but as they grew heartily tired of one another, they had no difficulty in going apart. Mrs. Delille, that was, waited until Wirt Sykes, who had long been her puffer-general, could be legally released from his wife and children, when she espoused him, and so confused the nomenclature of the family that it is impossible to determine whether she is Mrs. Wirt Sykes or he is Mr. Olive Logan. He is the most audacious and unblushing advertiser extant. He roams over the country and fills the rural newspapers with paragraphs relating what the crowned heads of Europe have confidentially whispered to Olive Logan, while she accompanies him, and under the assumption of lecturing, paces and grimaces on the platform, and exhibits an alarming expanse of teeth, at a dollar a head. This extraordinary pair are abroad now; but lyceum committees live in daily terror of their return.

—Kid gloves now come stitched and "relieved" by a contrasting shade—pale lemon with pale blue pipings, tans with brown, and French grays with a darker shade of an "off-color."

Modesty vs. Assurance.

Messrs. Editors:—While regarding our quiet old city as one of the best places in the world to live in, and entertaining a high opinion of the general intelligence of its citizens, observation has taught me that "modest merit" is not nearly so sure to result in success here as a little less merit combined with a little more "check." I long ago came to the conclusion that imported goods of any kind would command a ready sale simply because they were imported, while the domestic article, or articles so long imported as to be regarded as domestic, even though of better quality and less price, would be treated with silent contempt. Let me give a few little illustrations.

I was one evening on Market square,—one of a goodly crowd surrounding the gaudily-painted cart of an itinerant vendor of small wares, who was driving a "rushing business," principally in a new kind of soap which he was selling at twenty-five cents a cake, and which he averred would remove all kinds of blemishes from all kinds of articles,—including freckles from the face, stains from the reputation and clouds from the conscience. Soon an individual of quiet appearance approached, his mild countenance o'erspread with an expression of dove-like gentleness; and to him the soap-dealer addressed his remarks: "There! there's a gentleman who wants a half dozen cakes of this invaluable soap—know it by his looks; he's a sensible man and never lets a chance for a good thing go by him. Here you are, sir! How many'll you have? President Grant won't use any other kind o' soap, and all gentlemen everywhere"—here he stopped, his harangue being broken in upon by the mild-looking man, who remarked, "Get out, you infernal humbug! I can buy that kind of soap of any respectable grocer for fifteen cents a cake, and what do I want to pay you twenty-five for?" This answer seemed to displease the soap-man, who made some dispraging remarks concerning the intelligence of the quiet man, though he declined the latter's pressing invitation to come off the cart and repeat his statements; and it was evident the crowd disapproved the quiet man's conduct, for the patent soap went off faster than ever. An hour later I was in Butler and Laighton's store, (you won't object to printing this, I hope, as that firm acts on the belief that when trade is brisk is the time to advertise, and when it is dull is the time to advertise more,) when the quiet man came in; and seeing some of the same soap the peddler had been selling, on one of the shelves, he said, "Say, Jerome, how do you sell that?" "Ten cents a cake!" was the answer; "and I think it's very good soap, too; seems to give general satisfaction. Have a cake?" "No," said the querist, "I only wanted to know the price;" and he walked out, evidently much amused at something, and soliloquizing about "a pack of —— fools" as he went.

But it is not only the class of men who buy goods of itinerant peddlers, who are fond of being humbugged,—who, like the ancient Athenians, care only for "some new thing." I have a vivid remembrance of a musician who came to this city some years ago, and whose advent was heralded by a tremendous flourish of trumpets,—no overweening modesty preventing him from vigorously blowing one of the aforesaid trumpets himself. He prefixed "Prof." to his name, advertised himself as a graduate of a distinguished European school of music, and fairly carried the town by storm; and for a while the few who dared to refuse accepting the Professor at his own valuation were objugated and spoken of as most outrageous and impossible pigs, by the many worshippers at the Professor's shrine. But his star set as suddenly as it had arisen, and those who were loudest in his praise and most servile in their idolatry, during the height of his fame, are the least inclined to talk of the way in which people humbugged themselves on his account, at the present day.

A somewhat similar instance occurred more recently, when a "Professor" from another city announced the establishment of a "Conservatory of Music" here, whose benefits the "local teachers" would be allowed to avail themselves of! and at which the Professor's own "system of voice culture would be exclusively taught." This high-toned pronunciamento satisfied me at once that Portsmouth was about to rejoice in another course of musical measles, against which it was useless to contend but which would die out of itself in due time without making any wondrous change for better or worse. Not that I imagined the Professor an absolute musical quack; I supposed he might be a very good teacher, though he proved to be certainly no better than any one of a half-score of the "local teachers" he so liberally offered to instruct; but I could not help being astonished that a genius who had developed a "system of voice culture" superior to the methods employed in training the voices of such singers as Lind, Rachel, Alboni, Parepa-Rosa, Mario, Brignoli, Sims Reeves and a host of other musical celebrities, should be obliged to come to this little seaport for recognition. However, the Conservatory was started and took well for a while, the gentleman who was so willing to teach the "local teachers" being of course regarded as a prodigy, and we were soon informed that the institution "was an assured success, thanks to" the manager,—though why he was entitled to the thanks of the public for succeeding in his private business affairs, any more than grocers or coal dealers are for the same reason, was not stated. Now, after the lapse of some months, we are told he has "abandoned the Conservatory" (my idea was that it had abandoned him), but that "his enterprise has created a considerable musical revival here, and our local teachers, as well as their pupils, have thereby experienced something of an awakening!"

I could give other pertinent illustrations in support of my theory that ability is less necessary to success than assurance is, but it would be useless. Before I close this little note, however, I wish to offer one piece of advice to any young person just starting in life, viz.: "Blow your horn, if you want to sell your fish;" sound it out good, let the tone be ever so brassy,—for though you may really possess no abilities above the average, if you only make noise enough you will have no difficulty in making the larger portion of mankind believe you the eighth wonder of the world. BUGLER.

Laconics.

The Banks in this city will be closed today at 11 o'clock A. M., as a mark of respect to the late John P. Lyman, Esq., whose funeral takes place at that hour.

The Odd Fellows' Manchester Relief Association has had but one death for a year and consequently but one assessment. The Association numbers 539 members, so that for the sum of $1.10 each member has been insured for about $540 during the past year—the cheapest rate of insurance on record, we think. Mr. J. G. Harvey is agent for Portsmouth and vicinity.

Schooner Arcola made quite a stir in the river on Tuesday, running first into the steamer Clara Bateman, breaking her rail, and then into a schooner lying at the new railroad wharf on Noble's island. The latter vessel (the Sandalphin, from Port Johnson,) was jammed against the wharf hard enough to carry away her jib-boom.

There will be a Sunday School exhibition at the Methodist church tomorrow (Thursday) eveving, at 7 1-2 o'clock. Admission 10 cts.

Rev. Carlos Martyn will deliver the address on Memorial day. The programme as arranged by "Storer Encampment" promises to be more interesting than in former years.

The debased condition into which the Concord Monitor has fallen since its departure from all ideas of decency, is the logical sequence of its proprietors' accepting the services of a Massachusetts muttonhead (for whom Massachusetts could find no use) as the presiding genius of what should have been the leading republican paper of New Hampshire. The owners of the Monitor must have long ago seen that such thick-headed importations have no ideas of their own and must of necessity adopt those of their former masters, being proprietors only of second-hand opinions.

Dr. W. W. Hobbard's second lecture, a very interesting one, takes place this evening at Congress Hall.

Frank Sargent of Exeter has confessed the theft of the wallet of Mr. Sherburne Somerby, and a small part of the money has been recovered.

Our pressman discovered at day-light, this morning, a balloonist who had come to grief and had tied up to the main truck of the flag-pole of Hodgdon & Yeaton, Congress street. Further investigation proved the fact that the balloonist was the effigy of a "tramp," which lay on its back in a basket, with an empty bottle tied to its neck. On the balloon above the basket were the inscriptions: "Ho! for Brentwood!" and "He's got to come!"

At the regular monthly meeting of Sagamore S. F. E. Co., No. 2, Monday evening, Richard T. Call was chosen foreman in place of Willard Sears, appointed Assistant Engineer; John A. Durgin was chosen clerk, vice Richard T. Call. Mr. Call was also chosen one of the trustees of the Fireman's Relief Association.

Brig Sally Brown, of this port, before reported ashore on Florida reef, got off without damage on Monday and proceeded to her destination, Key West.

Apres moi le Deluge.

The Journal, in pronouncing a eulogy upon a defunct "Conservatory," invokes the blessings of the "local teachers," on account of the "awakening" occasioned by the advent of the "institution." As a local teacher, I confess to a painful awakening to the belief that a public educator, enjoying the reputation accorded to the Journal, is willing to endorse the self-adulatory maunderings of a silly quack, whose ignorance finds parallel only in the sublimity of his impudence. Were it not for the final editorial comment, this action might be explained by that of the publisher of Æsop's Fables, to whom the fact that the collection contains the story of "The Ass in the Lion's skin" is in no way pertinent to his duties as publisher. EDWIN A. TILTON.

Happened So?

[Foster's Democrat.]

We should like to know what's up now? Yesterday, Sunday, some very eminent and honorable gentlemen were in this city from Portsmouth on important business, as we judged from their appearance. Among then we noticed Isaiah Hanscom, Chief Naval Constructor of the United States, Elbridge G. Peirce, Postmaster of Portsmouth, and John E. Rider, Boss of the Portsmouth and Kittery Navy Yard. We understand that they came here on request of Boss Rider, who has an eye to the establishment of a new Navy Yard at the Creek to prevent Dover from falling into democratic hands at the next election. It is a very pretty idea, but we suggest to those loyal personages that Sunday is not the proper time to transact business of that sort in Dover. Everybody here goes to church on Sundays and live strictly virtuous lives on all other days. Boss Rider may run Portsmouth but when he comes to hitch Dover on it will be more than he can pull through.

A lot of Dover chaps pretty drunk took a boat and went down the lower Cocheco, Sunday. They were noisy and quarrelsome, and one of them finding it "too warm" jumped overboard. But no sooner done than another of the "crew" struck at him with an oar, which just escaped his head, or he would have met his end sure. The cold bath tended to counteract the influence of the other fluid, and he managed to paddle ashore.

—The emancipated colored gentleman is occasionally strong on some points. It was only a few days ago that a brawny son of Africa, dressed in the height of fashion, with a pigeon-tail coat and high-heeled boots, was staggering down the streets of Mobile, bareheaded, under the weight of an enormous "Saratoga," with a juvenile darky, hired for the occasion, trotting by his side, "toting" his beaver.

State Fair and Baby Show for 1874.

At a recent meeting of the Directors of the New Hampshire State Fair, it was voted that at the next Fair, to be held in Manchester, all departments of the exhibition should be held on the Fair Grounds, and that suitable buildings should be erected for that purpose.

The premium list was revised and judges appointed. In addition to the premiums offered last year for Town Teams, a premium of $50 is offered for County teams, for the best 15 yoke of oxen, five years old or upward, owned and entered from any county in the State; $30 is offered for the second premium as above.

For the best 10 yoke of steers, under four years old, from any county, $30 for first, $15 for second premium.

$100 is offered to any organized agricultural society in the State, either county or town, which shall make the best exhibition and receive the largest number of premiums at the State Fair.

$50 is offered to any horticultural society in the State which makes the best exhibition and largest number of entries.

$125 in gold is offered as premiums for the baby show.

The Directors' meeting was an unusually full one; there were present Messrs. Head of Hooksett, Young and Hayes of Portsmouth, Riddle of Manchester, Daniels of Franklin, Hubbard of Tamworth, Hardy of Nelson, Coggswell of Gilmanton, and Chick of Great Falls.

HAIR RENEWER!

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care.
Its effects are as wonderful and satisfactory as ever.
It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color.
It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff; and the scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean.
By its tonic properties, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness and making the hair grow thick and strong.
As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable.
Dr. A. A. Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says of it: "I consider it the best preparation for its intended purposes."

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE,

FOR THE WHISKERS.

This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in one preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off.

into the market at a low appraisal. The price is marked in plain figures on each piece, and in comparison with the quality will be found to be

ASTONISHINGLY LOW!

Ask your friends and neighbors who have availed themselves of this

GREAT CHANCE,

or come and see for yourselves after examining other stocks, that this is no fancy-dream or fiction, but a palpable fact, that you can buy CLOTH FOR GARMENTS of all qualities at so low a figure that EVERYBODY can afford to clothe themselves. Those of a limited means will find it a comfort to their children and themselves without exhausting their stamps. We lose no money by it, assisting others to PRACTICE ECONOMY these hard times. Every sensible Man, Woman and Boy will at once see that we can sell any of our READY-MADE

DRESS UP

Custom Clothing!

AT LOW PRICES, when we have had the chance to make them up of fine First-Class Materials at half price. This is so plain to everybody that it would be disparaging to the intelligence of our customers to argue the point. Our assortment of is extensive and varied and made up to wear, and those who buy of us will get their money's worth.

We sell no Bankrupt Stock or shop-worn, old faded goods. We do not wish to shock the sensibilities of our customers with fancy sales of dire distress of some (let us hope imaginary) unfortunate trader and his losses. We do not take stock in it. Our Stock and Goods are

NEW, NICE, WELL-MADE AND TRIMMED,

Cost us less than expected, and we sell them so cheap that our customers are cheerful and pleased at our success in business. We make a specialty of

BOYS' AND YOUTHS' SUITS

and guarantee a good fit, at prices from 6 to 15 Dollars, a suit—Coat, Vest and Pant

HENDERSON & CO.,

ANNOUNCE THEIR

SPRING OPENING

—OF—

Bonnets, Hats,
Flowers and Ribbons.

The Largest Stock,
The Latest Styles,
The Lowest Prices.

The beauty of Henderson's opening is you are not obliged to turn your purse inside out, and pull out the bottom dollars to pay for a

NEW BONNET.

It is a well known fact that HENDERSON sells everything in the Millinery line full 25 per cent. less than any other house in the city, and the question is often asked "How can he do it?" We answer:

First. We are not dependent on our Millinery trade alone for a living. We do an extensive business in DRY and FANCY GOODS, and our Millinery is sold with our other goods at a cotton cloth profit, so that you are not obliged to pay us the fancy prices charged by dealers doing an exclusively millinery business.

Second. Our business in STRAW GOODS having increased so enormously (our sales in the summer of 1873 being nearly three hundred cases of Bounets and Hats, the largest retail trade in the State,) that we buy entirely of manufacturers, thus making a saving in this way alone of fifteen per cent., which goes to the benefit of our customers.

Third. We Trim Hats free of charge; you all know that this one item saves you half a dollar. We have opened a larger stock than ever before, and keep the finest as well as cheaper grades of goods.

Hats, not trimmed,

From One Cent to One Dollar.

Hats, trimmed,

From 50 cts. to $10.00.

And five dollar Trimmed Hats will compare favorably with any ten dollar one in the city.

SASH RIBBONS, - - - - - - - 25 cents per yard.
SILK TIES - - - - - - - - - 20 cents each.
FRAMES - - - - - - - - - - 15 cents each.

HERE THEY ARE COMPLETED AND

FOR SALE.

TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1616 to '20; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore; Smith's antiquated bark at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Gerrish's island, &c.

The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in its palmy days, the Light-House in its original height, and a lively sea view, at about 1820—a true picture of days when the white sail ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the embalmed canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a devoted son of old "Strawberry Bank," so called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.

Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-office.

WISTAR'S BALSAM

OF

WILD CHERRY!

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing.

R. H. EDDY, SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,
For Inventions, Trade Marks or Designs
No. 76 STATE ST., (OPPOSITE KILBY ST.,) BOSTON,
After an extensive practice of upwards of thirty years, continues to secure patents in the United States; also in Great Britain, France and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all papers for Patents, executed on reasonable terms with dispatch. Research made to determine the validity and utility of Patents of Inventions, and legal and other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished, by remitting one dollar. Assignments recorded in Washington.
No Agency in the United States possesses superior facilities for obtaining Patents or ascertaining the patentability of inventions.
All necessity for a journey to Washington to procure a Patent and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.
TESTIMONIALS.
"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse. CHARLES MASON, Commissioner of Patents."
"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a man more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office. EDMUND BURKE, Late Commissioner of Patents."
"Mr. R. H. Eddy has made for me over THIRTY applications for Patents, having been successful in almost every case. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their Patents, as they may be sure of having the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases and at very reasonable charges. JOHN TAGGART."

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS,
For all the Purposes of a Family Physic
CURING
Costiveness, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Dysentery, Foul Stomach, and Bilious Erysipelas, Headache, Piles, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Tetter, Tumors and Salt Rheum, Worms, Gout, Neuralgia, as a Dinner Pill, and purifying the Blood, are the most congenial purgative yet purfected. Their effects abundantly show how much they excel all other Pills. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. They purge out the foul humors of the blood; they stimulate the sluggish or disordered organ into action, and they impart health and tone to the whole being. They cure not only the every-day complaints of everybody, but formidable and dangerous diseases. Most skillful physicians, most eminent clergymen, and our best citizens send certificates of cures performed, and of great benefits they have derived from these Pills. They are the safest and best physic for children, because mild as well as effectual. Being sugar-coated, they are easy to take; and being purely vegetable, they are entirely harmless.

How to Live on a Dollar a Week.

[Boston Courier.]

Mrs. Bluebird was not one of those model people who advertise "Rooms to let; parties not inquisitive." She was strict about references, and professed to be p'ticklier who she "took in." Which was true in a literal sense only; as a business transaction, we were all taken in impartially. I doubt if any lodger in her house received that indefinite something called "the worth of his money," except our attic tenant, Mr. St. Clair.

To speak Erinically, he got the worth of his money and didn't pay a cent for it. How he ever gained admission under that respectable roof, and whence he obtained his credentials of character, were mysteries as profound as the origin of his patrician surname and sumptuous attire. He had no baggage, unless one might call a bundle of something in a newspaper by that name; and he had no visible means of support, although his circle of acquaintance was large and his hospitality uproarious. Young gentlemen of fashion and culture, wearing loud overcoats and resplendent jewelry, and somehow suggestive of Howard street and burnt cork, were known to ring at our respectable portal, and awaiting an answer to their summons, to execute on the door-step sundry easy dance evolutions, terminating in gratuitous flourishes, known to fame as "Majilton Kicks," to the envy and admiration of all passers by; which, with a tendency to winking sociably at observant windows, showed a familiarity with life and society highly gratifying to us all,

Those free and easy visitors invariably asked for "Professor St. Clair," breathing his name with deep respect, in the third person, but saluting him in the second and proper person, as "Cully," and "Old Rocks," and imparting a general flavor of democracy to the old mansion. Mr. St. Clair himself was no respecter of persons, habitually accosting his fellow-lodgers by their Christian names, or, when these were unknown, inventing atrocious terms of familiarity known only to the lexicon of slang.

"Nibbs," or its endearing diminutive, "Nibsey," was his favorite appelative, and he called me that pet name when he borrowed my matches. He arose at noon, and retired at unhallowed hours of the morning. How did he live? As live scores of such hangers-on of fortune, by his wits. Did affluence smile on him? He supped at Parker's. Was destiny unpropitious? He lived on a dollar a week; that, too, without infringing the patent of Dr. Dio Lewis. Arising at noon, he resuperated on a "free lunch," which included beer and crackers and cheese, or rather sandwiches, or even beans, or chowder. Cost ten cents.

The professor knew where to find the most liberal of such restaurants, and knew by experience just how far he might safely push his ravages on the lunch without awakening sarcasm in the suspicious barkeeper. He knew also where to sup royally for ten cents on coffee and doughnuts, at the "Hole-in-the-Wall," or any of the al-fresco lunch-rooms in the business quarters. Not that he expended this lavish amount every day on mere food. He was a temperate man, and knew how to make to-morrow's abstinence balance the excess of to-day. Better yet he knew how to indulge his appetite at a friend's expense when his luck had otherwise failed him. One meal a day is considered by good judges (mostly amateur "beginners" of dyspeptic constitutions) sufficient for a man's necessities, but one may be pardoned for disputing that it be of the proper geometrical figure; and two repasts, at a cost of twenty cents, do not embody the popular conception of a "square meal." Coffee, however, particularly five-cent coffee, goes far to stay the hungry stomach, and don't mean your crisp, flaky doughnuts, which children cry for, but the tough, glutinous, watery, with "apple sass" filling—cause no yearning for a prolonged feast. So the professor lived on a dollar a week and was happy in the future.

How did he get the dollar? How did he get the diamond pin, and the flashy raiment, and the good cigars he smoked so enjoyingly? Apparently by standing on street corners, with one hand tucked under the tail of his stylish overcoat, and the other arranging his black moustache; in which arduous vocation he was aided by other industrious sidewalk ornaments. Go down by the custom-house or the wharves, and you will see similar groups of idle men, talking or loafing contentedly in the sun, and living apparently by such efforts. But the latter are poorly clothed, and not ever clean. They are "waiting for a job." They want work, and are glad when they get it. Their good-looking prototypes up town want nothing of the kind, and would scorn it if offered. Horse-fanciers, theatre "supes," bar-room "strikers," and general devotees of idleness are those gorgeously attired gentlemen, who are like the lilies of the field in many things save perfume. On Howard and Court streets they most do congregate. Many little confidence operations do they carry out to perfection in their leisure hours, but their great aim in life is to circumvent fortune and beat the "tiger" in his green baize jungle.

The professor in his individual capacity was a passionate sportsman. The professor, as professor, was an ex-exhibitor, who had once delighted the world (in the language of the play-bills) as "Premiere Champion Contortionist of the World." Not that he ever "contorted" much for a living, but it gave him a certain status in society and procured occasional free admission to the temple of Thespis. The professor stayed three weeks at our house, during which time he introduced a reign of Jacobinism and equality that threatened the respectability of the whole neighborhood. He introduced sidewalk loafing on our street, and essayed to "mash" all the female inhabitants who dared to appear at the windows on either side. "To mash" is a verb of slang etymology, and means, as I understand, to captivate by silent homage, at long range, and by means of respectful smiles and winks of admiring tenderness. His success not being commensurate with his efforts and elaborateness of his toilet, he took a disparaging view of our neighborhood. Contemporaneously he became careless in attire, and one day he appeared without his very "nobby" overcoat.

There was genuine pathos in his voice when he told me his "Benjamin was in hoc." Not wishing to forfeit his esteem by exhibiting an ignorance of slang, (which is justly despised by every well-balanced mind,) I muttered some commonplace sympathy for his friend Benjamin, and hoped he'd pull through with it. And then I learned, to my shame and humiliation, that "Benjamin," or "Ben," was slang for an overcoat, and that "in hoc" had no reference to the signo vinces, but to the sign of three balls, and being interpreted, signified in pawn. Next day he told me that his "spark" (subsequently found to mean diamond pin) had followed in the wake of his beloved Benjamin. Now I sympathized, in vagabond affinity, with this luckless rascal, and learned that his troubles arose from disaster at the Court of Pharaoh, surnamed Tiger. It didn't require the wisdom of a sage, however, to perceive that sermonizing at him in his misery, or goading him to madness with good advice, was not the way to reform this young man and lead him to the paths of virtue. He didn't want to be reformed. He had no idea of abandoning the "paths of sin and iniquity and laying hold on eternal life," (as the author of this treatise was lately requested to do, in a jolly little tract sent him through the mail and post-officially indorsed "2 cents, collect;" donor unknown and retaliation barred.) He had the incurable disease, "dry rot," and his only idea of a sinner's refuge was associated with five per cent. a week on personal property. Curiously enough, although he sought my sympathy, he did not seek pecuniary assistance. He was, with all his tricking, a man who scorned to beg. Let him want anything ever so badly, he was too proud to let his tongue or face betray that want. When he felt the need of new clothing, to replace that doing duty as collateral security, instead of meanly begging or basely borrowing, he boldly took what he wanted and then "stepped out."

I feel the poverty of incident in this denouement. I know it is not dramatic, nor even poetical. To have taken him by the hand, and led him by exhortation to a life of renewed manhood, after the custom of all narrators of such incidents, would, I know, be the correct way to fetch the sympathies of the gentle (or soft) reader, besides letting the writer disappear in a glow of virtuous pyrotechnics. But besides looking upon the professor as a sort of government security—inconvertible and bound to blazes—it was destined otherwise. I could not take him up, because he took himself off. He took the best part of our several wardrobes with him. Well, well, he was a rare study of character—and, like most rare things, expensive. There is such a thing as buying experience above the market price.

Fifty Dollars or Scream.

[St. Louis Dispatch.]

The pranks of a lady—at least in appearance—along the line of the Missouri Pacific Railroad recently have caused the depletion of the pockets of several hotel proprietors at different towns, and among them Warrensburg, and while the money was parted with, there is still at least peace in the landlords' households. It will suffice to narrate how this female "did her little job" at Warrensburg, as related to a Dispatch reporter:

She visited the town in the capacity of a book agent, to impress upon the incredulous the advantage to be gained by a subscription to the "most interesting and instructive work ever published." Arriving in town at noon, she immediately went to a hotel, which shall be nameless, and registered. She was shown to a room and made her toilette. The next step was to ring a bell which ushered a boy in her presence, to whom she communicated the fact that she desired to see the landlord. The message was delivered to the landlord, and in the course of a few minutes he met her face to face in her room. As he entered the room she quietly locked the door, and placing the key in her pocket, said:

"Now, Mr.——, I wish to have a few moments' chat with you."

"Well, ma'am," replied the landlord "what you have to say, say it quickly, for I am in a hurry."

In a very self-composed manner the book agent drew herself up, and said she: "Now, Mr.——, you are a married man, are you not?"

"Yes, ma'am," meekly replied the landlord.

"You have children, two of whom are nearly of age, have you not?"

"Yes, ma'am," again replied the husband.

"Well, then," said the book agent, "if you have any respect for yourself or family, pay me fifty dollars or I will scream."

The landlord was bewildered, and being a mild-mannered man protested only in well-rounded phrases. This but made matters worse, and desiring to avoid a disagreeable reflection upon his wife and children he agreed to pay her fifty dollars, which he did, and on the evening train she left for Pleasant Hill, where, it is said, she played the same game.

The landlord at Warrensburg thinks it rather expensive to pay fifty dollars to keep a woman from screaming, but there are only a few who know of it, and being a rather dignified gentleman, and one whose private character is spotless, he is not joked about it.

Political Predictions.

[Washington Correspondent Boston Herald.]

All the indications here point to a great increase in the democratic representation in the next House of Representatives. On the authority of a trustworthy republican, I have it that in place of the eleven republican representatives from Indiana in the present Congress, there will be only three next year. In Illinois, there will also be a large republican loss, while Ohio will probably send a number of independent republicans or democrats in place of present republican members. The democrats are in a minority of less than one-third at present, yet it requires that they shall gain only fifty-two members to be even with the republicans. I take it that the opposition will gain in every Western State, and that the prospect was never more sure that the balance of power in the lower House of Congress is to be turned against the dominant party. The majority may not be democratic; pretty certainly it will not be republican. My impression is that there will be a certain number of men, happily named by Sunset Cox the Eclectic party, who will hold the balance of power and form the nucleus of the future governing political organization of the country. Such a party would be pretty sure to draw strength from both sides of the House. If this should happen, there would pretty surely be three candidates for the Presidency in 1876. My conviction is that if the people of Massachusetts send N. P. Banks back to Congress next year, he will stand a good chance to be Speaker of the House in the Forty-fourth Congress.

Editing A Newspaper.

There is much more of truth than poetry in the following, clipped from one of the most ably edited newspapers in America—the Louisville Courier-Journal:

Some people estimate the ability of a newspaper and the talent of its editor by the quantity of its original matter. It is comparatively an easy task for a frothy writer to pour out daily a column of words—words upon any and all subjects. His ideas may flow "in one weak, washy, everlasting flood," and the command of his language may enable him to string them together like bunches of onions, and yet his paper may be a meagre and poor concern after all. Indeed the mere writing part of editing a paper is but a small portion of the work. The care, the time employed in reading and selecting is far more important, and the tact of a good editor is better shown by his selections than anything else. An editor ought to be estimated, and his labors understood and appreciated by the general conduct of his paper—its tone, its uniform, consistent course, its aims, manliness, its dignity and its propriety. To preserve these as they should be preserved, is enough to occupy fully the time and attention of any man. If to this be added the general supervision of the newspaper establishment, which most editors have to encounter, the wonder is how they find time to write at all.

A Solitary Twin.

There was a woman out West who gave birth to one twin—just one; that's all there was of him. She never had another solitary twin as long as she lived. He was a melancholy child from the first, and wore such a lonesome look. He always seemed to be watching and listening for somebody who never came. He appeared to realize that he wasn't altogether—that he was a kind of human parenthesis with one bracket gone; animated dumb-bells, and one dumb-bell missing; a "pair" that couldn't beat deuces, and hardly worth drawing to. He used to moan in his sleep, and paw around on his pillow for the missing brother. When that boy grew up he was different from any boy I ever knew—that is to say, any one boy. He seemed more like two boys—at least he was altogether two-boysterous for one. If he had a fight it was with a boy twice as big as he was, for he seemed to feel, somehow, as though there were two of him, or ought to be. He always managed to get two pieces of pie at the table, just as if one was for the other of him who wasn't there, and there was a thin pretence of taking care of it for him, but he always took care to eat it, I noticed. He only half learned his lessons, and double-entry book-keeping nigh about set him crazy, because, as I told you, there wasn't but half of him there, and he couldn't double entry. He couldn't sleep with any other boy, cause, he said, it crowded 'im. He grew up, but he never got married. Once or twice he attempted to court a girl, but left her when it was half done, as though that other twin of his would be along and court the other half. I don't know what became of him. I heard that he died from sheer loneliness, but I only believe half I hear about that boy, anyhow. If he is dead you can bet he is only half dead.

A Cabinet of Curiosities.

[Holyoke Transcript.]

Mr. Wilbur F. Lamb is just completing the arrangement of a splendid case of stuffed birds, most of which he has collected and stuffed in his leisure hours. The case is a very large one, and contains some seventy or eighty varieties of birds, both common and rare. They are perfect specimens of each kind, and are stuffed and mounted with the perfection of taste in arrangement. Many of the birds were captured among the Rocky Mountains, some were obtained at the South, and there are specimens from every part of the country. One of the rare birds is an imported magpie, and there are several varieties of sea-birds, hawks, Rocky Mountain jays, humming birds, sand-pipers, Florida birds of many kinds, and a large variety of New England birds. Accompanying the case is a cabinet of bird's eggs, which embraces the greatest variety that we have seen in a private collection. Mr. Lamb has also a curious and extensive collection of minerals and fossils, gathered from every part of the United States, and an assortment of foreign and native curiosities, many of which are rare and valuable. There is a dried "river horse" brought from New Zealand, like the one Barnum made such a spread about, a piece of lava from Vesuvius, a large medallion, fac simile of one unearthed at Pompeii, stalactites from the Mammoth cave, curious petrified ferns and mosses, Indian relics picked up among the Rocky Mountains, a petrified fish of extinct species and numbers more equally curious. The collection would use up several hours in a thorough examination, and says a good deal for the industry and patience of the collector.

Knew all About It.

[Max Adeler.]

Two or three years ago I was attached to the Morning Argus, the only paper published in our village, and during my engagement we employed as an assistant editor a young man named Drinker. When Drinker began his duties the manager said to him:

"See here, Drinker; among other things I want you, whenever you see in the exchanges or anywhere, a good biographical sketch of any prominent man, to clip it out and put it away, so's when he dies, you understand, we can rush it out as an obituary article, as it were."

Drinker went to work, and about two months afterward some well-known man died, and I examined the obituary bureau for the purpose of obtaining his history. It was not there; but I discovered that the assiduous Drinker had stored away in that mortuary receptacle one biographical sketch of John Wesley, a collection of anecdotes about General Putnam, and an essay upon "The Life and Services of John Hancock."

I commued with Drinker upon the subject.

"Mr. Drinker," I said, after calling his attention to the article about the father of Methodism, "you certainly must be aware that John Wesley died long before you came into this office."

"N-n-no!" exclaimed Drinker, with a look of pained surprise upon his face. "Wh-wh-what! John Wesley dead! That great and good man gone! Thunder! Why it's too bad. No, I hadn't heard a word about it. I had no idea of such a thing. What a shock it must have been to his family."

"And as for General Putnam, Drinker, it is perfectly absurd for you to pretend that you thought he was alive, you know. Come now, that's too much."

"Is he dead, too? Well, well! The fact is I've been living down in the country for two or three years, and I haven't kept the run of things. And so old Putnam's dead! That noble old man. Strange, strange, how we are all passing away!"

"And Drinker, you certainly can't be such an idiot as to have put away this article about Hancock with the expectation that he would die again. You know he did die once. Why, Drinker, he died about ten thousand years ago!"

"Come now!" exclaimed Drinker, exultingly, "I've got you there. Ah, ha! smarty? You know too much. You think everybody's a fool but yourself! Dead, is he? Now what's the use of your trying to stuff that down me, when I know well enough that the democrats talked about running Hancock for the presidency at the last election! O, pshaw! You ain't fit to write for any newspaper that has got any sense."

Then Drinker was discharged. I did not enlighten him. He will probably go down to the grave with the firm conviction that General Hancock is the man who set the copy for the miserable penman who signed the Declaration of Independence.

The Foremost Tonic of the Age.

A new path to health was provided for the sick, a new shield against disease was secured to the healthy, when Hostetter's Stomach Bitters became the standard tonic of America. For nearly a quarter of a century this powerful and genial antidote to disease and the causes which produce it, has been on its sanitary march, building up the feeble, helping nature to fight down every variety of ailment, soothing pain, promoting digestion, regulating the secretions, increasing the nervous vigor of the system, cheering the spirits, arresting premature decay, and not only prolonging life, but adding value to it by putting thousands of invalids in a condition to enjoy it. No volume ever published would be large enough to contain a history of the cases of dyspepsia, constipation, biliousness, intermittent fever, nervous debility, and mental and physical prostration cured by this great vegetable invigorant, which not only restores health, but protects it from danger in the most unhealthy districts.

Don't be Discouraged. Suppose you here "tried fifty remedies" and received no benefit, is there therefore "no balm in Gilead?" Verily there is. Your liver may be congested, your stomach half paralyzed, your nerves quivering, your muscles knotted with torture, your bowels constricted, your lungs diseased, your blood full of impurities—yet in one week after commencing a course of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS you will feel like a new creature. a29 4w

Sickness is an affliction that waits on us all. None are exempt, and there are none but need relief from its attacks. Whoever can furnish this becomes our benefactor. A conviction prevails that DR. AYER does it. Disorders of the blood have been healed by his SARSAPARILLA, and affections of the lungs by his CHERRY PECTORAL, too frequently and too distinctly to be disputed. His AGUE CURE is said, by those who use it, to never fail. Reader, if you must have medical aid, take the best of medicine. Poor remedies are dear, as good are cheap, at any price you have to pay for them.—[Charlestown Courier.]

"War to the Knife!"—We have declared war against counterfeiters, and we mean to fight it out. When diseases of the kidneys or of the procreative organs prostrate you, take HELMBOLD'S BUCHU. The genuine HELMBOLD'S BUCHU may be known by the private proprietary stamp of H. T. Helmbold, on each bottle, and is fully warranted for diseases of the kidneys and urinary organs. Sold by druggists everywhere.

Blessings brighten as they take their flight.—If you have a good head of hair take care of it; once gone and we realize its loss far more than we appreciate its presence. The BEARINE is taking the place of all other hair dressings, because it is healthful to the hair and delightful to use.

An infallible PILE remedy.—Sufferers with this painful disease who have tried electuaries, lotions, ointments and a long list of nostrums for its relief, in vain, will thank us for calling attention to ANAKESIS, the happy discovery of Dr. Silsbee, an experienced and scientific M. D. Thousands of cases attest its virtues. It is a simple suppository, acts as an instrument, soothing poultice and medicine, gives instant relief and cures permanently.—Price $1.00. Sold by Druggists everywhere. ANAKESIS Depot, 46 Walker St., New York.

TWO original historical OIL PAINTINGS, nearly three by four feet, in heavy gilt frames. One, the famous Capt. Smith of the Isle of Shoals history, advancing with his company in a boat toward what is now called Fort Point at Newcastle, about the years 1614 to '20; the astonished Indians, in canoes and on shore; Smith's antiquated bark at anchor near Wood Island, which at that period is said to have been covered with woods and connected above water with Gerrish's island, &c.

The other, a vivid representation of Fort Constitution in its palmy days, the Light-House at its original height, and a lively sea view, at about 1820—a true picture of days when the white sail ships were flowing into the Piscataqua with their rich cargoes from foreign ports—days when Portsmouth ranked well in commerce. Such reminiscences of the past cannot fail to interest the present generation, and speak from the mute canvas with still greater interest to coming generations, particularly of this romantic locality. They are the works of a devoted son of old "Strawberry Bank," so called, and will tell their own story, whether in the parlor, counting-room, saloon or City hall, for either of which they are adapted.

Friends are invited to call soon and examine them whether disposed to purchase or not—at the author's Music Room, opposite the Post-office.

Prof. Gunning's Closing Lecture

Was delivered on Tuesday evening, May 5, in Mechanics' Hall, to an audience not so large as attended the previous lecture, this being a supplementary one to which course tickets did not admit. We give space to a somewhat extended report of his remarks:

Journeying a few weeks ago on Cape Cod, the speaker overheard a conversation between two men in the seat before him. "Captain," said one, "they say there's a man lecturing down there in Harwich whose little boy can let the light from a planet fall on his head and send his soul up along the beam to see the people there. What do you think of it?" "Can't h'ist it in," said number two; "What do you think?" "Think? don't think at all, I douse my peak and luff," said number one.

These two sea rovers, talking the language of the sea, spoke for us all. When a new theory or a new truth comes to the front it is met by two classes, represented by these two men. A week ago the speaker had brought Darwinism into court and some of the audience merely "doused their peaks and luffed;" that is, lowered their top-sail and sheered off. Others couldn't h'ist it in. To those who had determined merely to "douse" and "luff" the speaker had no further message. To those who were disposed honestly to try their ropes and tackle if, perchance, they can "h'ist it in," another hour may be passed with profit.

In the last lecture the speaker had drawn a series of geometric curves which carries us up along a succession of forms from the head of the fish to that of a man. More significant than form is structure, and the speaker would pass now from the form of the head to the structure of the brain; and here, too, beginnings are geometric. Three circles were drawn, their centers on the same line and their peripheries cutting each other. The segments which fell within the points of intersection were erased, and the drawing represented parts of three hollow globes opening widely into each other. It represented the brain in its earliest and lowest condition. The cavity was continuous with the spinal marrow.

He drew another figure in which the first globe or forebrain had thrown out two little buds, one above and one below. In the upper bud (which looks a little like a bollow, unbranched pine and is therefore called the "pineal gland,") for a long time the soul was thought to reside. In the lower bud the saliva was thought to dwell. Soul and spittle—their palaces are built face to face with only a narrow avenue between! No!

Another drawing was made in which a third bud appeared on the forebrain, nearly midway between the other two. This was the beginning of the cerebrum, the seat of reason. It inclined downward and its end was prolonged into a little lobe which becomes the seat of smell. In certain fishes which are keen of smell this lobe is larger than the cerebrum on which it grows.

Another drawing was made in which this bud appeared larger and its upper wall thicker. A larger bud was represented on the third globe or vesicle; this was the beginning of the cerebellum, or little brain,—the back brain. From the first to the fourth, the globes were coalescing more and more and the fourth drawing appeared something like a hollow cylinder with three constrictions. Cerebellum was as large as cerebrum, which appeared first as a little downward-reaching bud on the first vesicle, larger than the vesicle itself and reaching forward and backward. The second and third vesicles had almost coalesced. The back brain, which appeared first as a bud on the third vesicle, had increased a little, though not so much as the cerebrum.

A sixth drawing was made in which the cerebrum appeared as a great convoluted lobe rising dome-shaped over all the other parts. What in the first drawings was the upper surface of the brain appears now as its center. What appeared at first as a little bud, supporting lobes for the seat of smell and sight, appears now as a dome overtopping and infolding all the rest. The olfactory and optic lobes have grown but little. Provision for smelling and seeing comes early, and the thinking brain, at first an adjunct of these senses, comes late but comes in man to dominate the senses and crown the organs of sense and motion. The poor little gland which budded before the cerebrum and which philosophy had chosen as the seat of the soul, has not grown at all. It appears no larger in the last drawing, which is the brain of a man, than in the second, which is the brain of a frog. The ground pattern remains the same for the entire series, reaching from fish to man. Frog is superimposed upon fish, bird upon reptile, mammal upon bird and man upon all the rest. The end of the series is reached in him and nature could carry that "bud" no farther.

We have seen gradations in both form and structure from the lowest vertebrate to the highest. What is the bond of connection? Ideal? Or ideal and physical? We will try the question on the side most vital.

The speaker drew around one of the brains a gorilla and ran a comparison between it and man. For comparison he took a south-coast Australian. This man, he showed was not immoral, but simply unmoral. On the mental side he is so lean that he cannot apprehend numbers above five. In the use of tools he is but little in advance of the gorilla. In his domestic relations he is not quite up to the gorilla, which is monogamic, while he is removed but one step from promiscuity.

The speaker wished to hold the balances dispassionately between his own kind and the ape. The manifestations of ape-mind are chiefly in the way of mimicry and we laugh at their imitative pranks. Well, a few years ago, a dull, heavy-jawed man, called the Prince of Wales, married a lady called the Princess Alexandra, and it was published all over the world that Alexandra limped, and at once fashionable women and even little girls the world over limped like Alexandra! While we laugh at the monkeys, don't the higher powers laugh at us!

But, we say, to man alone belongs the lordly reason; and law, we say, is the highest reason. Well, not many years have passed since the highest law officer of the greatest nation on earth condemned to the torture of rack and flames a grey-bearded doctor for sending a fleet of witches to sea in seives, with a baptised cat, thereby creating a great tempest! Against this the speaker scored certain facts recently brought to light among apes, showing memory and reason and the power of communicating facts from one to another.

From mental traits he passed to bodily structure. The result was that science could find no structural difference great enough to warrant her in placing man in a different order from the man-like monkey. Man and man-like ape—to-day they stand so far apart. How far apart were they in the Stone Age? If the same distance, we may infer that those two streams of life have been flowing in parallel channels; if nearer together, we may infer that they have diverged from a common source.

The speaker described the effect of disuse on an organ or member. It would shrivel away and abort. He showed how animals, as monkeys and horses, twitch their skin to drive away flies, and supposed that horses for a thousand generations had been clothed, except on the forehead. Having no need of the twitching muscles they would shrivel away. We bare our arms and when flies light try to twitch them off. We can't do it. We can twitch only on the unclad forehead. But on our arms, all over our body, we have vestiges of the twitching muscles. Are they not reminiscences of a time when man, wild and unclad, twitched his skin to dislodge flies from his body?

At the lower end of the upper arm bone there is a passage to which science has given the name supra coudaloid foramen. All monkeys have it, and about one man in every hundred. Among savage races the proportion is a little greater. Among cave dwellers who lived in Europe with the reindeer and mammoth, the proportion was about thirty to a hundred. In this structure, man in the Stone Age stood nearer the monkey than now, in the ratio of thirty to one.

The speaker drew a very ancient skull which Prof. Wyman had lately found in Florida, and pointed out its near approach, in two features, to the ape skull. Another and still more ancient skull from California, now in the hands of Wyman, was drawn. It approached still nearer the ape.

The facts indidate, unmistakably, that primeval men stood nearer than we to the man-like ape. The lines converge. Where would they meet? Certainly not in gorilla or chimpanzee or any other man-resembling ape. Man did not descend from a monkey. Look at the human baby and the baby gorilla. They are fearfully alike. Up to the period of birth development proceeds in parallel lines. After birth gorilla strikes out a line of development which carries it directly away from man. The speaker drew again a gorilla skull and face to show that the growth is all beast-ward. The brain remains through life a baby brain, but all the animal features, as the jaws, teeth, cheek-bones and supra orbital ridge, grow prodigeously. Take nature at her word and she tells you that the more the ape develops the less he's a man and the more he's a beast. What then shall we say? Has man no kinship with the ape?

The Hottentot baby resembles the Saxon. Up to birth their developments are almost the same. After birth they part company. The Saxon develops on the intellectual side, the Hottentot more on the animal side. Shall we say that Saxon has no kinship with Ethiopian? No; but this we must say,—this science has been compelled to say, the negro race could never have sprung from a white race nor the white race from a black. But science does not therefore assert plurality of origin. She merely says that to find a common progenitor for the races of man we must go back of all existing races into a time when the human mind and body were something different from what we find them to-day. Between man and gorilla the question is the same in kind as between Saxon and Hottentot. We must project our convergent lines till we find them meeting in an organism which antedates all existing races, ape or human.

If man, in a remote past, was one, the fact points to a larger fact that in a past still more remote, when man and ape were not, they dwelt potential in the same organism. Man, the speaker thought was an outgrowth. He is an upgrowth. Creation has meant progress. The race has been doing what Tennyson exhorts each man to do. To "Work out the beast,

Work in the man
And let the ape and tiger die."

We have worked out the animal ridge above the eye; we have almost worked out the animal structure of the arm bone; we have almost worked out the animal twitching of the skin; we are working in the man. Man is in the making. The creative forces are working every day on his frame and in his mind. The speaker showed that in some features the civilized races are in process of change, that the jaw especially is growing less animal. The lines between man and ape, convergent as we have found them when projecting them into the past, must diverge through the future.

By the side of the gorilla the speaker drew a chimpanzee. The home of the chimpanzee is Western Asia, the seat of the Caucasian. The home of the gorilla is Africa—the seat of the black race. He compared gorilla with negro, chimpanzee with Caucasian and showed that while between these two most divergent races of men there are many connecting links, between the two manlike apes there are no links, but there have been. One such link was lately found fossil in Mount Pentelicus. The geologic record reveals this law. A type begins, unfolds, culminates, the intermediate forms die out and the extremes remain. So nature has been working among the man-like apes. And so, the speaker went on to show, she is working among men. Over Asia the white man is everywhere pushing against the olive. All over the islands of the sea humanity is struck with death. The doom of the American Indian is the doom of all the lower races save the black. Intermediate races are melting away and the extremes alone may survive. Nowhere do we find for man an infraction of Nature's method with the ape. The same forces which have blackened the skin and crisped the hair and compressed the shins of the black man have done the same work on the frame of the gorilla who shares his tropic jungles; and the same forces which have whitened the skin and spun in wavy threads the hair, and compressed the lips and elevated the brow of the Caucasian have wrought in the same way on the frame of his neighbor the chimpanzee.

But with man a new factor came into nature. Every grain, fruit, tuber, fiber is a recreation of man's brain and hand. The finite is co-creator with the infinite. The world is God-made and man-made.

The speaker held, in closing, that this philosophy, while all-embracing, invests man with great dignity and inspires him with incentives to noble living.

Teachers' Institute.

The near approach of the Rockingham County Teachers' Institute, soon to be held in Derry, leads us to invite our readers to the consideration of a few profitable facts.

Our first suggestion is interrogatory; what is a Teachers' Institute? Our recent observation and experience in educational matters here compel us to believe that many honest people have not the clear idea they need upon this subject. A Teachers' Institute, then, is a school of instruction, provided at the expense of the State, and to the privileges of which every scholar in the State is entitled. There is no admission fee taken at the door. What the State furnishes at its own expense, is free, in the most emphatic sense of the word.

The object of a Teachers' Institute is to offer instruction and counsel which may be the means of improving the general condition of our common schools. It is anticipated that combined energy and intelligence is more efficient than individual effort and knowledge. Hence it is the purpose of an Institute to favor those who attend with practical ideas of the different fundamental as well as other branches taught in our common schools, and discuss the best known methods of teaching them. This plan includes considerations of reading, spelling, writing, arithmetic, and other branches, as well as of school government and supervision. The instructions will be embodied in daily class lessons and evening lectures.

Who should attend? Everybody. Especially teachers, parents, scholars, prudential committees and town superintendents should avail themselves of the opportunity supplied. Scarcely any person can fail to hear something to his satisfaction and profit. This fact is one with which many seem to be sadly unacquainted. It often happens that the first part of the institute session is sparsely attended; but the last days realize crowded houses. This is because it takes two or three days for residents in the vicinity to ascertain whether a teachers' institute is "free," and whether there is anything in it interesting to the general public.

Who give instruction? There are two classes of instructors at a teachers' institute. In the first place there are teachers of long experience and eminent success. It is always allowed that the knowledge gained by actual experience is paramount. In the second place there are those who have given much attention and study to one or more particular branches, which have been, as it were, their life specialties. It must be conceded that a person who has spent years in the prosecution of some particular study may be able to give instruction superior to that of any one who has only treated it incidentally.

A teachers' institute is free to all. But the favors do not end here. Board during the session is almost always at a reduced rate. Railroads almost always give free return passes to those who pay fare to attend. The Superintendent of Public Instruction will give due notice of the facts in this part of the case.

Louisiana.

A letter was received Wednesday by Mayor Miller from Peter Marcy, Esq., of New Orleans, acknowledging receipt of $1000 from citizens of Portsmouth for the sufferers by the flood. Subscriptions are yet in order, to Wm. Simes, treasurer. The relief committee are requested to meet at City Rooms this (Thursday) morning at 11 o'clock.

The Portraits.

It is seldom that our citizens have an opportunity of seeing two such fine portraits as are now on exhibition at Mr. Foster's book store; that of Gov. Goodwin by Billings, and that of John P. Hale by Tenney. No son of Portsmouth but would go out of his way to see the kind, genial face of our beloved Ex-Governor, whether it be real flesh and blood, or in "counterfeit presentment;" and no citizen of New England but is proud of the name of John P. Hale. The sharer of Sumner's honors and earlier than he in the field, for liberty and equal rights, we are rejoiced that he is to live to posterity not only in his fame, but in his bodily likeness. The splendid painting before us reproduces him most vividly to all who ever saw him,—frank, open, honest, steadfast,—ready to speak for the right or ready to bear any suffering in its defense; a true pillar of the State. The two portraits stand fitly together and preach a better lesson to the youth who will heed, than many a sermon from the pulpit. Let no one miss the chance of seeing them.

"GRANITE STATE."

Laconics.

On and after to-day (Thursday) the Post-office will be opened at 7 o'clock A. M. and closed at 8 o'clock P. M.

Several of the officers of the second New Hampshire regiment met in Boston, Wednesday, to take preliminary steps toward a grand reunion in Portsmouth on the occasion of their thirteenth anniversary, June 20. General Marston, General J. N. Patterson, Colonel Frank S. Fisk, Major Stevens of Manchester and other prominent members of the regiment were present.

Prof. Gunning is to deliver his course of illustrated lectures at Kittery, by special invitation of a number of the citizen of that town.

The reappearance of Kate Reignolds with the Boston Comedy Company, next Tuesday evening, is looked forward to with great interest by the lovers of amusements. The comedy and farce to be presented are new here.

We were led into error copying from Foster's Democrat an item that Geo. Tompson & Co. intend relinquishing their mill business because it proved unprofitable. Such is not the case, however. They will continue their extensive flour and grain business, but are obliged to stop their mill for the present on account of the sale of the building they occupy.

—A Chicago parson, who is also a school teacher, handed a problem to his class in mathematics. The first boy took it, looked at it awhile, and said, "I pass." Second boy took it and said, "I turn it down." The third boy stared at it awhile and drawled out, "I can't make it." "Very good, boys," said the parson, we will proceed to cut for a new deal," and with this remark, the leather danced like lightning over the shoulders of those depraved young mathematicians.

HENDERSON & CO.,

ANNOUNCE THEIR

SPRING OPENING

— OF —

Bonnets, Hats, Flowers and Ribbons.

The Largest Stock, The Latest Styles, The Lowest Prices.

The beauty of Henderson's opening is you are not obliged to turn your purse inside out, and pull out the bottom dollars to pay for a

NEW BONNET.

It is a well known fact that HENDERSON sells everything in the Millinery line full 25 per cent. less than any other house in the city, and the question is often asked "How can he do it?" We answer:

First. We are not dependent on our Millinery trade alone for a living. We do an extensive business in DRY and FANCY GOODS, and our Millinery is sold with our other goods at a cotton cloth profit, so that you are not obliged to pay us the fancy prices charged by dealers doing an exclusively millinery business.

Second. Our business in STRAW GOODS having increased so enormously (our sales in the summer of 1873 being nearly three hundred cases of Bonnets and Hats, the largest retail trade in the State,) that we buy entirely of manufacturers, thus making a saving in this way alone of fifteen per cent., which goes to the benefit of our customers.

Third. We Trim Hats free of charge; you all know that this one item saves you half a dollar. We have opened a larger stock than ever before, and keep the finest as well as cheaper grades of goods.

Hats, not trimmed,

From One Cent to One Dollar.

Hats, trimmed,

From 50 cts. to $10.00.

And five dollar Trimmed Hats will compare favorably with any ten dollar one in the city.

SASH RIBBONS, ... 25 cents per yard.
SILK TIES . . . . . 20 cents each.
FRAMES . . . . . 15 cents each.

WISTAR'S BALSAM

OF

WILD CHERRY!

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR

CONSUMPTION!

And acknowledged by many prominent physicians to be the most Reliable Preparation ever introduced for the RELIEF and CURE of all

LUNG COMPLAINTS.

This well known remedy is offered to the public sanctioned by the experience of over forty years, and when resorted to in season seldom fails to effect a speedy cure of

COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, HOARSENESS, PAINS OR SORENESS IN THE CHEST OR SIDE, BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS, LIVER COMPLAINTS, &c.

CONSUMPTION

CURED

By a timely resort to this standard remedy, as improved by hundreds of testimonials received by the proprietors.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry

Does not dry up a Cough and leave the cause behind as is the case with most preparations, but it loosens and cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint.

CLERGYMEN, LAWYERS, SINGERS,

And all those whose occupation requires an unusual exercise of the vocal organs, will find this the ONLY PREPARATION which will effectually and instantaneously relieve their difficulties.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS.—Remember that the genuine Wistar's Balsam has on the outside wrapper the signature of "I. BUTTS," and the printed name of the proprietors, "SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, BOSTON." All others are base imitations. Examine the wrapper carefully before purchasing!

How Nellie was Pawned.

I don't share in the popular dislike and contempt for pawnbrokers. I look upon the pawnbroker as a most useful institution. He charges a high rate of interest, to be sure; but then look at the pettiness of the sums he will lend! He is accommodating, I may say universal, in his charities. Nothing comes amiss to him. He will disburse on the security of a ring worth a thousnad dollars, or a pair of boots worth a dollar and a half. Nothing is too small for him, but no matter how valuable the article is, he cannot be induced to lend above a certain sum upon it. This is simply his caution. The article may be stolen, or come by in some improper manner, when, of course, he would have to give it up. He simply protects himself.

But my story.

There is a certain side-street running across Broadway, which I will, with your permission call Chickory street. Chickory street is not its name, but as I am about to relate some private matters in connection with it, it would not be either delicate or judicious if I were to be too geographically correct.

In Chickory street resides a gentleman named Lazarus Levi, Esq., whose spacious, old-fashioned house is the repository of various articles of property belonging to numberless enlightened but distinguished citizens of the United States. The lower story of Mr. Levi's dwelling is fitted up with a glass front, and articles exposed to view in the windows are but dimly seen. There are flutes with tarnished keys that have lain silent for years. The dust lies thick on the embouchure of each; for the lips that blew there the graduated air have sprung into mere skin long ago, and the agile finger that ran over the holes are now loose bones, that lie here and there, never to hang together on earth again.

You can see all sorts of things in Mr. Levi's windows. California diamonds, very rare banjos, relics of disappointed minstrels; guns, silver tea-pots, now black and uncheerful, hinting at terrible domestic distresses in some poor fellow's home, and making you see the thin wife stealing out at night to raise money on the family valuables to feed the children.

Mr. Levi is my friend. I have occasionally mercantile transactions with him, for I am a literary man; and it often happens that I find myself the slave of a sudden necessity of five dollars. On these occasions I travel round my rooms as M. Xavier de Maistre may be supposed to have done in search of some appropriate token of esteem, which I may convey to Mr. Levi, in order to induce him to advance the required sum. In this choice it is necessary to exercise discrimination. For instance, I know it will never do to present my stamped velvet waistcoat three times running. And that if I were to take my little French clock to Mr. Levi too frequently, the article would pale upon him, and my credit be impaired. Variety is necessary to persons of Mr. Levi's position. Continual partridge destroys their appetite. They are epicures, and must be fed with novelties.

Accordingly one day, having need of the traditional five dollars to meet the expenses of a forthcoming literary soiree at my rooms, I, after some deliberation, determined to present my Indian chess-board to Mr. Levi, as a token of my affection, and work his feeling so far as to induce him to present me with the longed-for V. The chess-board was ivory inlaid. The men were delightfully oriental, being carved all over, even to the tips of their noses, and, altogether, I had great faith in the article, as it had never before been under Mr. Levi's charge.

I waited until evening. It was a lovely evening for pawning. A thick fog, damp and threatening rain, hung over the streets, so that there were but few passengers abroad. Chickory street was almost deserted.

I rang at Mr. Levi's door. It was a privilege I had earned, both by the consistency of my friendship and the usually valuable nature of my presents. A delightful Hebrew servant girl, with a nose massive as Egyptian architecture, opened the door, and admitted me to Mr. Levi's private parlor. In a few moments that estimable gentleman entered.

"Ah! Mister Papillotte," he said, holding out his hand, "how do you do? Come again, eh? Well; what is it this evening?"

"A little matter I want you to arrange for me," I replied, unrolling my silk handkerchief from the chess-board. "I want five dollars on this, for a few days."

"Hum! On my word, Mr. Papillotte, I am sorry to see such a gentleman like you coming here so often. It's really too bad!"

Levi, as I have said before, took an interest in me, and sometimes talked to me like a father.

"My good Levi," I answered, laughing, "don't take any serious trouble on my account. I'm all right. You know the best of us will get into difficulties occasionally. By the way, would you like to go to the opera to-morrow night?"

His eyes glistened.

"Have you got tickets?"

"Here are two. Can you let me have the money?"

"Well, really, Mr. Papillotte, chess is not a valuable property just at present. It comes hard on the intellect, sir."

"But this is an Indian chess-board. It belonged to the Rajah of Gundercool, and was taken from the Royal table by an uncle of mine in the Albicore Fencibles, who was at the siege of Gundarcool. It is a historical chess-board, Mr. Levi; do you play chess?"

"Not exactly, sir. But I came very near learning once."

"You know that the pawn is inseparably connected with the game, I suppose?"

"I have heard something of the kind, sir."

Mr. Levi stared. My joke was complete by lost upon him. It was a very mild joke, certainly; but, then, could better have been expected from a man who was begging for five dollars?"

"I am sorry you can't play," I hastened to continue, covering my jocular failure with some other remark. "I should like to have a game with you. That chess-board, I assure you is worth thirty dollars if it is worth a penny. Think of the association."

Heaven forgive me, but the Rajah was a creation of the moment. I had been made a present of the chess-board by a sailor who had voyaged to Calcutta; but one must be a little deceitful now and then in this wicked world.

"Well, I'll let you have the money," said Mr. Levi, "though we are rather short today. A great deal of business doing just now, Mr. Papillotte," and laying the Rajah's property on the table, he disappeared into the office to make out the ticket.

"A great deal of business doing!" That meant, when translated, a great deal of misery wandering about the street, a great many homes gloomy for want of petty sums of money, a great many mechanics without Sunday clothes; a great many poor students moaning over their valuable books, sacrificed to keep life enough in them to read those that were left; a great many drunkards craving for their accustomed poison, and getting it at the cost of necessities; a great many mothers shivering in blanketless beds, that the little ones might not starve. This was the terrible kind of business that he was doing!

I was reflecting on all this, when I heard the parlor door open, and a light step fall softly on the carpet. Thinking it was Levi returning with the money, I did not raise my head. Presently a voice—ah, how unlike Levi's buttery accents! started me from my reverie.

"I can play chess," it said very softly.

I looked up suddenly. A little fairy creature, about sixteen years old, with long, fair hair, and large, beautiful blue eyes, stood just within the door staring at me, like some timid bird at him who wanders in lonely woods, half-fearing to approach, yet longing to come nearer.

"And who on earth are you?" I asked abruptly; and as I spoke I saw at a glance that the blood of the children of Israel did not run in her clear, blue veins.

"I'm Nellie Lee, sir," replied the apparition, "and I'm in pawn, sir."

"In what?" I exclaimed, under the impression that I must have been deceived in the absurd statement I had just heard,

"In pawn, sir," she repeated, as simply as if she was saying that she was in bed.

"And who put you into pawn, in the name of all the Medics, may I ask?" I said, scarcely able to keep my countenance.

"Father pawned me for money to buy paints," answered the extraordinary deposit; "and I am so lonesome—Oh! you can't think!"

"What is your respectable parent, may I inquire?"

"He's an artist, sir, and he has just got an order, sir, and he wanted money for the canvas and the paints to finish the picture. He paints beautiful pictures—indeed he does!"

She seemed so very anxious about my not doubting her father's ability, that I smiled a sort of assent, as if I was perfectly satisfied of his rare talent, and was intimately acquainted with the merits of every one of his productions.

"Where do they keep you?" I asked, half jestingly, for the whole affair seemed so like a vaudeville that I expected every moment to hear some unseen audience applauding the performance. "Do they put you in the safe, with the jewelry, or lay you on the shelves with gowns and coats?"

"No, sir. I live up stairs with Mr. Levi. Father will come though, in a few days, with the money, and redeem me."

All this as seriously as if it was the commonest thing in the world for distressed fathers to pawn their children, and keep the duplicates in their waistcoat pockets.

"Have you ever been in pawn before, Miss Nellie Lee?"

"Oh, yes, sir. Father painted the 'Seven Sisters of Ephesus' with what he got on me last fall."

This was really more than I could stand. I lay back on the half-bottomed sofa and roared with laughter. The deposit stood before me with a grave and patient demeanor, neither surprised at my merriment nor apparently thinking that there was anything at all singular in her position.

"You say that you play chess," I said at last, checking my merriment by a great effort, out of respect for the fair and beautiful eyes that I saw before me. "Would you like to play a game?"

"Oh, yes!" answered the deposit: "I should like it very much. You can't think."
